Army, Navy and Air Force News

Branch 99 and the Duke of Edinburgh Unit joined forces to give whatever assistance they could to help, in making the first Belleville Winter Carnival the big success it deserved. Their combined Color Party made a brave and colorful spectacle with their flags fluttering in the gentle breeze as they marched along with the torchlight parade. On Saturday morning a pancake breakfast was served in the Auditorium by the Alouette Club which was really enjoyed by a large crowd of both grown ups and children.

In the afternoon the vets and their families joined in with other Belleville citizens in the fun and excitement of the carnival. The Veterans had quite a day on Sunday. They had donated the prizes for the children's races at Zwick's Island Park and took the responsibility of transportation, organizing and running off the various events and supervising the rides around the island for the children.

Two big events this week that members should attend. They are the general meeting on Thursday and the annual Valentine's Dance on Friday. The entertainment committee has gone all out to make this a memorable evening with plenty of prizes and excellent entertainment. You can't miss it.

A gentle nudge that the 1970 dues deadline is getting near so if you have forgotten to pay them, you should do it now and keep in good standing. The membership chairman or stewards will be glad to assist you.

The new notice board for the sick list, a very nice piece of work, has been hung next to the membership board, but it had a sad inauguration. Cde. J. Samain, a long time valued member and a steward for over a decade, passed away last Wednesday and was the first name placed on the board. The president and members extend their sincere sympathy to his family in their sorrow. There is also quite a hospital list. In the Belleville General Hospital are comrades A. Bartlett, 713, A. Brown, 304, E. Scott, 718, B. Feather, (intensive care), J. Fisher, (no visitors). In Kingston Hospital are cdes. J. McKenna and F. Armstrong, while K. McLeod is hospitalized in Toronto.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Fat Should Not Be Called Slobs

I have received many letters from people distressed about their obesity who signed their long laments, "Fat Slob," I've also heard that characterization from a fortunately thin neighbor speaking of an unfortunate obese individual.

Now, you may think that the euphemism "obese" is just as bad as "fat slob" — but of the two, I prefer the former. The overweight state is really a disease — or the beginning of disease — so why not call it obesity, a respectable scientific term? I think that if we look upon it as a disease there will be less tendency to relegate overweight people to the slob category.

Although not the common reason for obesity, some get that way because of some glandular ailment. Something wrong with the thyroid or the pituitary glands.

Others have been born with an insatiable "appestat" — the appetite regulator in the brain that provokes the need for second helpings, extra trips to the refrigerator during TV commercials, rampages in the cookie jar and the inability to say nay to a beckoning box of chocolate candies.

And so many, as you must know by now, are the victims of obestiy because they are the servants of their emotions. Whenever one is tense occasionally, one recalls how satisfying it is to eat and forget. When one is tense all day long, it is easy to understand why such a person eats and eats and eats.

Blame it on the oral satisfaction and emotional satisfaction of regression to childhood or to anything else. The fact is, overeating is often an expression of a need to neutralize some serious and chronic disaffection.

I tell people not to think of slobs". Rather, to consider them as being in need of sympathy and understanding. As you must have heard, all fat people are not happy people.

For Mr. M.: A hydrocele is a collection of fluid in a sac surrounding the testicle. Sometimes aspiration (drawing off the fluid with a needle and syringe) will take care of it. But if it keeps recurring because the fluid is not reabsorbed, then surgery may be necessary.

For Mrs. I.: It is true that the drug known as aminophylline may be given by rectal suppository. It is effectual but acts more slowly than if given intravenously. I agree that at times it seems miraculous in stopping the difficult breathing during a severe asthmatic or heart attack. It works by relieving the bronchial spasm.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Where is DMSO? A few years back it was touted as the wonder drug of all wonder drugs. It was supposed to be a cure for burns, infections, arthritis, all kinds of pain and dozens of other symptoms. It seems to have disappeared from the earth. — Mr. S.

Comment: So do many other people (including doctors), wonder what happened to it. As of this time, it is being investigated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. It seems there were some questionable allergic reactions to its use at the time. But many doctors are becoming impatient. They wonder why it is taking so long for the government to reach a decision. Incidentally, DMSO stands for dimethyl sulfoxide.

Strictly Personal

Specialists Dull People

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A correspondent from Montana wants to know how I can write a serious column about world starvation on one day, and on the next day "a piece of fluff with no lasting significance."

I find no difficulty in justifying this change of tone and pace and depth. I am not always interested in serious subjects, and human life is a multi-colored thing. We need a decent set of priorities in our values — so that important matters must come first — but, at the same time, we cannot keep pounding at the big brass drum every day.

And the reason I called this column "Strictly Personal" when I began it more than a quarter-century ago, was that I was tired of the categorization of columns into separate subject matter — Washington, foreign affairs, Broadway, Hollywood, humor, or what have you.

This is an artificial fragmentation of the personality, and a falsification of the full spectrum of human events. I wanted the column to reflect, quite naturally and honestly, what I was feeling and thinking on any given day — and not have to write a ponderous think-piece on the "state of the nation" when I wanted to talk about children's toys or the peculiarity of French idioms.

We are already too much of a nation of specialists, each locked into his own little slot, concerned only in that which appeals to our pecuniary or professional interests. This narrowness and rigidity of specialization makes for dull people, not for serious ones — for truly serious people have a sense of balance and a cultivated curiosity about many diverse things in this strange, frightening, wonderful world of ours.

It would bore me insufferably to have to write on one general subject every day — no matter how vast or significant that subject might be — and I dare say it would bore my readers just as much. We are creatures of many levels and moods and facets, and this is the great charm (and value) of the human species; while other animals — with a few delightful exceptions — merely pursue their grim goals of hunting and eating and sleeping.

It is wicked to be persistently trivial in this portentous age, but it is playing just as false with human nature to be ponderous and solemn, as politicians pretend to be, who are generally capable of no greater degree of reflection than wondering where to scratch next.

Indeed, the best and most effective teachers I have known—men like Robert Hutchins, for instance — have understood the profound difference between true seriousness and mere solemnity, and have never been afraid to seem frivolous when the occasion called for it.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 11

Your birthday today: Your long-term trends run into collision with intangible but nonetheless real obstacles, and something has to give. Success depends on finding a broader more fluent range of personal expression.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You again hear casual advice from outsiders about people you care about — hold onto what you really feel. Double - check your calendar for appointments, etc. There is good news in the family somewhere this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Get an early start, put in consistent effort which features planning. The evening brings some sprightly fun with unorthodox friends. Find a good party or give one yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Friends drift into controversy. Stay out of it if possible. It is better to concentrate on the things you do alone or with little direct co-operation. People you care about may tease you a bit.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Take a conservative approach to life today, from light diet to deferring financial moves.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Discretion is the better part of family relations now. Travel is probably inconvenient as well. Dig into your backlog of incomplete correspondence, accounts, budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Crosscurrents of mood and other people's flippant comment create a restless atmosphere. Dress in good style, cover your feelings with a humorous surface—as others are doing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Home life comes under favorable influences today. Thoughtfulness advances career efforts very nicely. It is not often that you get a chance to help Cupid, but you have the opportunity to do so now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You may have to declare your real sentiments about both people and business deals. Partners must know just where you stand before new business can be developed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The temptation is to let people, especially children, have things too easily. Nobody, however, seems generous toward you at the moment. What you do to strengthen home relationships is worth the sacrifice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): If other people skip their appointments or disappoint you, realize they may be faced with matters beyond their ability to control for the time being. Phone and mail serve better than physical travel now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Expect a shift of direction in your routines or a job change. Your creative ability comes up for review, challenge, and perhaps praise. Use the most forthright expression you can within existing circumstances.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You may not feel much like social activity, so cater to your need for solitude. Meditate. Where you must continue close co-operation, attend to it without personal comment.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and, most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Individual Returns To Basic Faith

The trend of the 1970s will centre around a return to a kind of "basic faith" on the part of the individual, and an attempt for greater understanding with others holding differing beliefs.

That was the prediction made by Rev. Matthew Meehan and directed at an audience of representatives of eight east end churches at the seventh annual Brotherhood Week banquet held last night at St. Joseph's Parish Hall.

The banquet brought together men of all religious denominations and their ministers, priests and rabbis to hear Fr. Meehan speak about the future of brotherhood.

Introduced by Rt. Rev. J. A. Carley as a "teacher of communications" with a wide ranging experience in brotherhood work, Fr. Meehan asked his audience whether the progress of brotherhood had come to an impasse.

"I feel both brotherhood and ecumenism have come to the stage where people have come back to the basic faith their parents had," he said, indicating that in this "secularized" world, "we have come to be more united than ever before".

Looking back at the 1960s, Fr. Meehan remarked that never before have charity and kindness been more prevalent in relations between members of different religions.

"We have come a long way in removing bias that was so much a part of inter-religious relationships," he added.

Fr. Meehan voiced the uncertainty that plagues thinking members of Christian and Jewish communities, emphasizing that the phenomenon of the present day can be found in "levels of belief" prevalent in every church.

"Now there are labels for our differences, even within the same religion — liberal conservative and radical. Sometimes because these differences are so strong, often a Catholic will feel more at home with a Lutheran", he continued.

At each of these varying levels of belief "each of us falls into one of these categories, one that wants no changes made, a few, or all.

"This is why we are often separated from one another so drastically even though we are members of the same religion".

"That is why in years to come, we must urge all theologians and scientists to continue their research, but at the same time, to give us deeper insights into what is certain. At the same time, we must bring back the sense of the sacred into our lives."

Fr. Meehan stressed the importance of what he called "healing the wounds" within each faith, while working toward unity and greater understanding with each other.

Attending the banquet and bringing greetings from the city of Belleville was Mayor J. R. Scott, who called the brotherhood banquet "a wonderful gesture", and urged members to continue "this work of understanding." He was accompanied by mayor of the week Miss Donna Hutchinson, a student at Quinte Secondary.

Next year's Brotherhood Banquet will be held at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue, with its members acting as host. This year's banquet was put on by members of St. Joseph's Church.

Business to Apply Brakes on Prices

County Kraft Mill Likely

TORONTO (CP) — A huge new hardwood kraft mill may be built in the Bancroft area this year as increasing world demand spurs interest in further development of Ontario forests, Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle said today.

He declined to reveal the name of the company involved but said it is a large firm already active in the province.

Federal and provincial governments are "leaning over backwards" to encourage the company to locate in an area where economic growth is slow, he told a news conference.

Mr. Brunelle, commenting on an Ontario Economic Council report on forest policies, said he expects several new mills to be opened in the 1970s.

He was critical of the federal government's industrial incentives program because it does not extend assistance to primary industries.

The Bancroft area of eastern Ontario is the only forest district in Canada with the quality and quantity of wood required for the new mill, he said. If it is not built there it will be built in the United States.

It would provide jobs for about 1,000 persons and have economic effects as far away as Pembroke on the Ottawa River.

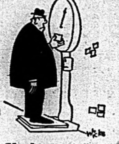
Heavy Arms Not Needed By Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no direct military threat to Canada and therefore the country has no defence problem, Maj.-Gen. F. S. Carpenter said Tuesday.

He told the Commons external affairs subcommittee on peacekeeping and the United Nations that Canada's traditional ideas about defence "have to be discarded."

Gen. Carpenter, 55, retired last December after 32 years in the Canadian Armed Forces.

He said Canada has no need for heavy armed forces and should eliminate them in favor of lighter forces extremely well-trained in technical matters.



'You have an inflation problem!'

Comparable Curbs On Wages Essential

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business Editor

OTTAWA (CP) — When provincial premiers meet here starting Monday for talks with Prime Minister Trudeau, they will have before them a priority item entitled Closing Statement of the National Conference on Price Stability.

It represents the consensus reached after two days of tough talk and much discussion by 240 business and professional leaders with members of the prices and incomes commission.

It contains the broad agreement of business to hold down price increases for the balance of 1970 as part of a program of restraint to fight inflation. In general, the aim is to keep price increases below cost increases.

While the agreement in some respects goes beyond what the commission sought when it called the conference, Dr. John Young, commission and conference chairman, said it is "not an end, but just a beginning."

The big question still is how organized labor—absent from the conference at its own request—will react to any call for moderation of wage demands.

The statement put it this way:

"While the groups represented at the conference are prepare to take an initiative as a contribution to a broad program of restraint, they emphasize that an indispensable requirement for the control of inflation is a comparable measure of restraint by wage and salary earners, by governments at all levels and indeed by everyone."

An early indication of labor's reaction came from a spokesman for United Steelworkers of America who said a major failure of the agreement was that it did not require companies to obtain advance approval for price increases. And he feared that companies would use the agreement as a "patriotic reason" to resist wage increases in contract talks.

The conference statement said business would agree to hold down prices "if called upon."

Dr. Young now will take the document to the federal-provincial representatives and it will be up to them to make the formal call on industry.

Then the next move will be to seek labor support. Dr. Young said he couldn't say how this would be done. He preferred to have the results of the conference digested first by the public.

Robarts Fears for Future If Tax Plan Not Altered

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts expressed "deepening doubts" Tuesday about the economic future of Canada if the federal white paper on tax reform is put into effect in its present form.

"Three months ago a question asked about the kind of Canada we will find in 1980 would have brought an enthusiastic response from every Canadian," he said in a speech to the Financial Executives' Institute.

"Today many of us have deepening doubts - - - Many of us share a fundamental anxiety about the effects of the federal proposals for tax reform."

In what he called a "contribution to the national debate," the premier attacked the white paper proposals for a capital gains tax, elimination of the lower rate of tax on corporation incomes, the reduction in personal and corporate savings and the "stacking" of estate taxes on top of a capital gains tax.

But he reserved his strongest criticism for an approach to reform which "will effectively pre-empt the use of the income tax field."

"The federal paper almost totally ignores the fiscal needs of the provinces and the municipalities," he said. "By claiming so much more revenue it will leave virtually no room in this field of taxation for the rapidly-growing provincial-municipal requirements."

Tax yields from the white paper proposals will "be far greater than the federal government has estimated.

"If our calculations are correct, and they have not been seriously challenged, Canadians will pay $1,300,000,000 more in taxes when the new system reaches maturity than they are paying under the present system - - - This figure represents a full 12 per cent increase over the present yields of personal and corporation income taxes.

"Never in Canadian history, except in wartime, has such a tremendous tax increase been proposed or implemented. Nor can I recall any government in Canada proposing an increase of this magnitude without indicating how this addiional revenue will be spent."

Mr. Robarts said that "if the federal tax proposals are forced through Parliament as they stand, I would hesitate to predict the state of our economy at the end of the decade."

"I am deeply apprehensive - - - The government of Ontario questions whether Canada is sufficiently mature to contemplate this type of unduly complex tax treatment at this stage in its development."

E. J. Benson Defends Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister E. J. Benson defended his white paper on taxation here Tuesday night but got a rough reception from 500 persons loaded with statistics.

Mr. Benson indicated he was determined to get rid of the split rate of corporate tax.

Individuals turned to incorporation to save personal income tax.

"They take out of the corporation enough to live on and pay 21-per-cent tax on the rest. Then they put this money into the shares of corporations and accumulate quite substantial amounts."

"How many are doing this?" someone shouted from the audience.

Prices Conference Ends

Virus Proves So Deadly Doctors Stop Research

NEW YORK (AP) — The Times say United States doctors have discovered a virus from Nigeria so deadly that they have stopped research on it.

Two American missionary nurses in the African country and a laboratory worker at Yale University have died, the newspaper says.

Two other Americans, infected with the virus called Lassa Fever after the Nigerian village where it was first reported, are still alive.

The Times says the episode illustrates the hazards of virology research which have led to at least 107 deaths from laboratory-acquired infections—most of them since 1950.

Lassa Fever produces a temperature as high as 107 degrees; mouth ulcers; a skin rash with tiny hemorrhages; pneumonia; infection of the heart leading to cardiac failure; kidney damage and severe muscle aches.

The article gives this account of the virus:

The two nurses who died were Laura Wine and Charlotte Shaw of the Church of the Brethren.

The nurse still alive, Miss Lily Pinneo of Rochester, N.Y., was flown from Lassa to Lagos, capital of Nigeria, and then to Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital here. She was isolated and is under the care of U.S. public health service physicians.

During nine weeks of hospital treatment, she lost 28 pounds and almost all her hair. She had to be fed intravenously for five weeks.

In June, Dr. Jordi Casals, who was conducting the research at Yale, became ill and was taken to Columbia-Presbyterian. Miss Pinneo was flown back from her Rochester home and two units of her blood taken. Plasma containing the antibodies she had developed to fight the disease was isolated and injected into Dr. Casals.

He was cured and returned to Yale to continue his studies.

The research was stopped when one of his aides, Juan Roman, contracted the disease and died while on vacation.

'Skiers' Leave Bus in Boston

Hundreds of Young U.S. 'Skiers' To Sail for Cuba Via Canada

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — About 500 United States youths are reported en route here by chartered bus to board a Cuban freighter scheduled to arrive at 4 p.m. today.

A further 212 students are reported to be aboard the ship, returning home after helping with the Cuban sugar cane harvest since November.

Gerald Elkin, president of R. C. Elkin Ltd., local agent for the Cuban-registered freighter Luis Arcos Bergnes, said Tuesday he was told by shipping officials in Montreal that the youths were to board the ship Thursday.

It was reported in Boston that hundreds of youths, calling themselves ski masters, had gathered from around the U.S. to prepare for what they said was a ski holiday in New Brunswick.

All State Bus Corp., a Brooklyn, N.Y., transport broker, said the ski master group had paid "more than $20,000" to charter buses from San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago, Madison, Wis., Cleveland, Detroit, Washington and New York.

A company spokesman said 11 buses were to leave Boston today for a trip through Maine to Canada.

A Greyhound Bus Co. official said the youths, many of whom carried sleeping bags and knapsacks, were en route to Cuba to help with sugar harvesting but one of the group was quoted as denying the statement.

"We are just going skiing in Canada, but other than that we don't have anything to say to you." No skis were in evidence.

One bus carrying 44 students was reported to have headed for Boston after being denied entry to Canada at Windsor, Ont., because, an immigration department spokesman said, the occupants were "not considered bona fide non-immigrants."

The students travelling here aboard the freighter were reported to have left Havana Friday after being given a mass emotional farewell by Cuban government and Communist party leaders as well as thousands of workers and school children.

Teaching Categories Issue

Quinte Separate School Board, Teachers Still in Deadlock

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Differences between the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board and its 189 teachers, which almost led to a mass teachers' walkout last Dec. 31, appear still to be far from settled.

Although salaries were never an issue, and agreement has been reached on most points, trustees and teachers remain deadlocked on the matter of definition of levels — the certificates required before a teacher is placed in one of five categories that determine salaries.

Members of the provincial executive of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association will meet with the board Feb. 16 in an attempt to break the deadlock, Frank Griffin, deputy executive director of the provincial Association said last night.

At an "information meeting" for all teachers in the system, held last night at St. Joseph's Parish Hall in Belleville, the teachers empowered the provincial executive to act for them in further discussion with the board and to take all necessary steps to reach an agreement on the definition-of-levels clause in the contract.

Present at the rally, presided over by Miss Theresa Durkin, president of the local OECTA branch were Mr. Griffin, John Kuchinac, OECTA provincial president James Reynolds and Ed Alexander, both administrative assistants with OECTA and more than 70 teachers, including 14 teaching nuns.

Poor road conditions prevented many teachers from outlying areas attending, Miss Durkin said later.

Last night's session, Mr. Griffin said afterward, "was an informational meeting of the members of the OECTA provincial executive with the teachers to tell them what has transpired since we last met with them Dec. 2."

The tangled history of the dispute between the separate school board and teachers began last May. At that time, teachers rejected the 1969-70 contract on the grounds it had never been carried to the entire teaching body for ratification.

OESTA's provincial executive was called in by the local teachers' group. In a subsequent rally of teachers in the fall the decision was made to resign en masse Dec. 31 unless agreement was reached.

At this point, the provincial executive and the board began talks. Eventually they decided to set up a committee of three trustees, three teachers and two "resource people." Mr. Allore and Mr. Griffin.

The threatened mass resignation was called off and the joint teacher-trustee committee met Dec. 17 for what Mr. Griffin described as "a very fruitful and productive meeting".

The teachers decided they would accept the 1969-70 salary contract, but added a clause, the crux of the present disagreement.

This clause recommended new definition of levels and interpretations, compassionate leave policies, responsibility allowances for principals, vice-principals and certain specialist teachers.

"The joint-teacher-trustee committee came to unanimous agreement on the definition of levels from one to five," Mr. Griffin said last night.

Later, the board accepted the compassionate leave policies and paid the responsibility allowances to designated personnel.

"But at a regular board meeting Dec. 18 and Jan. 14, the board came to no decision about accepting the committee's recommendations," Mr. Griffin said. "On Jan. 28, the board passed a motion, moved and seconded by trustees Rev. L. Casartelli and Rev. W. Hamilton, that it had studied letters and correspondence on the subject and considered implementation in whole or in part, but for future salary negotiations only."

The teachers have asked that the new definition of levels be made retroactive to Sept. 1, 1969.

"Now there is an apparent breakdown as to what the meetings resolved," continued Mr. Griffin. "The teachers feel that the board motion by Fathers Casartelli and Hamilton is not in keeping with the spirit of the meeting which led to the teachers withdrawing their threatened resignations. To clarify the whole situation, the provincial executive of OECTA is meeting with the board Feb. 16."

"Every board in Ontario decides how to define the levels into which teachers are placed by mutual agreement between the trustees and the teachers," Mr. Giffin said. "This board has allowed no negotiations."

The separate school board employs teachers in five levels, and also some with letters of permission to teach but with no certificate.

Salaries range from $5,200 a year for a beginning teacher just out of Teachers' College with a standard 1 certificate (level 1) to $11,400 a year for an experienced level 5 teacher, one who holds a university degree, a permanent teaching certificate, and certain specialist qualifications.

Under the expanded definition of levels, the teachers are calling for other certificates — in music, for example — to be accepted in lieu of standard teaching certificates for placement at some levels.

E. J. Buckley, chairman of the separate school board said this morning he could not comment on the financial implications of the teachers' demand.

"Our board is uncertain as to what the long range implications are and we want further enlightenment," he said. "We are prepared to study the definition of levels on a much deeper scale than it has been presented to us up to now."

Provincial Advisors Meet

Teachers employed by the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board met at a mass rally last night to discuss contract differences with the board — a disagreement simmering since last May. Flanking Miss Theresa Durkin, president of the local teachers' group, are members of the provincial executive of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association — James Reynolds, (left), Frank Griffin, John Kuchinac and Ed Alexander.

Nor has she travelled far,
Just entered God's eternal home,

—Never forgotten by the Farrell grandchildren.

HARPER — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Harold R. Harper who passed away February 11th, 1969.

A link gone from our chain,
But though we're parted for a while,
We know we'll meet again,
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day we know not when,
We shall meet in a better land,
Never to part again.

Winter's Back So Is Slush, Driving Poor

Winter returned to the Belleville area late last night and the bad weather is expected to continue until late tonight.

Driving conditions became hazardous last night when wet snow fell in the Belleville area turning roads and sidewalks into slushy bogs.

This morning, drivers found lower temperatures and approximately two inches of snow had made matters worse. The area also received .15 inches of rainfall last night.

High winds mixed with the snow have added to the storm conditions and in areas north of Belleville there is a heavy drifting situation.

Tweed reported six and a half inches of snow this morning and a small amount of rain. Bancroft had seven inches of snow. White Lake had sustained the heaviest amount of snowfall with 10 and a half inches.

Temperatures have still remained on the warm side but according to the duty forecaster at CFB Trenton, colder air will be upon us tonight.

The mercury will drop to five degrees tonight and tomorrow's high will only be 15 degrees.

Tomorrow will also be characterized by heavy winds up to 30 miles per hour and a few sunny periods. There is a possibility of snow flurries.

A spokesman for the Brighton Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said this morning that, though there have been no serious accidents in the last 24 hours, driving conditions were poor and the Macdonald - Cartier highway was snow-covered, with heavy drifting. He said secondary roads were in poor condition but passable.

Council Is Firm On Dump Issue

AMELIASBURG — Township council last night stood firm behind its decision to locate a garbage disposal area on township-owned property situated on lot 71 on the township's third concession.

A delegation of irate residents from close proximity to the new dumping grounds voiced objections ranging from the possibility of their property being devalued to fears that rodents would thrive and multiply on the garbage.

One complaint focused attention on the possibility of pollution of a fresh water spring on property adjoining the former township gravel pit which is the Ameliasburg dump location. Members of the delegation informed council the spring is a source of household supply.

Council assured the delegation that danger was remote since the landfill operation would be carried out at a distance of 500 feet from the spring. A spokesman for the citizens' delegation indicated the residents using the water from the spring would keep a check on its quality. In the event impurities were found, the necessary action would be taken.

Councillors indicated they were satisfied no changes would occur to impair health, and authorized a testing sample from the spring to establish its properties before there was any chance of any contamination from refuse.

"Have the matter of deciding the site put to a vote," -gus' ing the site put to a vote," suggested one objector.

Councillor Arnold Wetherall agreed to go along with the idea.

"But you will find 3,000 - against - 10 favors the place we picked," he said.

Councillor Lyle Vanclief pointed out the electors had empowered council to make decisions for a year, and if they were not satisfied, it was their prerogative to vote them out of office at the end of the term. He insisted he was resolved to back council's selection in this case.

Reeve Russell Thompson observed "it seems inevitable new councils are called upon to make decisions unpopular with some residents. I suppose this (selection of garbage disposal area) can be classified with the group everyone doesn't approve," he explained.

The township's new garbage collection and disposal service goes into effect Feb. 16. On Thursday this week collection will be made by Herman Lucas, who will cover the route for the last time as a private operator.

Centre for Retarded Moves

By LINDA GELDART

Due to a pressing need for more facilities and trainees, the training centre for retarded adults has moved to a larger location on Station Street, past president John Ross of the Belleville and District Association for Retarded Children told a recent meeting.

The information was disclosed at a "getting to know you" session sponsored by the association held this week.

Organizers say the purpose of the get together as an opportunity for both parents and interested citizens to find out more about what the organization is doing and meet the executive.

"Many people feel the work of the association begins and ends with the school for retarded children at 281 John Street, but this is far from the case, since the Hastings County School Board is now responsible for its operation," emphasized Mr. Ross.

"Adult recreation is another program with which the association attempts to deal," he said, adding there is a camp seminar taking place this weekend at Bolton under the auspices of the Ontario Association.

Explaining that a camp experience is beneficial for retarded children, Mr. Ross indicated that Eastern Ontario is limited in its summer camp facilities, and a campsite is urgently needed for this end of the province.

The new slate of officers for 1970 is president, Botting; recording secretary, Mrs. Alex Glover; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Grace Pearson, and treasurer, L. J. Soden-

Township Warns

Court Appeal Possible If School Taxes Go Up

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

Taxes are like the weather — everybody talks about them but no one does anything about them.

Except the reeve of Herschel township. If the education tax goes up this year, Kenneth Fisk and his township council intend to take the matter to court.

In a letter read at the last meeting of the Hastings county board of education, Reeve Fisk said his township is getting out a tax bill early this year — and another later. "We are basing our tax on last year's school rate," he wrote. "We are hoping that your board will not have to exceed this amount. If you do we will have to appeal to the courts to bring in a decision."

Herschel's education tax went up by 24.1 mills or 48 per cent in 1969. In his letter, the reeve said the provincial equalization factor used in calculating the tax rate is not "realistic". In 1969 it was set up by the province at 13 for Herschel.

"I believe the board used this factor last year and we would ask it be not used this year," the reeve wrote. "For the next two years we cannot appeal our factor so we are appealing to your board to try to make this right".

"Herschel township is mostly summer cottages and we feel we should be able to give them something for their money besides schools of which they get no benefit," noted Reeve Fisk.

His letter went on to outline some of the problems confronting the elected representatives of the northern township.

"We have three major bridges," he wrote. "Two went out last year and we expect to have to put a new one in where the other one is this year. The one bridge was an insurance deal where a heavy machine broke it down. This could go on for some time before we get our money out of it. These bridges are all on roads that your school bus has to travel. In fact one we had to put a Bailey bridge on last fall to let the school buses get over it. This cost us $5,000 and we will have to pay interest on this money until some time this summer."

But adjustment of the provincial equalization factor is beyond the power of the board of education.

In replying to Reeve Fisk's letter, the board noted that "whatever may be the attitude of the board and its member trustees, the board must do what is legally required."

DDT Collections Now Underway

Reports from pick-up points indicate the collection of DDT, which began this week is proceeding as planned.

Belleville's No. 1 Fire Station on Dundas Street East reports that 10 to 12 lots have been collected. They have all been packed so as not to cause spillage and the containers have been clearly marked denoting that they contain DDT.

The response at the Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit in Picton has been slow thus far with very few packages being brought in.

Other pick-up points are: The municipal office in Tweed; the basement of the Deseronto town hall, council chambers in Madoc, Marmora firehall, the municipal office in Stirling, Sidney Township's municipal office, the general store in Deloro, and in Trenton the public works yard on Meyers St. and the health unit office on Quinte St.

Don Raddon, provincial government pesticides control officer in Belleville said this morning the DDT will be picked up after the Feb. 20 deadline and disposed of at selected sites in the area.

New School Will Be Topic

PICTON (Staff) — Topic for a panel discussion between Picton Kiwanians and members of the Prince Edward County Board of Education this month, will be the proposed new elementary secondary school in Ameliasburg.

Earlier the open team teaching program was suggested as the subject of a panel talk but Kiwanians rejected the idea.

Discussing the tentatively-planned school on Feb. 23 will be four representatives of the Prince Edward County Board of Education and members of the Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Rotary clubs. Town and county councillors also may be invited to attend the meeting.

Quality of Life

We hear a lot these days about improving the "quality of life," and the term is an appropriate one in trying to determine how to bring about a better society.

Quality of life is many things in many countries. In Canada it could be our great mineral resources and wide open spaces — yet we have pollution and urban crowding; and for all the nation's vastness there is no easy access to areas that are truly away-from-it-all.

Quality of life? Yes it can be elusive enough. Which would you prefer? The life of a young executive in Bay Street, Toronto, with all that concrete soaring from the hard pavement outside . . . or the rugged, healthy and individualistic work of a sheep farmer in New Zealand? The foreman of a gold mine in South Africa, or the manager of a hotel amid the lakes and mountain's of Ireland's Connemara, mystical and remote out there on the country's western seaboard? A man of very great wealth, like John Paul Getty, or Aristotle Onassis, or a longshoreman and philosopher like San Francisco's Eric Hoffer?

Travel is important, but not everyone has the means of doing so. School can go so far — and then the young man and woman are on their own. But if they can make themselves aware of the world environment, regard themselves as citizens of the universe, they will find that many of the petty concerns of their own small circle fade into insignificance.

Prime Minister Trudeau had some wise words on this theme in a recent discussion with delegates to the Canadian Student Liberals' national convention. On that sad, dreary issue of marijuana, he said that speaking for himself "the world is so exciting I get my high from inside."

Some other valuable observations by the Prime Minister on the same occasion — "The only alternatives to U.S. investment are a lower standard of living or acceptance of capital from other sources;" and in a rejection of limits on United States professors in Canadian universities, "I'd hate to see the universities putting quotas on brains."

In Canada, then, we must take a broad view. In searching for quality of life we must avail ourselves of the best the universe has to offer; at the same time we must rid ourselves of petty nationalism and petty mindedness.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation could play a much greater role in this regard than it does. Television, it seems to us, is at as low an ebb in program content as at any time in its history. Entertainment is shallow, mediocre. News programs and political commentary are biased if not blatantly favorable to alien creeds and potential enemies. Often they concern themselves with trivia — like a recent Weekend news program which made reference to the fact Barbra Streisand wore a hat to the performance at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa. Another sequence had to do with "mod" games available in Toronto — once it was Monopoly, now they have offerings like "Adultery," and "Ulcers." And, of course, the announcer had to end it all with the asinine "Anyone for Tennis" bit.

Canadians are paying for such nonsense with their tax dollars. We deserve better from the public corporation. Our young people could benefit so much from programs about the world at large — programs about people and places overseas, programs that give a balanced, non-political look at how others live.

Less Drinking?

Whether or not drugs have superseded alcohol as a way of avoiding reality is hard to say, but it does seem as if less is heard these days of alcohol as a factor in auto accidents.

In addition the breathalyser test probably is having considerable influence in reducing the amount of drinking. Nevertheless, recklessness at the wheel, often as a result of drinking, is still a problem.

The words of a 21-year-old timekeeper in Killarney, Manitoba, who had his licence suspended for six months, are a case in point: "I was driving a bunch of my friends home from a party. There was booze involved — isn't there always? We had had a few drinks and I was pushing it pretty good — I don't know how fast, when the police came after us. . ."

The young man's account appeared in a Star Weekly report on the experiences of people who have been barred from driving. Back on the road now, the Manitoba youth regards the incident as an isolated one and says he drives much as before, somewhat faster than average. This, he feels, does not make him a bad driver.

Perhaps not — but if as we believe, alcohol is becoming less a factor in auto accidents, so much the better.

Beware the Mob and Political Dogma

Quebec Reminds Immigrant of Growth of Fascism

Letter to
The Montreal Gazette

Much has been said lately in these pages about the typical or ideal immigrant, as if this kind of talk could be any more meaningful than a conversation about the typical or ideal Canadian. Migration is possible only because at the back of the immigrant's mind there is this notion that all of humanity is an open society and must be so. As a rule he will prefer to emigrate to areas where institutions, traditions and customs have least managed to interfere with this openness.

My own reason for coming to Canada was quite trivial at the time. Having lived in big cities far too long, I began to have a craving for nature. So I put my finger on a spot of the map which promised what I was looking for. And this is where I headed, after leaving England. The idea that Canada might have plans for me never entered my mind. It would have certainly horrified me, possibly prevented me from coming. Who wants to think of himself as an object of social engineering?

As a rule the immigrant takes it for granted that the people are the same everywhere, and all kinds. But coming to Quebec he should be warned, not of language barriers, but of the presence of other taboos. He should be prepared to be met by a bewildering cacophony of what sounds very much like the old discarded stuff of the bad European days. There is an element in Quebec society which is trying to pass out a new opium for the people; which turns out to be the old myth of the national state, the illusion of national personality and destiny. He should be prepared to hear of people substituting historical prophecy for conscience, playing on the man without faith who is forever worried that he might remember that all this propaganda in Europe achieved only one thing: to educate the intelligentsia to intellectual dishonesty by making it easy for them to discard personal responsibility.

Coming originally from Germany I might be over-suspicious of catch - phrases like 'national spirit and culture', and all the political jargon that goes back to Hegel, the father of fascism and marxism, who saw in the state and the nation the march of God through the world. I always remember my father who, whenever the German national anthem came over the radio, would call out 'Listen, the Kaiser is going to the bathroom.' The immigrant should be prepared for the presence of tribalists in this country, who labor under the illusion of their own closed society. He might find it useful to regard the Quebec separatists the way he has become accustomed to regard the Roman Curia.

It is merely sanity to realize that there are no institutional ways of making a man happy. The best citizen anywhere is the man who follows his conscience, and not some collective will or phantom. Especially in our scientific age (another great myth) it would be worth while to listen to Democritus who said that 'the wise man belongs to all countries, for the home of a great soul is the whole world.' He was, already in his days, answering the claims that the tribe, the collective, stands higher than the individual. In 'The Open Society and Its Enemies' K. R. Popper showed that "nobody has ever been able to explain what he means by a nation, in a way that could be used as a basis for practical politics. The principle of the national state is a myth. It is an irrational, a romantic and Utopian dream of naturalism and of tribal collectivism". But maybe, Rene Levesque would like to try, all the same.

I should confess that I have shamelessly plagiarized Popper's great classic which was first published in 1945 when I was first living in England. I recommend it to the native and to the immigrant alike. The two volumes are easily obtainable as paperbacks in the Harper Torchbook edition.

'Y' Provides Wide Range of Activity for Many Groups

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This opportunity to reply to recent letters about the Belleville Family YMCA is appreciated. It is evident that we of the "Y" have not kept many of the people of Belleville sufficiently well informed that they are able to make positive judgments about the "Y" and its programs and services.

It has been suggested by Mr. W. Hockley and "Area Citizen" in their letters that the "Y" should operate its campaign or operating fund subsidy requirements independent of the United Community Fund. It is possible that the Belleville "Y" could do so. However, we of the "Y" wish to work together with others for the good of the total community. To operate a separate "Y" campaign would not work toward that end, in the opinion of the writer. There is a great need for united community action to meet the needs of all. A separate "Y" campaign would be a force in dividing the community rather than uniting it to make the best use of community resources of manpower and money. Community investment in helping people become and remain healthy, better able to get along with others and develop leadership skills and other benefits of "Y" activities — is an investment in the positive growth of individuals and of a healthy community. Is not this type of "preventive" constructive investment better than having to spend much larger amounts of community funds — voluntary donations or from the tax dollars — in repairing human wreckage?

In 1969 there were more than 80,000 participants in programs operated by the "Y" or in using "Y" facilities. 29.8 per cent of these were by non-members. More than half of these were free services. "Y" fees are scaled according to age with those who are unable to pay the annual membership fee able to have this fee reduced or waived. Seventy-eight children took part in the "Y" summer Day Camp without payment of a fee. Individuals and families referred to the "Y" by agencies, clergymen or others are provided with free memberships.

Programs for those with special needs have been enlarged. These included, in the past year, special activities for patients referred by doctors, children from the Retarded Children's School, young adults from the Association for Retarded Children's Association workshop. The "Y" pool is in use five mornings each week by students of Moira Secondary School as part of their physical education program. Other groups using "Y" facilities include students from Loyalist College and Quinte Secondary School, church groups, Boy Scouts and "Y" facilities are used by community groups for meetings including the ministerial association, the VON and others. Leadership training is given special emphasis. Two leaders' corps of girls and one of boys are given training and leadership experience.

Perhaps these remarks about the "Y" program will illustrate the fact that "Y" does not exist "just for the elite from the East Hill" but does provide a wide variety of programs and services for a broad cross-section of the people of Belleville and district — services which are truly community services.

The "Y" does receive the largest share of the United Community fund allocation. This is because the "Y" has a budget considerably larger than that of any other United Community Fund agency. How many others have buildings to operate or as large a staff as does the "Y"? How many others have facilities as expensive to operate as an indoor swimming pool (and the necessary heat, water, locker rooms, showers, etc.)? These facilities are used not only by "Y" members but in large measure by other groups who, in some instances by rental fees none of which covers more than 40 percent (in most cases less) than the cost to the "Y" of operating the pool.

The "Y" always has a dilemma — how to finance its operations with as little contribution support as possible yet keep its fees at a level that most people can afford. Effort is made to have participants pay a fair share of the cost of services they receive. "Y" fees are not large, when the annual fee is broken down to be seen as a cost per week. An example is the present family membership fee which is $75 (not $70 as suggested by both Mr. Hockley and "Area Citizen"). This represents less than $1.45 per week for 12 months of family healthy enjoyment or much less than many people spend on bowling, cigarettes, refreshments, theatre etc. An upward adjustment of the family membership fee is under consideration as is the institution of a three-months membership rate.

It seems too often forgotten that "Y" affairs are governed by a widely representative board of directors including men and women from industry, labor, education, from different parts of the city, and having many special skills and training. Other occupations and professions are represented as are parents and young people.

It is impossible to describe all "Y" programs and services in this letter and to answer all the questions people may have. We of the "Y" would welcome the opportunity to talk with individuals, groups or clubs to discuss "Y" programs, services and role in the community. We feel the people of Belleville can be proud of the work they have done in and through their support of "Y" work, and in particular for the fine building they have built to give service to people of the city and district. The "Y" building can be reached by those who want to do so — this is proven hundreds of times each week. It has space for development when funds are available. The foresight of those who made the decisions to provide for the future is admired by the writer.

Please let us have your suggestions of the kinds of services and programs you would like to have the "Y" provide for you, your family and friends. We'll do our best to bring these about, if it is possible.

H. A. (BERT) MESSACAR,
General Secretary,
Belleville Family YMCA.

University Students from Tweed Support Efforts to Retain School

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Former students at some time in their lives reflect on their high school days and consider the pros and cons of the cultural and educational ethos in which they were raised. The threat to close Tweed-Hungerford district high school has had a catalystic effect on some of Tweed's most recent graduates and has moved us to urgently convey to the people of Tweed, and more specifically to the Save Our School Committee, our wholehearted support in their efforts to retain their high school.

Centralized high schools which involve the bussing of a large student population from miles away, will inevitably take away from enjoyable and fulfilling experience which education at its best can provide. Overcrowded classrooms, inevitable poor student - teacher relations, tiresome travelling to and from school, and the impossibility of a well-rounded extra-curricular program can be definite deterrents to the intellectual and psychological advancement of a developing high school student.

If Tweed's high school could reach the proposed student population of 500 by a practical realignment of school boundaries it would be an ideal size for not only remedying the adverse conditions mentioned above but also for more effectively implementing those educational reforms mentioned in the recent Hall-Dennis Report.

We have been disappointed by the blatantly distasteful attempts of all our neighboring villages in trying to hasten the closing of our school. They know well the retarding economic and social effects such a move will have. Furthermore, the government of Ontario in this whole trend towards the amalgamation of boards and schools has unfortunately succumbed to the fallacy of centralization. They seem to be suffering under the gross illusion that the more expensive and the larger the school, the better the quality of the education therein. Tweed's high school has proved the antithesis of this for many years.

We have every right to oppose all forces that threaten our inalienable rights as citizens. We supposedly live in a democratic society in which the rights and wishes of the citizens are respected and protected by their government and all its agencies. If THDHS is closed, the educational arm of the government of Ontario will have proved that which many already suspect: that it has little regard for the principles on which it was founded and that it is not even an intelligent form of tyranny.

We the undersigned, applaud the efforts of the residents of the Tweed district to retain their fine high school and the strong, logical case they have presented on their own behalf. We urge the residents of Tweed district to continue their struggle!

Biafra

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I wish to commend the prime minister and the external affairs minister for their non-emotional stand on the Biafran situation, and to express disgust over the unmerciful criticism by political opponents and others. The results speak louder than words.

It is unfortunate that the Christian churchs' image has been tarnished in much of the outside world. Their relief planes might still be operating if they had defied Ojukwu instead of Gowen and had flown supplies by daylight as proposed.

Symbols of Nationhood

Quebec Gets "National" Institutions

QUEBEC (CP) — In its 1966 election program, the Union Nationale party promised to make Quebec province the national state of French-Canadians within a two-nation Canada.

If the Union Nationale has failed to negotiate the powers of a national state, it has nevertheless given Quebec some of the symbols of nationhood, the most celebrated in 1968 when the province's legislative assembly became l'Assemblee nationale du Quebec.

The national assembly of Quebec is only one of a rapidly growing number of "national" institutions established in the province under the Union Nationale.

Within the cultural affairs department there is a la Bibliotheque Nationale du Quebec, the National Library of Quebec, situated in Montreal.

Quebec also has its own national archives, a National School of Administration, set up in June to train civil servants, and a National Institute of Scientific Research.

As these appear, old symbols from the days when Canada was a British colony disappear.

Thus a legislature session in Quebec no longer opens with a speech from the throne. The speech outlining government legislative proposals is known as the "inaugural speech."

Being shelved is the provincial coat of arms, with its crown and motto Je Me Souviens—I Remember. The new symbol is a single fleur-de-lis bearing the word "Quebec."

Quebec no longer has a Queen's Printer. The man doing the job is known as the Quebec Official Publisher.

Until Jan. 1, applications for letters patent incorporating companies in the province were addressed to him. This now is handled by the new department of financial institutions.

There is persistent speculation the lieutenant-governor will stop reading session-opening speeches. The premier would use the occasion to make a "state of the nation speech."

Other changes, such as the Union Nationale's plans to make French "a national language which has priority over the others," are proving to be painful for Quebec's English-speaking minority.

English-speaking people are demanding greater guarantees for minority language rights.

The changes come under a government which has suggested in constitutional negotiations that Canada become a republic with Quebec also becoming a republic within a proposed two-nation Canadian union.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told Quebecers last June he is prepared to propose the presidential system of government by means of a referendum.

Referendum legislation now is under study within the constitutional committee of the national assembly and the whole issue will likely be revived for this year's election.

In his latest speech on the constitutional question, the 53-year-old premier described the constitutional talks as a frustrating series of monologues.

But Mr. Bertrand said the Union Nationale still thinks the negotiations are a better bet than separatism.

Professors: Mutual Funds Earned Less Than Maximum

TORONTO (CP) — The unsophisticated mutual fund investor who expects his fund's management to be all-knowing in its investment decisions is in for a shock.

Two university professors who studied the performance of 33 funds between 1960 and 1966 have found that, although they did better than the average industrial investor, the funds earned only 25 per cent of the maximum possible return to a "perfect portfolio" during the period.

Some funds earned as much as 50 per cent of the maximum possible, and the average was considerably above the 16 per cent of maximum return the royal commission on banking found was average for the individual Canadian investor.

These findings and others relating to Canadian mutual funds are published in the current issue of Canadian Chartered Accountant. The researchers were David Quirin and William Waters, both economics professors at the University of Toronto.

They conclude that much of the funds' failure to make the maximum possible profit for their shareholders is their dedication to the principle of reducing investment risk rather than that of increasing yields.

They say this is what the investor is really buying when he invests in a managed fund.

"Perfect hindsight" portfolios were selected from a random sample of 70 stocks listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange, to test the mutuals' performance.

But even the professors acknowledge that stock market forecasting is an imperfect art. Figuring out the money you could have made may be interesting, but it has not much chance of being translated into real dollars and cents in future.

The professors also reinforce the mutual funds' claim that theirs is a long-term investment that does not pay off for the in-and-outer.

The researchers show that a man who invests in mutual funds through his life insurance policy will need to wait 10 years to cash it before he will have gained on his purchases. In a fund where sales charges are prepaid he will need to wait five years. In a pay-as-you-go fund he can make a profit after a year, but it is only 1.7 per cent.

After 20 years, however, the funds' returns are brighter: 10 per cent for the pay-as-you-go, 9.5 per cent for the prepaid, and 4.9 per cent for the insurance policy funds.

"Mutual funds have provided a useful medium for equity investment by many investors whose holdings would in all likelihood be restricted to debt instruments if mutual funds were not available," the researchers write.

They say the funds generally provide yields above those earned on bonds, at "acceptable levels of risk," and are also a useful hedge against inflation.

Whatever the return on their money, Canadians are continuing to invest increasingly in mutual funds. The Canadian Mutual Funds Association, comprised of 44 of the largest funds, says shareholders increased by 20 per cent last year to a record 844,873.

They received dividends totalling $49,798,232, about $400,000 more than in 1968, and bought $832,615,999 of fund shares, a record amount and about $175,000,000 more than in 1968.

Toronto Cabbies Complain Of Air Limousine Service

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Toronto taxi drivers said Tuesday he is "suspicious" that Air Terminal Transport Ltd. is billing its customers for the five per cent it pays the government for its transportation franchise at Toronto International Airport.

Al Sadoff, representing the Metropolitan Toronto Taxicab Conference, told a hearing of the Commons standing committee on transportation and communication that Air Terminal Transport is charging higher fares than taxis.

"The company has an exclusive franchise. Why are their rates above those of the cabs? This franchise doesn't help the consumer. I'm suspicious that the five per cent this company pays the government is only tacked on to the consumer."

Taxi drivers from Toronto and Mississauga hope the three-day hearing will change a transport department ruling that taxis can take passengers to the airport from the city but ar no permitted to offer their services at the airport. They can pick up passengers only if they have been called from the city.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), a member of the committee, said he had first-hand experience that taxis are charging less for the trip from the airport.

Mr. Horner told the hearing when he could not find an Air Terminal Transport limousine on arrival at the airport he hired a Mississauga taxi "which was perhaps illegal."

He said his fare was 50 cents less than that charged other committee members taking the officially-approved limousines to the same hotel.

James Walker (L—York Centre) said he is bothered because RCMP are used to police the franchise agreement. "It's very degrading when the RCMP are given this to do."

Mr. Sadoff added that RCMP are questioning both cabbies and the passengers who had called them.

The hearing continues.

Freedom Threat Charge

MP's Statement Draws Complaint from Papers

OTTAWA (CP)—Two weekly newspapers in the riding of Murray McBride (L—Lanark and Renfrew) say an article by the MP contains a threat to freedom of the press.

Mr. McBride, in his Jan. 26 report from Parliament Hill, wrote:

"I don't know whether it is possible or not, but I would like to see the Senate do an investigation of the weekly and daily newspaper distribution of news in a constituency like Lanark and Renfrew.

In his column, Mr. McBride said most of the weeklies in his Ottawa Valley constituency use his column, but some, including the Cobden Sun and Almonte Gazette, do not.

Publisher Howard McCready of The Sun said he didn't see why the paper should give a politician free space each week to report to his constituents. The Gazette took the same position.

Mr. McCready said weeklies operate on the laws of economics and he had no free space for Liberal propaganda.

Mr. McBride conceded his letter could be interpreted as a threat, but said he had written it "tongue in cheek."

He complained that the two weeklies completely ignored him. He did not think the papers should be compelled to publish his column but he felt they had an obligation to use it sometimes.

No Stigma Attached To Poverty

WINNIPEG (CP) — Marion Meadmore lived in poverty on the Peepeekeesis Indian reserve in Saskatchewan, but her memeries are happy nnes.

"There was no stigma attached to poverty then like there is now," she says. "It was part of the way we lived, and it never really bothered us because we never believed in the materialistic society."

Mrs. Meadmore's recollections of life on the reserve—her home until she entered a pre-medicine course at the University of Manitoba—were given in an interview following her appointment to the National Council of Welfare.

"The conditions we lived in were rugged, but it never bothered us. And people really cared about you, knew all about you, and you in turn cared about them."

As Mrs. Meadmore sees it, poverty is a state of mind. "To me, the real poverty is spiritual, when people don't know who they are or what they are."

She is the mother of three boys, Glen, 12, Neil, 10, and Jim, 6. Her husband Ron, a former member of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers football tean, farms 40 miles southwest of Winnipeg.

Heart Shaped Cookies

Heart-shaped cookies for Valentine's Day are crisp and buttery. Mary Moore has added confetti-colored non pareil decorations to the dough and gives method of making cookie press cookies too.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Variation of Valentine Cookies

By MARY MOORE

There are two reasons for today's column. The major one is to give you some fancy little heart-shaped cookies to please the children on Valentine's Day. The second one is to persuade you to put your cookie press into use making professional - looking cookies. Remember that pans for cookie press cookies should be cold and ungreased or dough will not cling to them.

VALENTINE HEART COOKIES (about 5 dozen)

1 cup butter (room temperature)
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
2¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1½ tsps. lemon extract
4 tbsps. nonpareil confetti colored cake decorations (optional)

Into beater bowl measure butter and sugar and beat together until creamy and light. Beat in egg and lemon extract. Beat in sifted flour, sifted with baking powder and salt. Barely mix in colored non pareils. Chill dough. On lightly floured board roll out half of dough. Keep remainder in refrigerator. Work quickly. If dough warms up it will not handle easily. Cut out with 2" heart-shaped cutter and transfer on spatula to unbuttered cookie sheet. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 7-8 min. Do not burn these. If they are baked one minute too long they will burn.

VARIATION FOR COOKIE PRESS:

Reduce flour in above to 2½ cups. That is the only change. Dough should be stiff but pliable. If kitchen is warm you may have to chill the dough a little. Cookie sheets should be cold and unbuttered. Spoon dough into cookie press and use plate design of your choice. Stand press on cookie sheet; turn handle about ¼ turn until cookie is formed, then lift press and cookie will cut off.

(NOTE: Read all instructions in Cookie Press Recipe Book to train yourselves in cookie press baking. In it are instructions for cream puffs, eclairs, lady fingers, etc.) Bake as above. Be sure not to burn. You cannot daydream or leave the kitchen when making cookies.

WALKER'S

'Christian Attributes' Theme of Annual Meeting of Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S.

The theme for the annual meeting of the WMS of the Kingston Presbytery held in St. Columba Presbyterian Church, Belleville, on Feb. 4, was "Christian Attributes" love for God and love for fellowmen — through faith and prayer.

As the women arrived by car and bus on the cold morning a cup of coffee and bran muffin, served by the women of St. Columba was appreciated. Mrs. Lyons of Kingston, president, was in charge of the meeting. The worship service was conducted by members from Trenton WMS. Mrs. B. Hackett, president of St. Columba WMS welcomed the women to their church. The minutes of the 1969 annual meeting were adopted and approved as printed in the report. A New Year's message from Mrs. McClelland, WMS (WD) president was read. The 1st vice-president, glad tidings secretary and one member from the nominating committee were appointed to attend Synodical to be held in Guelph in April. Mrs. V. Weir explained the "Second Mile" knitting project to be undertaken by the WMS. The summer rally is to be held at St. John's Church, north of Kingston on May 20. The treasurer, Mrs. W. H. L. Smith gave an encouraging financial report. Mrs. Smith has been the treasurer for ten years and retired at this meeting.

Three workshops were held—girls' work; children's work and supplies. There were interesting discussions and a lot of information was given.

A hearty noon luncheon was served to everyone by the hostesses.

The afternoon session opened with a worship service conducted by Sandhill women. A memorial service by Amherstview Church in remembrances of those who had passed away since the last annual meeting was held.

The speaker of the afternoon (was Miss Beatrice Scott, B.A. Miss Scott has served as a missionary on the W.M.S. staff since 1940. She has been associated with all of the W.M.S. educational workers in India. She first taught in the Helen MacDonald Secondary School, Jhansi, India. Then she went to the Bhil Field in India and combined teaching with evangelistic work. She served as principal of the Ankut School and supervisor of the village school. Many changes have taken place in the school system in India, just as in ours. New class rooms, science rooms and libraries are being built but still there is need for more rooms. As school attendance increases, classes are held on verandahs and in homes. Many children come to school just because they are hungry. One good meal a day is given to the school children. There is a good response to its relief programs. Grain and milk are given to families but one member of the family must work for a ration of grain. This requires much planning and supervising, keeping records, weighing and distributing of grain.

The government is gradually taking over the schools. Certain requirements must be met in the ordinary schools before children can attend government schools. Government exams have to be written and there is also a requirement that Bible teaching of any kind must not be given in school hours. Therefore it is necessary to teach Bible classes before school begins in the morning. The Indians are becoming able to look after their own affairs as far as education is concerned, but they are leaving religion out. Miss Scott asked that prayers go out to these people in Indian.

The offering was taken and dedicated by Mrs. Smith. The report of the nominating committee was given by Mrs. Breatch of Trenton. The following officers were elected and were installed by Rev. Gentle of St. Columba, Belleville: honorary president, Miss Frieda Matthews; president, Mrs. G .H. Lyons; 1st vice-president, Mrs. G. R. Williamson; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. D. C. MacPherson; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. B. Hackett; recording secretary, Mrs. F. McKee; corresponding secretary, Miss Jessie Rogers; treasurer, Mrs. G. Gentle; afternoon group secretary, Mrs. L. Reddick; evening group secretary, Mrs. W. G. D. Paterson; girls' group secretary, Mrs. F. E. McPhee; children's group secretary, Mrs. K. Hood; home helpers' group secretary, Miss Dorothea Druce.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Gentle and a day of inspiration and fellowship was brought to a close.

Ann Landers

Too Much Spare Time Blamed for Drinking

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a transplanted American who now lives in Mexico City. I used to read you in Boston, then Washington, D.C. When I saw your column in the Mexico City News, I felt as if I had found an old friend. I hope you can help me.

Back in the U.S. my wife had a cleaning woman and a laundress. The house always looked orderly. The meals were excellent. She was active in community affairs and played golf and tennis. We got along fine. Now that she has two maids and a cook and doesn't have to turn a hand, she drinks all day and has gained 20 pounds. Our marriage is falling apart. We argue constantly because she is smashed by the time I come home and I can't get any sense out of her. Our boys are in school in the States and my wife doesn't have to do one blamed thing but stay sober.

Do you think her problem stems from too much spare time? Should I fire the help and insist that she keep the house up? Please advise me. I am — TREED.

DEAR T.: If you fire the help, you'll have a dirty house. This is no solution. The question that needs answering is why does your wife drink. What makes her life so unbearable that she must anesthetize herself daily? Urge her to get a physical checkup. She needs to see a doctor — perhaps two.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We girls who work in the answering service want to thank you for the kind words. We do take a lot of guff from the public, Ann, but there are many rewarding aspects of this job that most people aren't aware of. For example, we have a list of senior citizens who live alone. We call them every day to make sure they are alive. Of course we don't let on that we are calling for that reason. We make up some little excuse such as — "Just checking your line - - - " or — "The weather man says it's going to rain. Wear your rubbers." Then we put an X by the name to indicate that Mrs. Such-And-Such is O.K. today."

We've had to locate doctors, call the rescue squad and contact relatives in an emergency — all within minutes. We make phone calls for sick people or those with poor eyesight. Yesterday I called the Pest Control squad for a woman who speaks only Yugoslav, which happens to be my native tongue. A person who has never worked at this job has no idea of the things we do — and some of them can be a matter of life and death.

It's nice to know we are appreciated, Ann. Thanks for giving us a pat on the back. — ATLANTA GALS.

DEAR GALS: You deserve it. Thanks for writing.

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

The business meeting included a report of plans for a sleigh ride and card party to be held Feb. 14. Details of the Regional Founder's Day dinner to be held in Kingston April 26 were also discussed.

Mrs. T. Logan introduced the speakers Mrs. R. Fox and Mrs. D. Taylor. Their subject was ballet. Mrs. Fox provided a brief description of the history of the ballet beginning as court entertainment in 16th century Italy and developing new dimensions throughout Europe and from 1933 on in America.

Mrs. Taylor demonstrated her extensive training in ballet by presenting the basic elements of the dance itself. She demonstrated the basic positions, explained miming, character dancing and deportment exercises. The group was then called upon to mime phrases in ballet language.

The speakers were thanked by Mrs. G. Logan and refreshments were served by the hostess and Mrs. Logan.

Chartered Accountants Attend Special Women's Night Event

"About Half an Hour" was the topic of an address by Kenneth J. Farthing at a women's night held by the Chartered Accountants Association of Eastern Ontario held Friday evening.

Mr. Farthing formerly advertising and public relations director of Canadian Westinghouse company and an active member of the Canadian Red Cross Society, chose the title as a result of the many times he has been asked to speak "about half an hour".

The first of what is hoped to be an annual event was held at the Round Table, Kingston and was attended by members and their wives from Belleville, Brockville, Gananoque, Kingston and surrounding areas.

Bruce Matthews, ECA Kingston, paid tribute to the president of the association, Mrs. Natalie Gifford, C.A. also of Kingston, who promoted and presided at the evening's event.

Fan Is Making A 'Doris Clark Collection'

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Drois: I haven't written to you for so long but I still treasure the bunch of poems you sent me a long time ago. I send copies to many of my friends and relatives, or read to them when the occasion arises.

Would you have more on hand that you'd like to send me? I would like to start a scrap book and call them Doris Clark Collection." I was sure glad when your picture appeared in the paper. Now I see how you look at least. That is, naturally, pasted in with the poems you sent me. — Long Time Fan of Yours

Dear Fan: Even the jingles are entertaining, aren't they? I have selected a half dozen poems which I think particularly enjoyable, and will send them along.

(Note to readers: If others would also like this collection of old favorites, I will have them reproduced and assembled. Write in for the "Collection of Old Favorites" enclosing 25 cents and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My husband retired at 65, but I didn't. Now he slops around in his pyjamas all morning while I have the ironing to do. He tells me he has had it, that he has worked hard all his life to support me and now he is entitled to take it easy.

Well, I have worked hard all my life to take care of him. I can't take it easy. What's the answer? — Still Plugging Away

Dear Plugging: My guess is that you are happier than he is — and that's one answer. He is talking himself into liking the present state of affairs. But pyjamas in midmorning suggest to me a low morale. We are at our best when we are up and doing.

There are some pretty serene husbands who take on a share of the housework, run errands and see homemaking as a joint project, at 65 and much over. And they don't lose a scrap of masculinity doing it, either.

But each solution is individual. Have you read my 10-cent leaflet "Seventy Plus and Swinging"?

• • •

Dear Doris: I went out with this guy Paul three times. He's gone away for five months.

Please don't tell me to forget him because I tried for a month and it didn't work. I went out with other guys but I had more fun with Paul. Do you think he will forget me in five months?

Now, I don't even feel like going out with anybody. I am 15. — Don't Feel Like Living Any More

Dear Don't: He'll likely remember you all right — but in five months he'll be changed, and so will you. You can't postpone living, much as you don't like the idea right now.

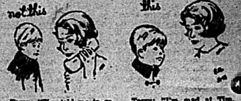
The very best cure for the disease you've got is activity, so get going. You are too young to die.

• • •

When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply which will be sent if a six-envelope is enclosed.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Terry: "Tim told me to go home when Joe came over. He doesn't want me around when there's anybody else to play with."

Mother: "Tim's mother wouldn't like to have him act that way. I'm going to call her up and tell her about it."

Terry: "I'm mad at Tim. He chased me home when Joe came over. I'll never play with him again."

Young children can treat their friends unkindly but the friendships may survive — if mothers don't make an issue of the childish quarrels.

Warkworth Institution Chaplain Speaks at Belleville Presbyterial U.C.W. Meeting

"Peace — on God's terms — not ours" was the theme for the eighth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial United Church Women held Feb. 4 and 5 at Grace United Church, Napanee. Mrs. Harry Pierson, Wellington, president Belleville Presbyterial UCW, presided for a sessions.

Greetings were extended by Rev. Guy Case, MA, BD, chairman, Belleville Presbytery. Special music was given by a quartet consisting of Tom Dawson, Walter Blakely, Charles Hendricks and Gale Rogers.

Rev. T. Van Petegem, BA, BD, chaplain, Warkworth Institution was the theme speaker for the Wednesday night session. Mr. Van Petegem, a United Church minister, has served three years as chaplain at Kingston Penitentiary and is now chaplain at Warkworth. He said that as Christians we want peace on God's terms — the God of our faith. Faith is not a reasonable deduction but is an affirmative act that produces the idea of God and the image of God. He said "Is He the God who created us or the God that we created in our image? It is easier to get along that way, with a God that sees what we see; who admires what we admire; who does what we do." He continued, "How do others read us? As peacemakers? Are they pleased with our interpretation of peace on God's terms?" He concluded, "In order to have peace we must unite with Jesus and the mystery of the cross. Jesus is God in action. We can leave peace behind us, but we must start in our immediate environment."

Following the evening session, a fellowship hour was held in the Sunday school rooms.

Thursday morning Mrs. Pierson opened the meeting and gave the opening thought in keeping with the theme. Mrs. M. Storey, president Grace Church U.C.W. welcomed all those attending. Miss Vina Neal, president Bay of Quinte Conference U.C.W. extended greetings. She announced that the conference annual meeting will be held March 2 at Colborne. Mr. L. Milne and Rev. Margaret Errey will speak on "Changes in the Church." Miss Neal said "Women must take their part in planning the changes going on in the Church. We must identify and clarify the role of the U.C.W. in the church. We must know what we believe — that we have a faith to share."

Mrs. Harry Harrison, Plainfield, presented the literature that is available.

In the business session an invitation was extended to hold the 1971 annual meeting at Tabernacle United Church, Belleville. The school for U.C.W. will be held at Quin-Mo-Lac on Sept. 12, 13 and 14.

Mrs. T. W. Spear, Trenton, introduced the guest speaker the Rev. B. Garrett, a director of Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, Toronto. He told of his work at the home at 10 Madison Ave. Toronto. This is supported by the Research Foundation. It houses about 19 men who have a major drinking problem. The residents are sometimes referred by a friend or by a member of the A.A.; some by alcohol clinics or psychologists; some by probation officers where alcohol or drugs are involved. The home is supposed to duplicate the family situation where problems are discussed in an informal way, not clinically. Residents leave when they form ties with family again and show ability to hold jobs. Mr. Garrett said the root problem of most alcoholics is loneliness or other hang - ups. As neighbors in our own homes we all can have a role in combating loneliness.

Luncheon was served by Grace Church U.C.W.

The afternoon session opened with a worship service conducted by Eastminster UCW, led by Mrs. Ralph Ellis.

Mrs. V. Zufelt reported a successful year at Camp Quin-Mo-Lac but said there is a need for more mature counsellors. More camps are to be scheduled for 1970.

Wellington UCW presented a skip. Those taking part were Mrs. Phyllis Wright, Mrs. Barton Cronk, Mrs. Charles Broadridge, Mrs. Reta Parks, Mrs. Sam Yourt, Mrs. Bea Smith and Mrs. Blanche Hicks.

A panel composed of Mrs. Don Williams, Mrs. Jack Bush and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver discussed the value of a leadership development committee in the locals, stressing the value of using the handbook and taking advantage of presbyterial and conference training events.

The election and installation of officers was conducted by Rev. O. G. Taylor, BA, BD, Trinity United Church, Napanee and the following officers were elected: past president, Mrs. Harry Pierson; president, Mrs. T. W. Spear; vice-president-elect, Miss Helen Sexsmith; recording secretary, Mrs. Henry Gray; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George Williams; treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Ward; regional vice-president: Hastings Centre, Mrs. Jack Bush; Prince Edward East, Mrs. Eric Foster; Prince Edward West, Mrs. Frank Wilson; Lennox and Addington, Miss Geraldine Mowers.

Liberal Back-bencher Joins Attack on National Parks Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to establish a national parks leasehold corporation ran into heavy opposition Tuesday in the Commons, and one of its severest critics was a Liberal back-bencher.

The proposed bill requires "extreme modification," said Allen Sulatycky (L — Rocky Mountain), claiming it denies ordinary democratic rights and privileges to residents of Banff, Jasper and other townsites in Banff national park.

The bill provides for the establishment of a corporation to administer parks property, lease lands and provide for commercial or recreational construction. The head office of the corporation would be in Ottawa.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox Alberni) attacked it on grounds it would introduce a kind of creeping commercialism into parks administration.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said it would establish a Crown corporation that would control the parks and yet be out of Parliament's hands.

Mr. Sulatycky said with certain modifications the measure may be acceptable to parks without a permanent population.

"But it is not acceptable to communities such as Banff and Jasper because it denies the existence of people there and will deny to the communities the ordinary relationship enjoyed by people outside the national parks."

People in the national park communities have no local government, Mr. Sulatycky said.

In addition, since the property is federal, the local member of the provincial legislature has little authority or jurisdiction.

"As a result, virtually the only elected representative to represent the people of the townsites and communities in our national parks are the local members of Parliament. . . . This situation has resulted in a complete breakdown of communication between those governed and those governing."

Before turning to the parks measure, the House gave third reading to a bill providing for the first major overhaul of federal expropriation legislation since the original law was passed under Sir John A. Macdonald in 1886.

This bill, which now goes to the Senate, seeks to put owners of expropriated property on a more equal footing with government in determining fair compensation. The government is subject to financial penalties for offering unfairly low prices for property.

At the opening of Tuesday's session, Prime Minister Trudeau announced that Information Canada, designed to co-ordinate all government information programs, will get into business April 1.

Robert Stanbury, (L—York-Scarborough), minister without portfolio, will be responsible for planning and developing the new agency in its early stages. A director has yet to be appointed.

The formation of Information Canada was recommended in the report of a government "task force" on information, tabled in the House last fall.

Search for Victims Delayed

New Avalanche Hits Area Where 42 Died

VAL D'ISERE (Reuters) — A big new avalanche thundered down the mountainside at this French Alpine winter sport resort today, where 42 persons were killed by snowslides Tuesday.

Several cars were buried as the new avalanche swept across a road, but it was believed no one was injured. The new avalanche crashed on to the outskirts of Val d'Isere in an area evacuated after Tuesday's disaster.

Simultaneously, news came of three more avalanches on the road linking Val d'Isere with the town of Bourg St. Maurice, 20 miles down the valley, where rescue services were being coordinated.

No injuries were reported on the road, but the new slides will hamper the work of the snowplow teams trying to clear a passage up to the isolated resort above.

Two minor slides during the night already had cut the road to Bourg St. Maurice.

Fears of futher slides caused rescuers to postpone the search for victims of Tuesday's slide in Val d'Isere.

Among the thousands stranded in the resort were Interior Minister Taymond Marcellin and Sports Minister Joseph Comiti, who visited the disaster scene Tuesday.

Thirty-two persons were being treated in hospitals today for injuries caused by the avalanche. Several were reported to be in serious condition.

At Bourg St. Maurice, tearful parents were standing in disconsolate groups in front of the town hall where lists of injured and survivors from Tuesday's disaster were being posted. So far only the names of 11 dead, all French, have been published.

Winds which whipped the snow into a blizzard Tuesday eased early today. The temperature became warmer—to about 14 degrees Fahrenheit—but mountain experts expressed fears that snow might start moving on some slopes known as avalanche danger spots.

The GREATEST

LOBLAWS MEAT—THE GREATEST! That's a pretty powerful statement. We make it for several reasons. For example, it's important to realize that Government Grade alone doesn't always make beef a good value. It takes more than that. It takes careful ageing and trimming, otherwise you can wind up with something less than a bargain. There's no one fussier than Loblaws when it comes to ageing and trimming meat the right way. And that "fussiness" is reflected even in the exacting standard of leanness you will find in our minced beef products. Another reason we say LOBLAWS MEAT—THE GREATEST is because we dare to make you a better meat shopper so you can get better value and more pleasure from your meat meals.

Opposition Party Chiefs Suspicious of Information Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — A lack of trust marked Commons reaction Tuesday to announcement by Prime Minister Trudeau that a new government information agency will be established by April 1.

Mr. Trudeau himself envisioned Information Canada as a means of promoting the federal presence through the nation and as an agent of democratic discussion.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield replied that in the hands of the present government the organization will become Manipulation Canada.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said he supposed the government could save the $7,500,000 it is budgeting for Information Canada and employ the CBC for the same end.

The creation of Information Canada was recommended last fall in the report of a three-man study group on government information policy. The belief was that an organization was required to co-ordinate all information programs and to inform Canadians of what services are available to them from the federal government.

To watch over its operation and to guard against political abuse, said Mr. Trudeau, a parliamentary committee will have responsibility to review information policy of all government departments.

"This parliamentary scrutiny would, I think, be a healthy process, especially if the committee were to consider its role as not only a surveillance but also as the more positive task of proposing means to bring government even closer to the people."

Questioned by reporters, Mr. Trudeau said Information Canada will have no political function and that neither the party in power nor the opposition parties will have access to its facilities. He denied that it would in any way duplicate the activities of his own office which distributes information about government decisions and gathers opinion from across the country through a system of regional desks.

London Firm Plans Cable TV Network

TORONTO (CP) — The first indication of what could be a major development in Canadian broadcasting appeared Tuesday during a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

Jarmain Cable Systems Ltd., a London, Ont. firm, applied to the commission for permission to set up what a company spokesman later called "the beginnings of a cable TV network."

The application, made near the beginning of the three-day hearing, would give Jarmain complete ownership of cable systems in London, Oshawa, Brantford and Chatham.

E. R. Jarmain, company chairman, told the CRTC—successor regulatory agency to the Board of Broadcast Governors—his company is intent on originating local programming for broadcasting on cable channels.

Mr. Jarmain, one of the first to introduce cable in Canada—in London in 1952—said in a later interview he would like to have studios for local production in all four centres where he has applied for licences.

However, a major production and co-ordinating studio would likely be set up in London if the application was approved.

It is the first application for this type of network presented to the CRTC.

Mr. Jarmain already holds part ownership of the cable systems he has applied to purchase outright. Famous Players Canadian Corp., a United States-owned firm, holds 43 per cent of the Jarmain interests.

Severe Storm Hits Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ottawa area was hit Tuesday by its worst snowstorm since winter began, and the department of transport's weather office predicted that 12 to 15 inches of snow would fall by late this morning.

The snow was the sticky kind that clings, festooning trees and buildings with a thick white icing. Ten inches of it had fallen by late Tuesday.

Slushy streets, clogged intersections and snowbound buses made travel difficult, but police reported no major accidents.

Temperatures were mild and winds light.

At Uplands Airport, the situation was described as "confusing" with some flights cancelled, others leaving on schedule and still others delayed.

Wheels Make Snowmobile Into Vehicle for Summer

TORONTO (CP) — Snowmobiling's the thing these winter days but soon comes spring and the machines are put away for another day.

A company in southwestern Ontario came up with an answer: A $400 kit which converts a snowmobile into a three-wheeled vehicle to be used when the snow is gone from highways. It takes two hours to fit the wheels.

Walter McNee, Ontario deputy minister of transport, warns, however, that a snowmobile so converted must be registered as a motorcycle at a cost of $10; its operator must have a driver's licence; it must carry liability insurance, and its driver and passengers must wear approved crash helmets.

Concern for the Future

Panelists, (from left), Peter Nicholas, of the Family and Children's service, Bob Henderson, Guidance Department, Moira Secondary, Malcolm Godin, Co-ordinator of Psychological Services, Hastings County Board of Education, and Dr. B. Conn, director of the Mental Health Clinic at the Belleville General Hospital, discussed mental health needs in the community at the annual meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association held last night at Education Hall.

Meeting Mental Emotional Problems Can Strain A Community's Resources

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Increased incidence of mental and emotional problems in a community often places impossible demands on existing agencies — resulting in numerous "gaps" in assistance available.

This was one of the contentions made by panelists discussing mental health needs at the annual meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association last night at Belleville General Hospital's Education Hall.

Panel members Dr. B. Conn, Robert Henderson, head of the Guidance Department at Moira Secondary, Malcolm Godin, co-ordinator of psychological services for the Hastings County School Board and Peter Nicholas, of the Family and Children's Services, each represented wide experience in dealing with mental and emotional problems.

All panel members were in agreement that a "gap in service" exists, and each had his own suggestion as to what improvements could be made.

Mr. Nicholas said the solution might be with a "private family agency," unhampered by government guidelines using what he called a more "informal" approach.

Mr. Godin stressed there was a "terrific need for adolescent treatment facilities at the disposal of the community", and suggested the further utilization of services in surrounding areas.

Dr. Conn, director of the Mental Health Clinic at the Belleville General Hospital called present day attitudes "enlightened", but agreed with fellow-panelists that "our present facilities are just not keeping up with demands."

"Right now we are at the prevention stage, but there are specific needs for follow-up rehabilitation as well as treatment that have to be met," he added.

"We must broaden the area of treatment, using more effectively the services we already have", Dr. Conn continued, "and this often involves the use of government money on various levels."

Mr. Godin saw one of the greatest areas of prevention as in the school, which, he maintained should become "prevention - orientated". He cited, as an example, the need for a psychiatrist to work with the schools for this kind of program.

These statements drew nods of agreement from the other panelists, and assertion that schools have a "crucial part" to play in the prevention program.

The discussion was then opened to questions and comment from the audience and these indicated a keen interest in enlarging existing facilities and fully utilizing those now in existence.

Most queries directed at the panel asked for more information about what assistance was available and for further explanations on the specific needs and problems in the community, and how improvements could be made.

Branch members approved a new slate of officers and board members to act for a two - year term. Newly - named president of the organization is George Wilson, succeeding past president H. A. Messacar.

The outgoing president told Association members that the focus of Branch work had changed from the concentration on specific services to an acceptance of "a broader role" for the branch, indicating that this role consisted of acting as a "catalyst" for those active in, or concerned about, the total mental health situation.

Mr. Messacar remarked that the past year had seen the re-grouping and strengthening of Branch committee which not only provided better service, but also encouraged the recruiting of new members and further financial support.

Theatre Guild Drama Is Chosen for Festival

The Belleville Theatre Guild's latest production, The Lark, has qualified as a contestant in the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival to be held early in March in Ottawa.

Guild president, Ernst Kneisel, announced that The Lark would be featured at the festival on closing night, Saturday March 7. The festival will begin on March 3.

This is the first time in eight years that the Guild has been successful in performing in the festival an the first time in Ottawa.

The last festival entry was in 1962 when the Guild performed the Chalk Garden in Kingston. In 1959 the Guild went to Kingston for Born Yesterday and in 1955 Belleville hosted the festival when the guild presented Joan of Lorraine.

The Lark will be in competition with four other plays including Things That Go Bump in the Night by the Ottawa Camelot Little Theatre and A Gown for His Mistress by the Domino Theatre Inc. of Kingston.

Also in the festival are entrants from the Theatre Populaire de Pointe Gatineau in Hull and L'Atelier in Ottawa. The Lindsay Little Theatre and Lakeside Theatre Production in Ottawa failed to qualify following adjudication last week.

Belleville's winning adjudication performance was last Saturday night. Jacques Zouvi, actor and director, and adjudicator of the Bilingual Dominion Drama Festival, adjudicated all seven entrants.

But going to Ottawa could have some problems for the Belleville Theatre Guild as the large cast of The Lark could make expenses high.

Mrs. Marion Wilson, producer of the play, explained that there were approximately 40 people in the cast and 30 technical people and backstage workers.

"The members of the cast are trying to pay their own ways," she said. "I don't really know how they're all going to afford the expenses in Ottawa."

Also, part of the expense problem is the number of young people and students who will have to go to Ottawa. Mrs. Wilson felt that although adults could afford the costs, students might find the money an extra "hardship."

At present the Guild is sending a busload of individuals and a truckload of people and equipment. Some members of the cast will be driving to Ottawa themselves.

The Lark is the story of Joan of Arc's trial and execution including flashbacks to illustrate earlier points in her life. Starring as Joan is young Picton actress, Wendy Foster.

Leading Role

Wendy Foster is young actress playing lead role of Joan of Arc in Theatre Guild's The Lark — accepted for Eastern Ontario Drama League festival in Ottawa.

Council for Quinte North Established by Loyalist

Establishment of the Northern Council of Loyalist College to serve the Bancroft Area of North Hastings County was announced today by the College's board of governors.

The council results from a recommendation from a citizens' committee which has held several meetings in recent months. The group was originally assembled by Rev. H. J. Maloney, who represents the area on the Loyalist Board of Governors.

Board chairman Frank Rabel outlined the council's broad guidelines under which it has been established:

"They are to be responsible for the administration, initiation, organization and conduct of educational courses in the Bancroft area."

The courses will be developed in consultation with the council and operated by the Extension Division of Loyalist.

It is expected that a survey of the priority of needs for educational programs directly related to residents of the northern area will be the first step in bringing the recommendations of the Council into effect. The board of governors has also approved the engagement of a resident co-ordinator for the Area who will work with the Director of Extension and in close liaison with the Council and The College which serves the four-county Quinte Region from its Belleville campus.

"Since the inception of the College, I have been very sympathetic to the special obligations of the College to North Hastings County," said College president J. K. Bradford. "I feel that the novel approach we are initiating may well be the beginning of an adult education method that can be piloted by not only ourselves but by other Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology in centres within their jurisdiction."

Members of council comprise a cross - section of the Bancroft area community.

M. J. McAlpine, P. Eng., and Ontario Land Surveyor is Chairman of the Council.

Original members of the Council include Rev. H. J. Maloney, of the Loyalist Board of Governors: J. Hattin, a member of Bancroft Council; G. Stevenson, Principal of Bancroft Public School and a member of Bancroft Arts Council; F. J. Follis; Area Trustee, Hastings County Board of Education; W. R. Coffey, Counsellor, Family and Children's Services, Hastings County; F. Beckley, Principal, North Hastings High School; G. Sebbon, Vice-Principal, North Hastings High School and P. Johns, who operates a large tourist resort business in the Bancroft area.

Initial assistance in organizing the Council was provided by Father Maloney, board vice - chairman John Donelan of Napanee and College Extension Director, H. J. Butterill.

Mr. Butterill, a native of Havelock is a professional engineer who has had extensive industrial experience including service with firms in North Hastings, is also a former secondary school department head.

The program as it develops in consultation with the Northern Council, will be under the direction of Mr. Butterill's Division with field work being carried out on a continuing basis by a resident supervisor to be appointed by the Northern Council Area.

Breakins at Liquor Store, Restaurant

Belleville police are investigating two early - morning break-ins at the Liquor Control Board on Station Street and Tony's Restaurant on Front Street.

Police chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning that the liquor store break-in was discovered at approximately six a.m. by patrolling officers who noted that the glass on the front door had been kicked in.

Thieves got away with a bottle of wine and possibly other quantities of liquor. One bottle of wine was discovered broken on the floor of the building.

Approximately 100 packages of cigarettes and $55 in cash was taken in a break-in into Tony's restaurant sometime between one a.m. and 3.50 a.m. this morning.

'Tremendous Economic Benefit'

Snowmobile Boom Studied

This winter left no doubt that the big snowmobile boom had made tracks into the Quinte district.

Summer-season resorts are staying open year-round, new resorts are opening up and private cottages are being winterized as interest in winter recreation makes "a dramatic impact on the Canadian economy."

It's a boom that has had resounding economic echoes, a recent Intelligencer survey found.

However, the phenomenon is not confined to the Quinte area.

Ontario's department of tourism and information has begun a study into the "enormous effect on our economy" of mechanized snow vehicles, Tourism Minister Auld said in Duluth Tuesday.

The survey, to be completed this winter, will include the intensity of use, what parks and other areas are used and how much money will be spent, he told the International Snowmobile Congress.

Mr. Auld said 110,000 snowmobiles were registered in Ontario in January, up from the 54,762 machines registered in 1968 when the province introduced licensing legislation.

One-quarter of a million Ontario residents are using snowmobiles, revolutionizing the province's tourist business and bringing economic benefit to dealers, mechanics, parts suppliers and clothing manufacturers.

The province is studying an international snowmobile event, possibly in the St. Lawrence River parks system where the seven-mile long Sault Parkway recently was opened to snowmobile use.

The minister said development of the snowmobile has had some bad effects, including an increase in the number of cottage break-ins.

"Burglars are using snowmobiles to work many of the cottages areas," he said. "I assume, like the souped-up get-away cars made famous through TV series, these thieves are mostly operating the 100-miles-per-hour super models, stolen earlier in the season."

Mr. Auld indicated that more of his department's budget will be spent on promoting winter holidays in Ontario.

Chamber Holds Annual Meet

Expert Enters Wolf Debate

The expert speaks at a Murray Ratepayers Association meeting.

Tonight's meeting at Stockdale Public School will be addressed by Dr. D. H. Pimlott, a member of the department of Zoology of the University of Toronto since 1962, who teaches wildlife biology and animal ecology.

A student of wolves since 1958, Dr. Pimlott has conducted studies of the interrelationships of wolves and their prey. His research was conducted in Algonquin Park, the and Baffin Island.

"Through specific studies I seek to examine theories of population control and seek the knowledge that will permit propounding of principles of mammalian predatoriness," Dr. Pimlott has explained.

He notes that the greater part of his writing, apart from technical papers, is devoted to the elucidation of subjects which he considers are poorly understood by the general public.

"For example, for the past seven years I have taken an active role in the development of public understanding of the wolf. In pursuing this I have written technical papers but also many semi-popular papers which deal in a forthright way with the species," Dr. Pimlott says.

"The primary aim of these papers is to develop a positive appreciation of the wolf rather than to simply defend it as a friend of man," he emphasizes.

"This speech should be of great interest to the people of Belleville, Trenton and the surrounding area, and the public is welcome to attend and hear Dr. Pimlott," a spokesman for the Murray Township Ratepayers' Association said.

Stockdale Public School is located two miles west of Frankford, just north of the Frankford-Wooler Road, and the meeting will commence at 8 p.m.

Students Will Attend Seminar On Computers

Students from Nicholson Catholic College will spend Feb. 14 attending a computer science day at the University of Waterloo.

The group of selected students will join about 250 senior high school students and 22 teachers from across Ontario for a day of instruction in the principles of computer programming. They will be given the opportunity to apply what they have learned by writing computer programs. Three computers will be made available for their use.

Computer science days were initiated in January, 1965 and 17,000 students have participated in the program since then.

Frazier Not KO Puncher Says Braddock

James J. Braddock won the world heavyweight championship by defeating Max Baer in 15 rounds in the Long Island Bowl on June 13, 1935. In the first two of a series of three articles, he will analyze Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis and then pick the winner of the battle in Madison Square Garden Monday, Feb. 16th, for the undisputed heavyweight championship of the world.

By JAMES J. BRADDOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — Yes, I have helped promoters in the past by telling a few white lies to build a gate. That's the name of the game. In the case of Joe Frazier against Jimmy Ellis, there's no gate to build. Madison Square Garden and the rest of the country will do quite well on Monday night, Feb. 16 when these two fight it out to end the ridiculous squabble over who owns the title. Split titles are no good for boxing and when the heavyweights are in trouble, so's the rest of boxing.

The thinking in these articles is strictly my own and not like in Frazier's last fight when I picked Jerry Quarry because I was afraid the Irish would disown me.

How good is Joe Frazier? What kind of fighter is he?

I would have to call Frazier a club fighter with great strength. He has been called a heavyweight Henry Armstrong but I can't compare him to Armstrong except in the method of attack. Both were tireless punchers and kept coming at you until the other guy wore out. Armstrong, however, was not as easy to hit with right hands as Frazier. Armstrong had a bobbing and weaving style out of a crouch and he rolled with punches. Frazier does not have that flexibility. Of course, Joe hasn't been tested too often by punchers, either.

The one guy he fought who could hit, Oscar Bonavena, dropped him twice in one fight. And an average heavyweight by the name of Mike Bruce had him on the deck. Both fights, of course, were early in Frazier's career.

With confidence, Frazier has become a good, workmanlike fighter. He does not like to waste time in the ring and his desire is to get it over with as quickly as he can. He's impatient and maybe by now a little overconfident. I saw him against George Chuvalo, Buster Mathis, Manuel Ramos and Quarry. Outside of Quarry, there was no serious punching threat. Both Mathis and even Ramos landed telling blows against him. Chuvalo, at the time he fought Frazier, was no match, at 217, for a well-conditioned heavyweight.

I did not see the second fight with Bonavena but from the reports it was a bad fight for Frazier and went 15 rounds. I have to say that Frazier is not a puncher. He has a good left hook and he can hurt with either hand but he is not a knockout puncher. He will wear you down if you let him. He is easy to hit with a right hand and Mathis proved he can be hit with left jabs. There is no deception to Frazier. He knows only one way to fight and may the better man emerge triumphant as announcer Harry Balough used to say. Frazier is undefeated as I write this,

Preliminary Sparring Not in Ring

NEW YORK (CP) — Jimmy Ellis and Joe Frazier square off for the heavyweight boxing championship of the world at Madison Square Garden Monday night, but the verbal preliminaries have been in full swing for days.

It started when Angelo Dundee, manager of Ellis, blasted the Garden brass for not having the proper training facilities.

When Ellis tumbled through the loosely-strung ropes in the Garden's Felt Forum in his first workout since arriving here from Miami, Dundee was first scared and then furious.

"Nice ropes, thanks a lot," screamed Dundee. "Get these ropes straightened out or we're not going to work here tomorrow."

Next it was the speedbag which annoyed him, saying it was too low and vibrated too much.

Then Dundee was sounding off at Garden officials for what he said was their second-hand treatment of his fighter.

Dundee said they changed Ellis's scheduled training time and then gave him a hat-box dressing room.

"They act like Jimmy ain't going to be around after the fight, but they've got a surprise in store," said Dundee. "After Ellis gets done with Frazier it'll be a different story the next time around."

Next it was Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, who warned against the possible selection of Harold Valan as the referee for the title bout—just in case the New York State Athletic Commission might decide on Valan.

Durham was a television viewer when Ellis won a disputed 15-round decision over Floyd Patterson in his last fight 17 months ago in Sweden. Valan was the third man in the ring and Durham criticized him for the closeness of the decision.

"I didn't like the decision, I didn't like the way he handled the fight and I don't think he is a desirable referee," said Durham.

"He is the one man I object to. If Valan walks into the ring at the Garden, Frazier will walk right out."

Then it was Dundee objecting to Durham's objection, saying Yank's attitude was unprofessional and a smokescreen.

"Valan doesn't need any defence," said Dundee. "He is a great referee, one of the top referees in the world.

"The commission alone is responsible for the officials," the fiery little manager added. "I don't think a manager should talk for or against any referee."

Dundee said the rules have been ignored every time Frazier fights in the Gardens.

"He fights with five hands—his two fists, his two elbows and his head," said Dundee. "I'd like to see any rules under the Marquis of Queensberry that allows elbowing or butting or hitting low. I'm sure New York rules spell it out."

CHICAGO (AP) — Seattle's franchise in the American League appears assured for at least another year on a shaky financial basis which baseball's owners still are trying to solidify. The owners after a day-night session Tuesday, reached agreement that the hard-pressed Pilots should get another year of reprieve. The decision came after efforts of a Seattle civic-minded group, headed by hotel executive Edward Carlson, pledged a $6,000,000 cash and credit goal and renegotiation of a $3,500.00 loan.

TORONTO (CP) — Gus Bodnar, coach of Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, Tuesday was served a summons on a charge of common assault. The charge, laid by a St. Catharines police officer, John Smith, acting as a private citizen, is the result of an incident during a Nov. 11 game in St. Catharines between the Marlboros and Black Hawks. A scuffle developed in the arena corridor after Marlboros defenceman Steve Durbano received a game misconduct. Smith swore out a charge of assault causing bodily harm on Durbano and the summons was served when the Marlboros played in St. Catharines Feb. 1. At the same time, Durbano and Bodnar charged Smith with common assault and Smith, who suffered a cut on his face Nov. 11, countered with the charge against Bodnar. Durbano is to appear in court in St. Catharines Feb. 17.

TERRACE BAY, Ont. (CP) — A rink representing Northern Ontario, skipped by Betty Sim of North Bay, won both its games Tuesday to keep all three rinks alive in the Ontario women's curling championships here. The Sims rink won 7-6 over Lillian Childs of Thunder Bay, representing northwestern Ontario, and handed Peggy O'Neill's Kingston rink its first loss by a 10-2 score. The O'Neill rink, representing eastern Ontario, could still clinch the championship today with a victory over the Childs' rink. The winner advances to the Canadian championships. Going into today's play, Mrs. O'Neill's rink has a 2-1 mark, the Sims rink is 2-2 and the Childs' rink is 1-2. A victory for Childs' rink would create a three-way tie and force two playoff games.

Mostly Returnees

Brier Promises to Be Reunion

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The 1970 Canadian curling championship should be a fine reunion if nothing else.

Of six provincial representatives already decided for the national final at Winnipeg, March 2-6, four have played in the Canadian championship previously.

And former Canadian champions Terry Braunstein of Winnipeg and Hector Gervais of Edmonton are still in the running at the provincial level along with defending world titlist Ron Northcott of Calgary.

Other top names still in the running provincially are Doug Wankel of Elbow, Sask., Bob Pickering of Avonlea, Sask., and Merv Mann of Saskatoon, who has won practically every curling championship except a provincial title.

Lyall Dagg of Vancouver, the 1964 world champion, has already won the right to represent British Columbia. Hap Mabey of Moncton will represent New Brunswick for the fifth time and Ron Franklyn of Halifax will be in the national final for the third time.

Prince Edward Island will also have a familiar face returning. Art Burke of Charlottetown, who skipped the Islanders in 1964, will be leading his rink back to the national finals.

Among newcomers, Lester Bowring of St. John's will skip the Newfoundland representative and Paul Savage, 22, of Toronto, leads the Ontario foursome.

The Manitoba championship, which opened Monday, runs through Saturday, while Saskatchewan is still involved in separate championships for titles in the north and south.

The Saskatchewan provincial finals open next weekend.

Gervais and Northcott are in the Alberta playoff this weekend while the Quebec championship is being played now. A Northern Ontario representative will be decided in a playoff at Thunder Bay this weekend.

Simon Fraser Quarterback Primary CFL Draft Target

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Wayne Holm, a senior from Simon Fraser University, is expected to be a prime target today in the Canadian Football League's 1970 draft of 243 eligible Canadian college players.

But Rogers Lehew, general manager of Calgary Stampeders, who own the first choice compliments of an earlier deal with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Tuesday was not anxious to claim the B.C. youth.

"I don't know if we'll draft Holm or not," Lehew said. "We need Canadian linemen."

Earl Lunsford, Winnipeg general manager, said he was not disappointed at losing the first chance at Holm.

"I don't think we could have afforded to play him (Holm) even as a backup—he lacks experience," Lunsford said.

The Blue Bombers, who had the first draft pick after finishing last in the Western Football Conference in 1969, gave it to Calgary in exchange for the rights to defensive tackle Doug Walker of Queen's University. Winnipeg will choose seventh in the first round, first and fifth in the second round.

The seventh pick completes last season's Dave Raimey deal with Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference and the fifth pick in the second round stems from a deal with the EFC's Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Lunsford said he intends to be active in the draft for at least three rounds.

Separate conference meetings are scheduled for today along with the draft proceedings.

The nine general managers met Tuesday in both morning and afternoon sessions. Their recommendations will be considered at a CFL general executive meeting Thursday and Friday.

The general managers Tuesday discussed the status of the 14th import at length. Most want this player to be a quarterback trainee, eligible to play in any game without forcing another American import from the lineup.

Quinte Rink Puts Intelligencer Womens' Bonspiel 'On Ice'

In what could be termed a "sweeping victory", the Jane Sheppard rink of Belleville won all four of their games to capture the Intelligencer Trophy. The win was the second in a row for the host Quinte Curling Club in the 12-year-old Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel, won last year by the Ann Acton rink.

While the defending champions were defeated in their first game, Mrs. Sheppard and her teammates were more than equal to the occasion, coming through with a convincing 10-3 win over Mary Wilson's Trenton rink in the final game of the first event.

The new champion is concerned with results rather than methods. As she puts it "I don't remember the scores of the games, but in a knockout tournament of this type it's wins, not scores, that count."

Members of the winning Quinte rink were lead Bev Deacon, second Marlene Henderson, vice-skip Kathryn Brown and skip Jane Sheppard. The final game was an uneven contest, as the Sheppard rink was playing extremely well and got more than their share of the good rolls.

"We feel like hiding our faces," she said during trophy presentations winding up the 24-rink event. "We certainly didn't play like this throughout the bonspiel."

The win was Mrs. Sheppard's first after being entered in every instalment of the 12-year Intelligencer event, and she accomplished her goal with a rink that was playing together for only the second time.

To reach the final, the Sheppard foursome defeated the Marg MacPherson and Sally Lambert Napanee rinks and fellow Quinte Club skip Helen McCorquodale's entry.

The loss by the MacPherson rink was their only setback of the competition as they captured the bonspiel's second event and the Pepsi-Cola Trophy.

The competition was the first time the winners had played together, and although Nina Haggerty, Mary Markotich, Kay Pape and Marg MacPherson classify themselves as a "pickpup team", their play certainly didn't show it.

Helen McCorquodale's Quinte Club rink won the third event by defeating a foursome skipped by Hazel Blair of the same club. They were among the 11 Quinte Club foursomes that went to make up a 24-rink total.

Trophy presentations were made by Claude Tice, representing the Intelligencer and Bill Spinelli of Moira Beverages Ltd. Mrs. Betty Walmsley's Spiel committee was responsible for most of the organization of the twelth annual Intelligencer Trophy competition.

They 'Came Alive'

Winner of the second event in The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel Pepsi-Cola Trophy was the Marg MacPherson rink of Napanee, that took a close 11-10 decision in the final game. The team consists of Nina Haggerty, lead;; Kay Pape, vice-skip; Mary Markotich, second and Marg MacPherson, skip.

Fearsome Foursome

Bev Deacon, Jane Sheppard, Marlene Henderson and Kathryn Brown display some of the form that brought them victory in The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel: The team provided the second consecutive win for the Quinte Curling Club in the event which was won last year by Ann Acton's Belleville rink, taking four consecutive wins in the single elimination tournament.

Bantam Chargers Spring Upset

Centennial Charger bantams came through with their biggest game of the year beating BCI 70-48, as the Chargers took two out of three games from the Collegiates in Bay of Quinte basketball action last night.

The Charger bantams, who had lost twice this year to the previously unbeaten BCI team, opened up a big 19-point lead at half time and held on for their tenth victory in twelve games.

Centre Vahe Parmakesegian, who has competed in one game for the Charger seniors, scored 27 points to lead the Centennial attack. Ron McIntyre was close behind, hitting for 23, while Richardson, Vanderwater and Morphy each scored six. LeBaron scored 17 points and Giles 12 for the Collegiates, who are now 10 - 1.

In the junior contest, Centennial, managed to stay close on the heels of the league-leading Quinte squad by taking an 82-57 win from the visiting team. Mike Thompson had "the hot hand" for Centennial as he piled up 32 points. Bob Henderson (16), John Lanning (9) and Randy Derry (8) were the other top point-getters. For BCI, Al Gallupe hooped 20 points with Dave Simmonds and Rob Woodley scoring 16 and 11 points respectively.

BCI senior team gained some measure of revenge as they posted a 54-36 win for their eleventh straight victory, after trailing by one point at half-time.

Dave Wright pumped in 33 points giving him a total of 69 in his last two games. Mike LeBaron had 10 points and Jim Wright seven in a supporting role.

Keith Wilson (9), Glen Mallory (8), Frank Johnston (8) and Dennis Neron (6) were next best for Centennial.

Lose 6-3 to Barrie

Mo-Hawks' Final News Is Bad

By MAURICE SWITZER

Sports Editor

Just prior to game-time, the local seniors learned that their Barrie visitors would be without the services of high-scoring forwards Corby Adams and Jon Weeks and rugged defenceman Rick McClocklin.

The bad news became apparent when the Flyers showed no signs of missing the three regulars in dishing out a 6-3 setback, the Mo-Hawks' ninth loss in their last 11 OHA Senior A outings.

A cracked elbow suffered in a fall in Sunday's 4-0 win over the Mo-Hawks in Barrie has cost the Flyers Adams' services for the year, the club learned yesterday.

Adams, last season's top league scorer who played with Canada's National Team this year, was undergoing surgery on the injured elbow in Toronto last night.

Weeks, one of the league's top ten scorers, was tied up with Barrie business commitments, while McClocklin began sitting out an indefinite suspension handed down by the OHA for his temper tantrums in Sunday's game with Belleville.

RALPH PLANE

High-spirited

Ian Campbell helped make the Flyers temporarily forget their lineup gaps, potting three goals. Fern St. Onge, Pete Panagabko and John McMillan also scored for the Flyers, who virtually eliminated Mo-Hawk chances of elevation from sixth and last playoff spot.

The win moved the fifth-place Flyers six points ahead of Belleville, with each team having four remaining games.

The season's smallest crowd (627 paid) was to be expected in the wake of the Mo-Hawk slump, but they made up for their numbers in volume when Ralph Plane split the Flyer defence on a solo effort to open the scoring at 5.06.

But the Mo-Hawks had taken the lead for the last time.

Little Fern St. Onge squared matters five minutes later on one of two-on-one breaks that Mo-Hawk defencemen are getting accustomed to seeing these days.

Instead of flopping on a loose puck, Rexe tried to pull it back into his skates. He pulled it back too far — the width of the goal-line too far.

At 9.18, Campbell fought off Wayne McConnell's last ditch backchecking effort, and broke in alone to beat Rexe to make it 3-1 just after the Mo-Hawks had been applying pressure around Barrie goalie Ken Payne.

The locals poured 22 shots at Payne in the second period, the main contribution to their 32-27 game margin.

The main Belleville threat came when Wayne McConnell and Lorne Ferguson scored in the last half of the period to narrow the Flyer margin to 4-3.

McConnell blasted a high 30-footer into an upper corner after Billy Armour got a Barrie zone draw over to him. At 18.13 Ferguson picked a low corner to tuck in Davey Jones' passout while the two were killing Ralph Plane's holding minor.

Plane and defenceman Greg Marchen were the most spirited Mo-Hawks on the ice in what must rank as one of the club's poorest performances of the season.

Simultaneous with the dismal dressing room atmosphere came the news that the Mo-Hawks open playoffs on the road two weeks from last night, probably against Kingston who appear to have third place secure in the eight-team standings.

What could be a playoff preview comes this weekend as the Mo-Hawks are home-and-away with the Aces. Friday night, the locals bus to Kingston, while they entertain the Aces back in the Memorial Arena in a 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon game.

CFL Goes Ahead with Plans to Duplicate Stolen Grey Cup

OTTAWA (CP) — The trail of the Grey Cup pilferers is cold, obscured by rumors and periodic telephone callers claiming to have inside information, police say.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Football League is going ahead with plans for a duplicate to replace the original, stolen from the Ottawa Rough Rider office just before Christmas.

Ron Stewart, veteran Rider halfback and a lawyer, reported Tuesday getting a telephone call the previous day from somebody who sounded young, "intelligent and legitimate enough."

The caller said the Grey Cup, which cost $50 originally, is in Toronto where the holder had engaged a lawyer to deal with Metro police.

But checks with Toronto police failed to confirm the report.

Frank Clair, Ottawa general manager, reports he got a similar call some weeks ago and that negotiations actually began between the caller and police with the Ottawa club offering a reward of up to $200.

But there evidently was a mixup during a second telephone discussion and the reward was scaled down. There was no third call.

Police say they know the identity of the caller, described as "the kind of person who might very well have heard where the cup is."

NATIONAL ELECTRICAL WEEK
FEB. 8-14

National Electrical Week in Canada

The week of February 8 has been designated "National Electrical Week" for 1970 by the electrical industry throughout Canada and the U.S.

During this week the electrical industry salutes Thomas Edison whose birthday falls on February 11. Edison invented the world's first practical light bulb.

It was New Year's Eve, Dec. 31, 1879 when nearly 3,000 people crowded the streets of Menlo Park, New Jersey, the little village where Edison had his laboratory, to witness a demonstration of his new invention. When the switch was thrown inside the Edison laboratory at dusk, 60 lights mounted on poles lit up the snow - covered streets.

Edison created a number of companies to make electrical components, finally consolidating them into the Edison General Electric Company which later became the General Electric Company of today.

As new materials and techniques were discovered, light bulbs improved over the years. Bulbs costing about $1.25 each just a generation ago now cost less than 30 cents yet they give more and better light.

To the average homemaker, bulbs seem to be burning-out more frequently today than when they were younger. Lighting experts agree that this is so but only because homemakers are using lights in more places and for longer periods than ever before. They claim that with homes better illuminated for longer periods, lights need to be replaced sooner.

"One of the scientific laws governing light bulbs is that the brighter the bulb, the shorter life it will have," a vice-president of the industry said recently. "Conversely, if you want the bulb to last longer, we must use a heavier filament which will boil away more slowly but less light is produced."

Lighting advisors say that while the so-called 'long life' bulbs "give" longer life, you are not getting the same amount of light. We have found that the best balance between the amount of light produced, and the length of life for average household use, is about 750 hours."

Whatever the comments on bulbs or lighting are, it seems fitting that a week be set aside to honor the man responsible for this indispensable amenity, Thomas Edison.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Test results, comparing performance of various types of tires and chains on the rear wheels, disclose that conventional snow tires offer no advantage over regular tires in stopping on glare ice. Studded tires reduce braking distance by 19 per cent and reinforced tire chains by 50 per cent.

Regardless of the type of traction device employed, however, Ontario Motor League reminds motorists to reduce speed and drive accordingly when pavements are icy.

Ever get to your motel or hotel, open your baggage and find your suits, coats, dresses or slacks too wrinkled to wear?

At such a time you could call valet service, if it is available and if you don't need the apparel right away. Or, you could apply what the Ontario Motor League calls an old, fast and cost-free remedy to the wrinkle problem.

First, says Ontario Motor League, leave the ruffled clothes on their hangers and carry the individual pieces into the bathroom. There they should be suspended separately from hanger catches behind the door, from towel racks or other protrusions away from the bath.

Next, turn on the hot water in bath or shower, close the shower curtain to prevent spray, and leave the bathroom shutting the door behind you.

Steam will already be filling the room as you leave. Wait three to five minutes, and return to close off the water. The clothes may be left for a few more minutes in the remaining steam.

When taken from the bathroom, the clothes will be slightly moist from the heavy steaming. Ontario Motor League advises hanging them outside the bathroom area, where they should dry out — amazingly wrinkle free — almost immediately.

Motorists who last checked their automobile tires for air pressure on a warm day in the fall, may find them seriously underinflated one of these frosty mornings, according to a special bulletin from the Rubber Manufacturers Association.

The makers say that for every 10-degree dip in outside air temperature, tire pressure drops approximately one pound. Tires which registered 24 pounds of pressure on an 80-degree day would have only 19 pounds when the temperature drops to 30 degrees.

If the automobile is kept in a heated garage, where the temperature is about 60 degrees, and is then brought out into a 20-degree below morning the pressure drop is even more extreme — about eight pounds.

The manufacturers point out that tire pressure should be checked while the auto is outside in temperature conditions under which it will be driven.

With another cautionary note the manufacturers hope to squelch an old theory, the belief that reducing air pressure below normal levels will provide extra traction on snow or ice. "It doesn't work."

Ottawa May Ban Noisy Snowmobiles

OTTAWA (CP) — New anti-noise regulations that would ban 90 per cent of snowmobiles and certain makes of power lawn mowers and chain saws are being examined by the board of control.

"I think manufacturers will get the message if enough municipalities pass laws," Mayor Ken Fogarty said Tuesday.

Dr. J. G. Thiessen, head of a special committee of the National research Council on noise pollution, said that snowmobiles and chain saws are among the worst offenders and that a random test of 50 snowmobiles produced what he termed unacceptable noise levels from 45 of them.

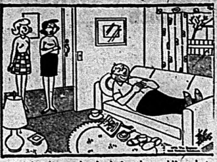
THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"I didn't listen closely during the wedding, but now I suspect I was asked if I take this man to be my 'awful-wedded husband'."

Anti-hate Bill Starts Scrap

At issue was whether the committee, in considering proposed anti-hate legislation, should call witnesses.

Some members felt that a special Senate committee and an outside committee had already gathered a nation-wide consensus on viewpoints and advice, and similar hearings by the Commons committee would reap repetition.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) moved unsuccessfully that two expert criminal lawyers appear to explain the protections already existing in the Criminal Code and what overlapping would occur with the new legislation.

Mr. Woolliams then proposed that, since witnesses were not going to be heard, the committee recommend the bill not be proceeded with in the Commons since it affects freedom of speech, religion and the press.

Davis Lewis (NDP—York South) said he wouldn't object to witnesses being called for a defined purpose, but if there were no restrictions "we would be travelling the road all over again."

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said previous committees have had full explanations from lawyers.

But, said Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), "it's extremely important that we approach this matter with an open mind——we wouldn't be able to proceed with any depth unless we were to hear witnesses."

Chairman Donald Tolmie (L—Welland) said no one was suggesting that all witnesses be excluded. He suggested that legal and technical experts be heard, but that it wasn't necessary to hear witnesses on the general philosophy of the bill.

Mr. Woolliams said it was legal experts he was proposing in the first place.

Eventually the matter was referred to the steering committee.

Justice Minister Turner explained the bill. It creates three new offences—advocating or promoting genocide, incitement of hatred or contempt likely to result in a breach of the peace, and wilful promotion of hatred or contempt.

Provinces Deny Plan To Reverse 5 Rivers

TORONTO (CP) — Some day the rivers of northern Quebec and Ontario that now flow into James Bay may be diverted into the Great Lakes, releasing water for sale to the United States, but not right now, government spokesmen in the two provinces agreed Tuesday.

Plans for such a development, which could cost as much as $1,000,000,000, have been under study for months, both in Canada and in the United States.

Published reports Tuesday quoted Col. Kevin Kierans, an officer of the recently formed Grand Canal Co., as saying in Ottawa that the Ontario and Quebec governments are considering a plan to dam five rivers and reverse their flow.

The rivers are the Harricanaw, Missiscabi, Rupert, Ottawa and Kitchigami. The reports said they would be diverted into the French River near North Bay, and thence into the Great Lakes, making available 3,000 cubic feet of water a second for sale south of the border.

Commenting on the reports, Ontario Resources Minister George Kerr said Tuesday the Grand Canal Co. "seems to be in the embryo stage" and added:

"There has been nothing before me to suggest the damming off of five great rivers in Northern Ontario and Quebec, and my department has never been approached for financial aid."

In Quebec, Robert Menard, director of water in the resources department, said there is no precise plan for such a diversion. While the United States may be interested in buying water, no firm proposition ever has been made to the Quebec government.

Col. Kierans is a brother of Thomas Kierans of Sudbury, consulting engineer who about 12 years ago proposed a plan for taming the Ottawa River and turning it into a barge canal.

His proposal includes two-way pumping stations and creation of a huge fresh-water holding basin in the James Bay area so north-flowing rivers could be reversed and their waters used for power development as well as replenishment of the Great Lakes.

Mr. Kerr said Ontario is involved with the federal government in a co-ordinating study of Northern Ontario water resources and rivers flowing into James Bay and Hudson Bay have been under investigation for several years.

He said a co-ordinating committee studying such proposals is assessing the quantity and quality of water flowing into the northern bays and will recommend alternative possibilities for its use locally and elsewhere.

"That makes it a pretty broad review, and we will continue to concentrate on that study," he said. "I don't anticipate Ontario being involved in financing studies by any private companies."

Diversion of Northern Ontario and Quebec rivers into the Great Lakes for sale to the U.S. has been suggested periodically in the last decade but has never received any official federal study.

Water export would need federal approval.

The Canadian view, as reiterated recently by Resources Minister J. J. Greene, is that any such water export program must await a continuing assessment of water resources and that no discussions have ever been held with the U.S.

Giant Step Is Taken Towards Church Union

WINNIPEG (CP) — A commission charged with coming up with a plan for union, by 1972 of three Canadian churches took a giant step forward Tuesday night.

A motion was approved calling for the setting up of a "working party" to begin drafting a general plan to be presented in rough form to the next general meeting in October.

The commission is charged with formulating a plan to bring together the Anglican and United churches and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

Prof. J. L. J. Edwards of Toronto, presenting the motion, said that if reports continue to be exchanged among various sub-commissions that "we are not going to make the progress that is due."

Canon R. R. Latimer of Toronto, the Anglican executive commissioner of the 60-member group, appealed to the meeting to pass the motion so that some form of a first draft could be ready in time for general meetings of the national church bodies in January.

Archbishop R. L. Seaborn of St. John's, Nfld., who supported Prof. Edward's motion, said the executive was "pressing too hard" to get the first draft completed in time for the national meetings.

"This is quite unrealistic," he said.

Prof. Edwards said the commission, now in its seventh meeting due to wind up today, had reached a crossroads "where certain decisions must be faced."

He said a small working group could integrate reports of various special commissions that report to the general body to come up with a unified document.

In other business, the commission passed a motion calling for a rewriting of a report on the church in the world, in view of the concerted opposition it met when presented earlier in the meetings, which began last Saturday.

The report was labelled a final draft, but ran headlong into argument over wording and other matters, including a critique requested by the commission which said:

"There is a danger in the highly humanistic approach of this report that the church is seen as only one sociological phenomenon among many struggling to deal with our world. This would emasculate the biblical picture of a church. . . ."

In dealing with executive recommendations on the report, the general commission accepted a motion that matters pertaining to French-speaking wings of the church be considered by a group studying constitution.

The executive recommendation involved setting up a French-speaking diocese with its own power of decision and that any decisions made about such matters be made in consultation with French-speaking church members.

The commission is to deal today with a report on liturgy that includes a service for inauguration of a new church formed from the three.

Western Canada Group Studying Independence

CALGARY (CP) — The vision of an independent western Canada is playing on the minds of a group of business and professional people who have launched a study into its feasibility.

Lawyer A. M. Harradence said Tuesday the group is gathering a team of consultants who will study the economic, financial and political aspects of an independent western Canada.

The group does not want to raise the spectre of a Quebec-like movement, Mr. Harradence said, and resents "very strongly the term separatism or secessionist."

"We want to know exactly what the situation will be if western Canada should be forced into independence by the economic problems that beset the West today."

Mr. Harradence, former Alberta Progressive Conservative leader, said results of the study are expected to reinforce the feeling among group members that an independent western Canada is not only feasible and desirable, but, profitable and necessary.

The group envisages an independent western Canada that would be part of the Commonwealth and loyal to the British crown, he said.

The area that might be included extends from the head of the great lakes to the west coast and takes in the northern areas west of Hudson Bay.

The group has about 15 members, was formed three weeks ago at a "spontaneous meeting," has no name and, for its purposes, has unlimited resources.

Chairman is S. M. Paulson, president of National Nickle Co., but Mr. Harradence declined to disclose the names of other members.

Loans to Indians Not Properly Noted

OTTAWA (CP) — The northern development department has been advancing thousands of dollars to Indian bands for housing construction without getting a proper accounting for expenditure of the money, the Commons public accounts committee learned Tuesday.

Auditor-General A. M. Henderson told the committee, which is studying his report for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1968—that in 1966-67, the department had advanced about $100,000 for housing construction to Indian bands considered able to manage their own affairs.

Further advances totalling $329,000 had been made the following year. Of the total advances of $429,000, there remained $250,000 still not properly accounted for.

During the year ending March 31, 1969, the government had advanced $1,400,000 and $529,000 of this still had not been covered by certification.

J. H. Gordon, acting deputy minister of the department, told the committee that the funds were advanced in line with the policy that Indians capable of doing so should take over administration of fields previously administered by the federal government.

He said that undoubtedly certification for the funds should have been obtained from the bands involved but some lacked knowledge of procedures in business administration.

Alfred Hales (PC—Wellington), committee chairman, said the committee is concerned about money being paid without proper certification. It could not say at present whether the money was being used for the purposes for which it was intended.

If there was no improvement when the auditor-general next reported, committee members would be asking some hard questions.

Business Press Fears Competition from Government Sources

OTTAWA (CP) — Special information programs developed by the government should be run by profit-making publishers, the special Senate committee on mass media was told today.

Systems of computer-based dissemination of information by government and private enterprise threaten to cut into advertising revenue and to violate author's copyright, the Business Press Editors Association said.

The editors group and its counterpart association of publishers—Canadian Business Press—each presented written submissions to the committee in advance of appearing at hearings today.

The two organizations represent the same 132 specialized business publications. Of the total, 57 are published by Maclean-Hunter Ltd., Toronto; 30 by Southam Business Publications Ltd., also Toronto; nine by National Business Publications Ltd., Gardenvale, Que., and 12 by various business associations and professional institutes.

Referring to alleged government competition with commercial operations of the trade press, the business periodicals editors cited development of the so-called Construction Information System by the federal department of industry, trade and trades.

The program, due to be operational by 1972, would involve providing through a telecommunications system details of products available to the building trades, including prices, specification and uss.

The editors association said it regards the federal system as "a threat to the continued existence of the business press in Canada, since it would divert money now spent on advertising in business publications to this system."

It proposes instead that such information systems, developed by the government, should be operated by private enterprise—the commercial business publications.

The editors also cite an information program of the government-backed National Research Council designed to keep scientists and engineers alert to new data in their fields by computer retrieval and dissemination.

The submission said the editors have no objection to alerting specialists to information published elsewhere, but complained about a trend whereby the system provides thousands of copies of copyrighted material to askers without any payment to the authors.

Similar information systems being developed privately assemble data from various publications on a particular subject and distribute them to interested persons in collected form. "The original authors and publishers do not receive payment for this material."

Both the editors and publishers of the business periodicals protested against post office regulations that mean their publications, distributed free to a specialized readership, are charged higher rates than other periodicals going to a list of paying subscribers.

"There is no valid reason why there should be disparity in postal rates based on the fact that a publication has a fully paid circulation or not," said the Canadian Business Press.

The editors said the higher rate—three cents for the first two ounces and two cents for each additional two ounces or fraction, against 4½ cents a pound for bulk mailings of subscriber-paid circulations—is an incentive to reduce editorial content in favor of advertising.

Montreal Mail Vans Smashed

MONTREAL (CP) — One man was injured when roaming gangs smashed two mail-delivery trucks near the city's main post office Tuesday night during a rotating strike.

It brought to six the number of trucks damaged since Feb. 3 when mail truck drivers began a rotating strike to protest expected layoffs March 31.

Meanwhile, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said that outside contractors will be hired to take up the slack in mail delivery.

The government will not submit to "blackmail tactics" by a union representing 450 mail truck drivers, he told a news conference.

A large group of car drivers circled the main post office building in downtown Montreal at about 10 p.m. blowing their horns and cursing drivers who stayed on the job.

Police converged on the area and stopped the parading cars. Police asked each driver for his licence and registration, then checked car trunks for weapons. The drivers were then told to return home.

Earlier Tuesday, union representatives of the drivers sent telegrams to three cabinet ministers—Mr. Kierans, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey and Manpower Minister Allen MacEachen—asking them to attend a meeting to discuss the issue.

A meeting was scheduled today.

The truck drivers, employed by G. Lapalme Inc., are protesting layoffs expected when the company's exclusive mail delivery contract expires March 31. Five new companies will take over pickup and delivery to sub-stations April 1.

Mr. Kierans has already assured the Lapalme drivers they will be given priority for the jobs.

Kidnapping Testimony Completed

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Testimony at the trial of Richard Yeowart, charged with kidnapping Mary Nelles, ended Tuesday and final submissions by Crown and defence counsels to the jury will be heard today.

Yeowart, 26, who resigned as a constable with the Metropolitan Toronto police force three hours after he was arrested, gave final testimony. He has pleaded not guilty.

He said he had only mentioned his story about stopping the kidnapping to one other person prior to giving his evidence. He did not name the person.

County Judge Alex Hall is expected to address the all-male jury this afternoon.

Farm Machinery Report Expected In Late Summer

OTTAWA (CP) — The final report of the royal commission on farm machinery is expected in late summer, Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson told the Commons Tuesday.

He said that the commission's findings on costs, services and repair parts will be dealt with in the report.

A study on farmers' attitudes to farm-machinery purchases would be released in the next few days.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

City Quiet as St. John's Police Quit

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Businesses tightened security but there were no reports of lawlessness as about 150 members of the Newfoundland Constabulary walked off their jobs Tuesday afternoon leaving the city with only scattered patrols for protection.

Later a meeting of constables and some non-commissioned officers voted to remain out until 32 suspended constables are reinstated. However, a police spokesman said if violence breaks out they will return to work.

As non-commissioned and senior officers of the 209 member force patrolled this city of about 100,000 late Tuesday and RCMP cars operated in the suburbs, a power blackout in the west end added to the tough situation.

A fire at a sub station plunged the entire west end into darkness about 7 p.m. and at midnight crews were still trying to restore power.

It was the first walkout of constables in the history of the force, established in 1871.

The men walked off their jobs to protest the handling of a grievance submitted earlier to Chief Edgar A. Pittman.

Robert Wells, a St. John's lawyer representing the men, told a news conference they would return to duty if 32 suspended constables were reinstated without being obliged to withdraw a letter of grievance.

Mr. Curtis said Tuesday he would reinstate the men if they withdrew the letter claiming that Acting Sergeant W. Babb was hiding in a drill hall on the night of Feb. 2 listening secretly to their conversation. He also promised to investigate the incident.

Mr. Wells said the men did not intend to withdraw the letter.

At Tuesday night's meeting, Deputy Assistant Chief John Lawlor and an inspector met in a separate room with Tom Fraize, chairman of the Police Constables Committee, and reiterated Mr. Curtis' offer. It was again rejected.

Mr. Wells told the news conference most of the 150 constables involved—including the 32 suspended—wanted to walk out Monday night but were persuaded to delay their action to give Mr. Curtis time to meet their request that the grievance be investigated and the suspensions cancelled.

Mr. Wells said he believed the grievance was legitimate and felt it was wrong for the chief to suspend all those who signed it.

Mr. Curtis said that despite the walkout "this city is still well protected."

Earlier in the day Premier Smallwood said he had been told that discipline within the force during the past 14 months has "deteriorated severely, and that the breakdown in discipline is continuing."

He said that "a police force with bad discipline is a thing that should be disbanded ... wiped out.

Tugs May Tow Stern Of Tanker Out to Sea

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — The stern section of the broken oil tanker Arrow slipped off Cerebus Rock in a gale today and salvage officials said they would try to sink it in the ocean outside the continental shelf.

The stern section was at a 70-degree angle in the water, and efforts will be made to right it so it can be towed the 400 miles out to sea beyond the continental shelf.

Three tugs were holding the stern section and a salvage crew was trying to get aboard to pump air into empty tanks to give buoyance so it could be towed away. Winds of 35 miles an hour and 15-foot seas made the operation difficult.

Harvey Clare, environmental protection co-ordinator for Imperial Oil Ltd., said he hoped the stern doesn't roll over. There is some danger of this happening, but it is not a "grave danger." He doubted the stern section could be towed beyond the continental shelf.

He estimated there are 1,000,000 gallons of oil in the stern section of the tanker.

Towing cannot begin until winds change from southeast to northwesterly or westerly. Winds are forecast to change to the north tonight.

Munich Police Question Arabs After Attack

MUNICH (AP) — Munich police today questioned four Arabs arrested after a grenade attack in the Munich airport on passengers of an Israel airliner.

Three of the Arabs were wounded during the attack Tuesday and the fourth was arrested by police who cordoned off the airport to search for accomplices.

Munich Police Chief Hermann Schreiber said officials were trying to determine the motive for the attack. He said police "cannot rule out" the possibility that the target was Asaf Dayan, 24-year-old actor son of Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan and a passenger on the plane. But the police added that as yet there was no firm evidence to support that theory.

Young Dayan was not hurt and was under police guard in a Munich hotel.

The attack killed one passenger and wounded 11 other persons, including the three attackers, the plane's pilot and flight engineer, a policeman and two British passengers.

Israeli officials said the dead passenger was Arieh Katzenstein, 32, of Haifa. His father, Heinz, 57, was among the six passengers injured.

Hannah Merson, one of Israel's leading actresses, was the most seriously hurt and was reported in "extremely grave" condition after a second major operation today.

The plane returned to Tel Aviv with only the crew aboard. The pilot remained in hospital here.

Two Arab guerrilla organizations with headquarters in Amman, Jordan, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine, claimed credit for the attack. The Popular Front has made a specialty of attacking planes and offices of Israel's El Al Airline.

It was the fifth Arab attack on El Al in 30 months.

The El Al airliner had stopped in Munich during a flight to London from Tel Aviv and the passengers and crew were preparing to return from the terminal to the aircraft.

The Arab terrorists, armed with pistols, blocked the path of the pilot and flight engineer as they walked from the departure lounge to an airport transit bus. The Arabs apparently threw grenades both into the bus and into the terminal, then traded shots with police.

The plane's first officer, Uri Binai, said that "after having coffee in the terminal with some of the passengers, Asaf Dayan and I went down to meet the bus waiting to take us to the plane.

"Downstairs, Asaf told me he had seen three suspicious-looking Arabs. On our way to the bus we saw them again. As we watched, they suddenly pulled out hand grenades and prepared to throw them.

"I saw one Arab hold a hand grenade against the stomach of the captain, who grabbled with him. They began rolling on the floor fighting.

"I heard two explosions and I dived for cover.

"I ran to a terminal employee and told him to call the police and the fire brigade, then returned to the scene, where I heard shots.

"The windows in the terminal shattered one after another. The transit bus went by with its door open, and I saw a man lying on the floor covered with blood.

"When the shooting stopped, I ran to see what had become of our passengers, and I saw some lying wounded on the floor and some in the bus.

"I saw the Arab who had attacked the captain, with a hand missing. It must have been blown off by the grenade."

Moscow Court Jails Belgian

MOSCOW (Reuters) — A 23-year-old Belgian was sentenced to one year in a labor camp by a Moscow court today for a demonstration in a threatre here last month.

Viktor Van Brantgegem, a student, chained himself to a balcony rail in the theatre during a performance of My Fair Lady and scattered leaflets protesting Soviet treatment of dissident intellectuals. He was convicted of "malicious hooliganism."

Van Brantegem pleaded not guilty. As sentence was being passed in Moscow's central Sverdlovsk district courthouse, a similar trial of two young Italian demonstrators was continuing in an adjoining courtroom.

The Italians are Valtenio Tacchi, 23, a surveyor, and Teresa Marinuzzi, 22, secretary, who handcuffed themselves to the railings of a big Moscow department store Jan. 17 and scattered leaflets calling for the release of detained dissidents.

On Monday, Gunnar Gjengseth, a Norwegian student, was sentenced to one year in a corrective labor camp for scattering similar leaflets outside a department store in Leningrad Jan. 22.

Jacky's Letters Offered for Sale

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities are investigating whether four letters from Jacqueline Onassis to Roswell Gilpatric were purloined or "taken innocently" from Gilpatric's files.

The letters were subpoenaed after Gilpatric, 64, an undersecretary of defence during the Kennedy administration, called to report the loss. Mrs. Onassis was President John F. Kennedy's wife.

Gilpatric told the district attorney he discovered they were missing when a reporter told him the letters were on sale.

The autograph auctioneer, Charles Hamilton, identified the would-be seller only as a young lawyer formerly associated with the law firm Gilpatric joined after leaving the defence department. Hamilton said the man returned to his Manhattan shop just before the letters were subpoenaed Tuesday and paid back the $500 advance on them.

Hamilton said the man did not ask for return of the letters. He said the man brought them to him originally four months ago saying he got them "through the mail."

Washington Post columnist Maxine Chesire said Mrs. Onassis' first letter was written from the White House and her last letter was written from Greece after she married Greek magnate Aristotle Onassis. The letters concerned a visit to Maryland, her desire to visit Gilpatric and his wife, and the marriage to Onassis, the columnist said.

Air Freight Said In Gangs' Clutch

NEW YORK (AP) — The air freight industry at one of the largest airports in the United States is "trapped" by gangsters, federal Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said Tuesday.

He did not say which airport, but his remarks recalled charges made two years ago by the New York State Investigation Commission that organized crime had infiltrated the freight trade at Kennedy Airport here.

Mitchell said thievery was rampant at the airport he was thinking of.

Losses from thefts at Kennedy Airport have run into the millions in recent years. Only a month ago, five men were arrested in the theft of $200,000 in jewelry, coins and watches.

Mitchell said gangsters who had infiltrated the trucking business could watch shipments and steal anything of value. He said his office was investigating.

He also said organized crime had begun to operate "with a great deal of efficiency and profit" in stealing stocks and bonds. He said $45,000,000 in securities had been lost or stolen in the first nine months of 1969 alone.

Gina Lollobrigida Wants Letters Secret

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Actress Gina Lollobrigida says she will take legal action to prevent the ex-wife of heart surgeon Christiaan Barnard from publishing letters from her to Barnard.

The actress says the letters were written during a romance that ended in a marriage proposal she turned down.

"It is an old story. I don't want to go into details," said Miss Lollobrigida, who is in the United States to discuss work offers.

Her relationship with Barnard began when he came to Rome after performing the world's first heart transplant operation in December, 1967, the Italian film star said Tuesday.

"It seems she wants to publish a book about her private life and talk about me, too," the actress said.

"A long time ago, when I was already divorced, he asked me to marry him and he said he already had for some time the intention to ask for a divorce.

"After thinking, I decided to tell him no."

Miss Lollobrigida said she had instructed her lawyers to take action if any letters she wrote to Barnard were published without her consent.

DOESN'T SEE GUESTS

"I don't do much preparation for my broadcasts," says Merv Griffin of television's Merv Griffin Show. "For about half an hour before the show I discuss with the staff the general area of the topics we'll get into, but I don't see the guests before we go on the air. I think we get more spontaneity that way."

Actors Must Work Outside Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's top performers don't want to work outside Canada, but it's necessary if they want to earn what they consider an acceptable salary. And according to a group of actors interviewed recently, Canada's refusal to develop a star-system is part of the problem.

"People here don't want to hold stars because they think it will raise wages," one of the country's best known performers, Barbara Hamilton, said.

And John Colicos refers to the same matter: "Theatre in Canada has not provided an acceptable wage for actors."

Miss Hamilton has just returned from a one-year engagement in London as Marilla in Anne of Green Gables. But she has turned down an offer to play the part at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan.

"I've done Anne for five summers and I'm beginning to wonder if I can play anything else.

"Toronto is the only place I want to work," she continues, "but if they don't stop closing down TV and theatres, we all have to go somewhere else."

Kate Reid, just back from New York, made a film there which paid "twice what you'd get here, even though it was a low-budget film."

Colicos would also like to work here "but acting is big business, which Canada doesn't want to recognize. . . ."

A different view is expressed by Alan Jordan, 26, one of the country's younger actors

"Canadian actors accept everything. They are afraid. They are even afraid to have their own image, they accept the instructions—cut the sideburns, dress neatly, be Canadian clean-cut—passed on by the CBC. That's what the advertising agencies like.

Doctor Denies Scaremongering

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: You doctors are scaremongers. By nature or by training. There isn't a time when you are not "selling" something scary to the public. Like salesmen in a department store, you are always pushing some special item by advertising so you can "move it."

Let me tell you what I mean. For years you doctors have been frightening people about heart disease. Next came the dangers of lung cancer. Now that we've become used to these scares, you have pulled another disease out of your hat I refer to emphysema. That's the fashionable scare these days. What's next on the agenda? — Mr. U.

Comment: Mr. U., you remind me of the atheist who stood defiantly in a thunder and lightning storm, pounded his chest, looked up at the heavens and said, "If there's a God, I challenge Him to send down a lightning bold and strike me dead."

God was looking the other way. Nothing happened. So the self-appointed hero strutted off, more firm in his belief that God did not exist.

I don't know how old you are, Mr. U., nor, how healthy you are. My guess is that you are beating your breast because you are healthy and free from pain. Free from all discomforts and not exposed to the threat of imminent disease.

Otherwise, you wouldn't be so cocksure that we doctors tend to exaggerate the dangers we are all potentially heir to.

For your information, we haven't given up on warning people about heart disease and lung cancer. They continue to remain the prime causes of death. They are still the champions who shuffle us little mortals off this earth. But when another one like emphysema comes along to make more likely, we do not hesitate to "scare' you about that, too. Stop playing hero, Mr. U.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: After removal of an adenoma of the thyroid gland is it possible for this tumor to grow back again after eight years? — Mrs. A.

Comment: Yes, it's possible. Occasionally a thyroid adenoma recurs. A patient may require a second operation. If much thyroid tissue removal has interfered with the production of sufficient hormone, then the patient easily makes up the deficiency by taking thyroid extract. They go on to live normal lives.

• • •

For Mrs. N.: The term "serendipity" as applied to medicine is the process of making an important discovery for which you hadn't been looking. For example, Dr. Fleming's discovery of penicillin mold and its antibacterial action on a laboratory plate, while looking for something else.

• • •

For Mrs. T.: If your child has any questionable lung or intestinal symptoms — especially where there is a family history of Cystic Fibrosis (CF) — he should have a "sweat test" — which is the simplest and (often) most reliable method of detecting CF.

It measures the amount of sodium chloride in the sweat. Cystic Fibrosis patients have an abnormally high concentration of salt in the sweat.

For Miss D.: Commercial shampoos are often quite effective in controlling excessively oily hair. Sometimes daily shampooing is necessary. But if improvement doesn't follow such care, then better consult a dermatologist. You may need a medicated shampoo to reduce scalp oiliness.

Gas Pipe Strapping Too Weak

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Improperly laid underground pipe could have contributed to the explosion and fire last October which wiped out most of Malton's business district and killed an elderly woman, a coroner's jury was told Tuesday.

Jim Stevens, an engineer with the Ontario fire marshal's office, suggested that all gas companies should check for faults similar to those found after the Malton blast.

He made the recommendation after he testified that strapping connecting the 12-inch pipeline assembly which exploded was not strong enough.

Alex Allan, chief inspector of the Ontario department of energy and resources management, withdrew his earlier charge that Consumers' Gas Co. has violated provincial regulations in covering a valve at the blast site with asphalt and gravel.

Mr. Allan instead named Bell Canada as the violator. He said a concrete-encased Bell telephone conduit touched sections of the 12-inch pipeline. The Ontario Energy Act requires a two-inch clearance between such installations.

Strictly Personal

U.S. Justice Mistrusted

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Ten years ago, perhaps even five years ago, the following lines might have appeared only in a radical newspaper.

The statement begins that there is a "developing mistrust of the official institutions and agencies of American justice — a mistrust, most seriously, of their motives, their very willingness to be fair and impartial and a growing skepticism about their ability to function."

The statement continues: "Crowded and insensitive courts, self-protecting bureaucracies, docile regulatory boards, undermanned correctional agencies, political and economic links between interests and officials — all have contributed to a visibly growing sentiment among many Americans that justice is either a rigged proposition or reserved to the powerful, or both."

And they reflect the terrible thing that is happening to the country. Not a particular breakdown or defect in one area or another — but a deep loss of faith in the workings of democratic institutions and practices. This loss of faith is far more serious than any specific "problem" the nation may face.

This mounting skepticism, the correspondent correctly points out, accounts for the rise and proliferation of so many independent "commissions" to investigate assassinations and civil disorders and domestic violence and military massacres and police "shootouts."

There is a growing distrust of our established agencies to conduct themselves properly, honestly, and fairly: a suspicion that government, at every level from the local to the federal, acts in a self-serving way, to "prove" what it wants to prove and to conceal and to distort what it wants to distort.

It is not primarily a political, or social, or economic crisis we are in. It is a moral crisis. When officials are no longer believed, when outside agencies have to be summoned up to "investigate" an army or police force or government bureau — then we are in deep trouble.

For the cynicism that regards officialdom soon extends itself to the "independent" investigators — and whether it is the Kerner Commission or the Walker Report or the Eisenhower Commission, people believe what they want to, what they find most palatable to their prejudices and most fitting to their preconceptions.

In large part, this is why the "media" have become the target of so much public anger, from left, right and centre alike. If we can only blame it on the media, we might not have to face the frightening facts of our national fragmentation.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 12

Your birthday today: During the coming eight months you build up a little at a time into a confrontation-crisis situation in which you will have to decide what you want and how to achieve this lifetime goal. Co-operation with and from family is essential to any real program.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Expected messages fail to arrive, perhaps due to holiday conditions. Your work is praised; relatives are incorrectly reported on this and other subjects.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Be responsive to amenities compliments: keep things moving, both at home and on the job. In financial matters, go it alone with your own funds and ideas. Disregard any personalities in a career discussion.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Follow up on introductions, new contacts. Seek information, application forms, job placement services. In turn, your services are sought to recruit for organizational activities.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): You show signs of having earned more reward and should now begin asking for more. After a long day of enlightening your schedule and settling accounts, select a few friends for a quiet evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Friends and associates get on your nerves with irrelevant discussion. Shopping tours uncover some rare bargains.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Messages are incomplete or garbled. Give thought to making fewer motions, fewer trips — let the world come to you for the moment, if it will. If it won't, use the time for your own self-improvement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your personal life must be kept clear of your professional life at present. Delegate more responsibility to younger people. Incoming mails should be very interesting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your resolve is further tested. Continue quietly and firmly on the path you selected some time ago. Avoid confiding important matters to casual acquaintances.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): There is much being said about you and your work, and probably several people trying to evaluate both. Let the chips fall where they may on all issues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Today it is better to speak little: stay on the subject and be understood. Your eagerness to get things done may lead you to starting more than can be readily finished in the time you hava available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Money, loans, property rights, and rentals come to your attention today. The tactful, leisurely approach produces the best results in the long run.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Anything you do unasked is likely to be misinterpreted. Wait until your neighbor invites you to share problems. Younger people get extra breaks but may not use them fully. Seek light entertainment this evening.

Federal Estimates Rise 7.5 Per Cent

Increase Is Less Than for Last Year

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Wednesday presented Parliament with its spending plans for the 1970-71 fiscal year — a $14,812,786,336 bill representing a 7.5-per-cent increase over the $13,617,651,503 asked for a year earlier.

But the 7.5-per-cent increase is less than last year, when the initial estimates were 9.4 per cent higher than the year before.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said the reduced increase represents an important contribution to the government's fight against inflation.

He told the Commons that the increase in the spending estimates is mainly due to the growing cost of carrying the public debt, paying higher grants to the provinces, and supporting programs already authorized by Parliament. The government had no alternative but to meet these commitments.

But in the limited area in which the government could manoeuvre, he said the estimated spending increase has been held to 3.8 per cent over the current year.

Since last year's original spending estimates of $13,617,651,503 wer authorized, there have been supplementary spending appropriations amounting to $98,446,526, and another $94,000,000 may be required before the fiscal year ends on March 31.

Mr. Drury said in the Commons that "any requirements for supplementary estimates in 1970-71 to meet urgent and unforseen needs will be kept to a minimum in line with the determination of the government to restrain expenditures as an anti-inflationary measure."

The biggest increases next year will go toward regional economic expansion, the gov-

Tanker's Stern Goes Down

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — The stern section of the Liberian tanker Arrow sank today, taking about 1,000,000 gallons of fuel oil to the bottom of Chedabucto Bay.

The stern, lodged on Cerberus Rock, was to have been towed out beyond the continental shelf and sunk to avoid further oil pollution. However, winds and weather prevented this.

Beaches and shorelines in the area already are fouled by escaping oil from the 11,000-ton tanker that grounded eight days ago.

Rough weather Wednesday hampered operations off this Cape Breton Island community. Officials had hoped to resume the work today. They were waiting for a northwest wind in the hope that the stern could be pulled from the rock.

The depth of the water around Cerberus Rock varies from 60 to 100 feet. The seas were rough and there were southwest winds of 25 miles an hour today after an overnight gale.

The stern was leaking oil Wednesday.

School Takes Backward Glance

An "old-fashioned day" was a feature of Nicholson Week, held this week at the Catholic high school here. Putting aside their school uniforms to appear in classes in period costume were students Cathy Whelan, Anne Lynch, Suzanne MacDonald and Tom Raycroft. Jordan Still Tense

King Meets Guerrillas Over Security Measures

AMMAN, Jordan (Reuters) — King Hussein of Jordan today postponed until Saturday an official visit to Abu Dhabi so that he could have further talks with Palestinian Arab guerrilla leaders who have united to oppose his government's latest internal security measures.

The news of the postponement of the king's visit, which was scheduled to begin today, was given by Prime Minister Bahjat Al-Talhouni, who will leave for Cairo later today.

Talhouni said the king will leave for a one-day visit to the oil-rich sheikdom of Abu Dhabi Saturday and then make an official four-day visit to Pakistan.

Observers said the chances of an open confrontation between Jordanian authorities and the Arab guerrillas temporarily receded after Wednesday night's surprise meeting between the king and a three-man guerrilla delegation at Talhouni's residence.

But the political climate remains tense in the Jordanian capital where the guerrillas increased their vigilance against any surprise government moves to enforce the security measures announced Tuesday.

The government has banned the carrying of arms and the storing of explosives in populated areas.

An official statement broadcast by Amman radio said the meeting between Hussein and the guerrillas produced "extremely positive results."

The statement said the guerrilla delegation was told that the government's security measures were not in any way aimed at restricting the resistance movement or the freedom of commando movements.

Israeli Bombers Hit Munition Dump

TEL AVIV (Reuters) — Israeli jets today struck three targets including an ammunition dump outside Cairo in the 10th deep raid into Egypt in slightly more than a month, an Israeli military spokesman said.

The Middle East news agency quoted an Egyptian interior ministry spokesman as saying that 50 Egyptian workers were killed today and 69 were wounded in an Israeli air raid on the National Metal Co. plant at Abu Zaabal, nine miles north of Cairo.

Pilots reported scoring direct hits on all three targets including the Egyptian Air Force ammunition and supply dump at El Khanka, 13 miles north of Cairo near Cairo International Airport, the spokesman said. All planes returned to base, the spokesman said.

The other two objectives were Dahashur military camp on the Nile within earshot of Cairo and a radar station at the Jebel Awebed camp, 24 miles west of the Suez canal. The Dahashur camp is eight miles southwest of Helwan, a major industrial centre reported to be one of the best defended against air attacks in Egypt.

El Khanka and Jebel Awebed were hit in a first strike after dawn and Dahashur was hit in the second strike 1¾ hours later.

Both Dahashur and El Khanka have been hit at least once before in the series of deep raids begun by Israel Jan. 7.

CRTC Plans New Rules

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Radio and Television Commission today announced a series of major proposals for increasing the numbers of Canadian programs on radio and television and reducing interruptions for advertising.

The proposals apply to both the public-owned CBC and private stations. If enacted, they would take effect by September, 1971.

The CRTC recommendations, to be discussed at a public hearing in Ottawa starting April 14, could mean an additional three hours a week of Canadian programming during evening hours on the CBC this fall.

Private TV stations could be forced to increase Canadian programming by as much as 7½ hours a week.

The commission also proposed to include advertisements in TV news programs, subject to stringent safeguards on the spacing of interruptions and the clear distinction of advertisements from news items.

A 30-per-cent Canadian-content rule would be applied to the use of music by AM (amplitude modulation) radio stations. The regulation would have to be met daily between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m.

Police Warn Roads Bad

TORONTO (CP) — High winds, low temperatures and drifting snow made driving conditions treacherous throughout most of southern Ontario Wednesday and police warned motorists to stay home.

Highways 26 and 89 were closed near Barrie and the provincial police advised that Highways 11, 27 and 400 were treacherous.

Jobless Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment at mid-January jumped to an estimated 485,000 from 383,000 a month earlier and amounted to 6.1 per cent of the labor force, the highest in nearly two years.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department, reporting on a survey of the labor force taken in the week ended Jan. 17, said the increase, however, was less than usual for this time of year.

Ontario Checks Its Tax Figures

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson told the Commons Wednesday that the government has offered to meet the Ontario government to discuss a discrepancy in projected revenues under proposed tax reform, but that Ontario has asked for a 10-day postponement while it rechecks its figures.

Ontario has said that federal calculations underestimate the revenues that would be received under the proposed reform.

Mr. Benson Wednesday told Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield that a quick study of the Ontario figures revealed a $2,000,000 error and "there may be many more."

Kierans Agrees To Mail Truck Probe

MONTREAL (CP) — Communications Minister Eric Kierans agreed Wednesday night to a government inquiry requested by a truck drivers union involved in a 12-day mail slowdown in Montreal.

But Mr. Kierans added that the inquiry into Rod Services Ltd. which held the exclusive mail delivery contract for 35 Montreal sub-stations until a year ago and G. Lapalme Inc., Rod's successor, would have to await the union's specific suggestions as to the inquiry's mandate.

Raymond Parent, Conference of National Trade Union's representative of 450 Lapalme drivers on partial strike since Feb. 3, said the union's letter "is as good as in the mail."

Earlier Wednesday, Mr. Parent had called for the inquiry "to clear up this scandalous dispute."

"It is true that the post office had control of the thing from the beginning," he said.

The company pays its drivers "$3.25 an hour plus benefits which is a lot higher than any other company," he explained, saying pay could hardly be reduced under the new contract.

Cuba-bound U.S. Young People Enter Canada Without Trouble

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP — The first members of a group of 800 U.S. young people arrived here today as a freighter docked which is to take them to Cuba where they will work in the sugar cane harvest.

The group arrived from Boston by chartered bus after receiving swift clearance for entry to Canada by customs and immigration officials at St. Stephen, N.B.

The freighter, the Cuban-registered Luis Arcos Bergnes, was carrying another group of 216 U.S. students who were returning from Cuba after harvesting sugar cane. They were to disembark and leave for their homes aboard the same buses which brought the other group here.

The vessel had been scheduled to dock here Wednesday but was delayed by heavy seas which caused sea sickness among many of its youthful passengers.

The group en route to Cuba called themselves members of the vanceremos brigade—Spanish for "we shall win"—which was organized in the U.S. last year to recruit volunteers to help with what is reported to be a 10,000,000-ton sugar cane crop in Cuba.

The group gathered in Boston from points across the U.S. and at first advertised their expedition as a skiing trip to New Brunswick.

Bruce Jacobs of New York, a national brigade official, said this was done to avert suspicion by American officials.

It had been originally planned to break the story to the news media after they had crossed into Canada but the plan was dropped after reporters learned the purpose of their trip.

Mr. Jacobs said the brigade supported the Communist government of Premier Fidel Castro and wanted to display "an act of solidarity with the Cuban revolution."

Key to Community's Success Is Total Involvement Says MPP

Citizens of the Year

Mayor-of-the-Week, Anne Fraser, of Quinte Secondary School, accepts a plaque honoring the 33,000 citizens of Belleville from Monsignor J. P. Sullivan, 1969 Citizen-of-the-Year at the Jaycees' annual banquet last night at Club Canara. Guest speaker at the banquet was Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Hastings.

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Every individual has an aptitude for community service. The problem lies in searching to find out exactly what these aptitudes are, and where they can best be utilized.

"And this involves getting out and doing your own thing", Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Hastings, told the Citizens of the Year Banquet last night at Club Canara.

Introduced by Mayor J. R. Scott as a man of "words of good meaning,.' Dr. Potter referred to the Jaycee-sponsored Citizen - of - the -Year project as one of the "more exciting and inspiring events of the year" in the city.

He said: "when I was told that the committee had not chosen one individual as citizen of the year, but rather 33,000 citizens, I thought someone was pulling my leg".

"I must admit," Dr. Potter continued, "it is a rather unusual situation."

The MPP urged his audience not to be too harsh on the selection committee, because o', the difficulty faced in choosing just one citizen over several others.

He observed that although there had been complaints directed at the selection committee's inability to choose a citizen of the year, "the whole thing comes back to the problem of involvement".

"How many of us", he asked, "who complained were interested enough to nominate the individual of our choice two or three weeks ago?"

Dr. Potter termed the "common denominator" of citizens so honored in the past as "complete involvement", adding that selfish interests had little place in their achievements.

Citing rapid changes taking place in a technological world he emphasized that "all of us are affected", and asked whether or not these innovations are for the better.

"There are plenty of armchair critics, but few are willing to take on a job. We should try to find out why, which in turn means we must become involved."

"It all comes back to the old question, what can I do as an individual?", he said.

He pointed to the efforts of John Bulloch and the organization he had formed in his opposition to the government's White Paper on taxation.

"There are many citizens here in our own city that have done so much. John Myers (Ability Fund national director) had dedicated his services to the handicapped, Mrs. Ruth Burrows and Mrs. H. J. Fast (United Community Services volunteers) are synonymous with social service and community concern."

"We also have such distinguished citizens as Dr. Sam Cronk, the dean of medicine in this area, Mrs. Margaret Helm and Mrs. Charles Wilson — who have all contributed in countless ways to the welfare of our city".

"All of these people have offered themselves unstintingly, and in so doing have made Belleville a better place to live," he concluded.

Citizen of the year for 1969, Monsignor J. P. Sullivan presented the award plaque to Mayor - of - the - Week, Anne Fraser, Quinte Secondary School student.

Presenting the plaque, Msgr. Sullivan remarked that the award is always "made in a climate of controvery." even when a single citizen was given the honor.

"It seems," he told the assembly of guests, "that the Jaycees can't win."

"They are interested in progress, however, and in selecting all Bellevillians we must give credit to the forward look of the citizens we honor".

Accepting the plaque on behalf of the 33,000 citizens of Belleville, Miss Fraser termed it a "great honor," calling the progress of Belleville the "result of working together to promote advancement".

Private Bill to Approve New Fire Service Costs

AMELIASBURG — Reeve Russell Thompson, clerk William Nightingale and township solicitor Don Templeman are at Queen's Park in Toronto today keeping an appointment with the clerk of the sessions at the Ontario Legislature.

Purpose of the visit is to assure the necessary documents are in order for a private member's bill to provide the municipality with borrowing authority up to $50,000 for capital expenditures in connection with Ameliasburg's new fire protection service.

The application for money, required for land purchase, construction of the new firehall, a new pumper and other equipment needed the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board. In this instance the formal request found its way to a non-active file and remained there until it was too late for processing in the 1969 business period, said Mr. Nightingale.

The alternative suggested was the private member's bill.

Zoologist Defends Wolves As Service to Society

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

STOCKDALE — A zoologist charged last night that the bounty on wolves is an answer to political demand.

Addressing the February meeting of the Murray Township Ratepayers Association, Dr. D. H. Pimlott said that the wolf bounty "won't achieve anything but put money in someone's pocket".

The University of Toronto zoology professor said that hunters don't usually kill the right animal, but one which is doing a service to society by killing some animal population.

He also stressed that the brush wolves which inhabit this area eat a great number of small animals such as mice and are one of the most capable animals in the world in getting along with people.

Dr. Pimlott said that problem animals should be eliminated on a specific basis

"If there are problems with wolves and livestock they should be taken care of," he said.

"A few of the animals (brush wolves) have gradually learned to kill and so should be taken care of."

Dr. D. H. Pimlott

However, he expressed a doubt that the number of livestock losses charged to wolves was correct. He noted that wild dogs killed many farm animals, and that the timber wolf of Algonquin Park and the north was the only member of the species which specialized in killing large animals.

In addition, the professor said that wolves somehow succeed in controlling their own numbers. From research work he carried out in Algonquin Park, he estimated that the population density of wolves is one for every ten square miles.

Calling the wolf "the most intelligent mammal man has ever known", Dr. Pimlott concluded: "Wolves are an important part of a big world and are of great interest. I urged that wolves never be killed or driven into isolated places for soon there will be no isolated places and we will suffer a great loss."

Encourage Early Taxes

AMELIASBURG — Council has decided to offer an incentive for residents to pay their taxes in advance.

Payments made in January for the 12-month period qualify for a 5 per cent rebate while those paid in February are entitled to a 4 per cent reduction.

A resolution authorizing the township tax collector to effect rebates received council's approval this week.

Council also decided to increase interest charges on unpaid taxes. The rate adopted is one per cent per month or 12 per cent a year. The previous penalty imposed amounted to 8 per cent a year.

The winners of the school contest for Fire Prevention Week will be awarded cash prizes from the municipality. Council instructed clerk Nightingale to make out four five-dollar cheques for presentation at the official opening of the firehall on the Rednersville Road Saturday afternoon.

Bancroft-area Mill in Discussion

Hastings Northland Waits for News of Huge Industrial Project

The heart of the Quinte highlands may have skipped a beat yesterday.

The reason: An exciting prospect that could set its economic arteries pulsing as never before.

The stimulation came in an announcement by Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle that a huge new hardwood kraft mill conceivably could be built in the Bancroft area.

There was nothing specific about the announcement. The minister declined to name the industry. He even said if the mill was not built in Canada it will be located in the United States.

Nonetheless, for the high north of Hastings County — long-famished of major industrial growth — the prospects provide interesting conjecture.

Mr. Brunelle said the Bancroft area is the only forest district in Canada with the quality and quantity of wood required for the new mill.

It would provide jobs for up to 1,000 persons, he added.

Today details are still scant on the project and the possibilities of its location in the Quinte northland.

A calm wait - and - see attitude is the best stance.

Reeve Brown, who said he spoke with Mr. Brunelle and Clarke Rollins MPP Hastings on the project by telephone last night, today said he knows nothing more about the mill than was announced yesterday.

The unnamed industry "for sure" is going to build a mill, he confirmed, but "maybe not even in Canada."

He even cautions that, if the decision went to Canada, the operation might not even be in the immediate Bancroft area.

As a geographic identity, he indicates, the Bancroft area is used to designate a vast land tract taking in parts of Haliburton and Renfrew counties.

However, he concedes, a project employing between 700 and 1,000 can't be established "without boosting the economy of the whole surrounding area."

"It doesn't make much difference where it's located in the northern half of the county. It would be a great thing to relieve (economic) pressure."

In that Centennial year the reeve was warden of the county and went to Toronto with county administrator Carl Bateman to emphasize the economic problems of the northern townships.

At that time Mr. Brunelle, he recalled, indicated an awareness of economic disparities in the regions east of Peterborough.

Mr. Brunelle hoped that industry could be encouraged to locate in the area.

Later, the province introduced its system of industrial-incentive loans.

That program subsequently has benefited "quite a number of larger municipalities — which indirectly helps the whole area," said Reeve Shannon.

But the current negotiations on the Bancroft area project is "the first sign for a rural area" receiving such benefit, the reeve added.

The county's industrial committee has a meeting scheduled for later in the month and by that time Reeve Shannon hoped further information would be available on the Bancroft scheme.

Picton Doctor Quits County Home Post

PICTON — Dr. Lionel Dockrill has resigned as physician for the Prince Edward County Home, following a telephone conversation with the new chairman of the county home committee, Deputy - Reeve Donald Thompson of Picton.

In his letter of resignation, the Picton physician and man-of-the-year here in 1965, said the deputy reeve used "vituperative language" during the telephone conversation. Dr. Dockrill also labelled the county home building "archaic, and a virtual death trap in the event of fire as well as a disgrace to the county of Prince Edward".

His resignation was accepted by the county home committee last night and will go to county council next Tuesday with a recommendation that it be accepted, county clerk Thomas Walker said this morning.

In his letter of resignation, submitted to Mr. Walker, Dr. Dockrill said: "Because of the vituperative language used by Mrs. Thompson and because of the fact that he signified his intent to dictate professional policy, despite the fact that he has very little or no knowledge of geriatrics, I find the position untenable."

The letter continued: "It is with deep regret that I tender this resignation and in so doing I would like to commend to the attention of council the outstanding work that has been done in Prince Edward County Home by the superintendent, William McWilliams and his staff.

"It has been through their efforts that county home residents have been able to live comfortably with a certain measure of human dignity in a building which, in my opinion, is both archaic and a virtual death trap in the event of fire, as well as a disgrace to the county of Prince Edward."

Dr. Dockrill took the county home position in 1962. A one-time Picton councillor, ardent sports fan and minor hockey coach, he attained national publicity in 1968 for his defence of Proctor-Silex strikers here.

Snow, Then Cold Hits City As Winter Bounces Back

Cold weather has swept into the Quinte area in the wake of yesterday's snowstorm and weather officials are predicting chilly temperatures for the next four or five days.

Yesterday an all-day storm of flying snow and 35-mile-an-hour winds hampered drivers in the Belleville area, involving police with minor traffic accidents.

Provincial police reported several minor accidents, but only one was considered major.

A St. Thomas girl is in serious condition in Belleville General Hospital following a mishap near Marysville on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway yesterday.

She was injured when her car jumped a freeway median and collided headon with a transport truck driven by Ed-Kingston. Mr. Pitt was uninjured.

However one Belleville woman was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with cuts to her chin, scalp and knees.

Mrs. Patricia Casselman of 83 Grier Street was injured when her car hit a tree on Dundas Street West. Damage to the vehicle was extensive.

Weather officials said this morning that four inches of snow had fallen in the Belleville area by the time the storm had worn itself out.

A total of 9.8 inches of snow fell at Tweed Tuesday and Wednesday.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton is expecting more snow tomorrow, although most of it will fall in Prince Edward County.

But the main change will be the colder temperatures expected until next week.

Last night's low was three degrees above zero and today's was predicted at high 15 degrees.

The forecaster said temperatures in the next four or five days would likely not exceed 20 degrees and would probably average around 10 to 15 degrees.

Low temperatures will hover around zero possibly going to 10 degrees below for one night.

Mishap Takes Out Traffic Signals

TRENTON — The corners of Front Street and Dundas Street West may be without stop lights for as long as two weeks following an early - morning accident.

Flashing yellow caution lights will be used to control traffic at the busy intersection until a replacement can be secured for the aluminum light standard hit by a truck about 4 a.m.

Driver of the vehicle, Kenneth C. Fieldhouse, 27, lost control in a snow pile created by town snow removal crews, say police. The driver was unharmed and damage to the 1969 truck was estimated at $450. Police said that no charges will be laid.

Replacement of the traffic light standard and a fire hydrant which was broke in the accident is estimated at $1,500.

Trenton residents are asked to exercise extreme caution when approaching the busy intersection until the light standard is installed and the traffic lights are operational again.

A public utilities commission spokesman said replacing the light which would take up to two weeks because the town does not have an aluminum light standard of that type in stock and must order a replacement.

Remanded In Holdup

TRENTON — Kenneth Albert Wright, 26, of Hillier, charged with armed robbery in Monday's holdup of the Bank of Montreal here yesterday was remanded until Feb. 18. He appeared before a justice of the peace in Belleville.

Meanwhile, a bank spokesman said that the amount stolen in Monday's armed robbery was $7,200 and that all the money had been recovered.

Wright was charged after a suspect surrendered to provincial police at Picton four hours after the holdup.

Price Restraint

The fight against inflation could be making some tangible headway, now that Canada's business community has reached a general agreement on a program of price restraint designed to run until the end of the year.

It is the kind of voluntary restraint which the government has been attempting, thus far without much success, to extract from what it calls the "private sector" of business. It has taken this Ottawa conference, between the businessmen and the Prices and Incomes Commission chaired by John Young, to achieve even this measure of restraint.

But this is not all. Mr. Young emphasized that the agreement is a supplement to broader economic policy measures aimed at curbing inflation. They include tight money and more cuts in government spending. The public too should realize it cannot expect to continue its extravagant ways.

Any cutbacks the individual citizen can make in the sphere of unnecessary spending also helps to control inflation. If possible, such measures must be effected without at the same time causing widespread unemployment and dampening the business cycle as a whole.

Self-Defeating

Any embargo by the Arab nations on United States' oil interests in the Middle East would hurt the Arab economy more than it would the U.S. This theme is discussed in more detail elsewhere on this page today; it makes sense against the background of the Arab nations historical bent for being their own worst enemies.

The most recent example was the fate of the Suez canal, blocked by the Egyptians since the 1967 war with Israel. Now shipping takes the long route around the Cape of Good Hope, a development that has been of incalculable economic benefit to South Africa.

Meanwhile, it is sad to see the Arabs wasting their substance on making ineffectual guerrilla warfare against the Israelis — and melancholy indeed to hear from Munich of yet another cowardly attack on the unsuspecting passengers and crew of an Israeli airliner.

The Arab-Israeli confrontation unfortunately shows no sign of yielding to a negotiated settlement. Nevertheless, if such a settlement can be effected, with or without the aid of the big powers, it will be in the general interests of the peace of the world.

Oh Calamity!

There is an old newspaper saw which says if a dog bites a man it is not news, but if a man bites a dog then it is.

Something of the kind occurred the other day, outside this office. It was wet, slushy and generally mean, weatherwise — and here was this rather portly, middle-aged gentleman galloping along the Bridge Street sidewalk toward Pinnacle.

What was his problem? A blue station wagon was on the inside lane and picking up speed; but before it went through the lights at Pinnacle our friend caught up and pounded his fist on the rear side window.

The driver, no doubt puzzled, turned around and then drove on; but the irate pedestrian had made his point, and was now walking disconsolately across the street.

Although we did not see the fell deed, it seemed clear that the station wagon had given the gentleman an eyeful of early spring thaw — and cause for an unscheduled visit to the cleaners.

We saw it happen again later, this time to a young lady walking along Moira Street near Coleman.

Drivers, even if they are so inclined, have little opportunity to be chivalrous in such matters. Traffic is traffic — rain or shine — so in the circumstances the pedestrian must be his own friend and keep away from the edge of the sidewalk.

Skiers Die

Not long after the recent train disaster in the Argentine, misfortune has struck again in another part of the world — in the shape of an avalanche in the French Alps.

Thirty-nine persons were killed and 31 injured as tons of fresh snow swept over a ski camp.

A comparatively small number perhaps, in terms of the cumulative highway toll, or from earthquake or famine — yet this was Europe's worst single avalanche disaster of the century.

Think on that.

A Very Public Private Life

PM's Date with Barbra Rejuvenates Swinger Image

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Singing star Barbra Streisand has gone back to Broadway, and Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's social life has settled down again into the party-hopping routine of dropping in, quite unexpectedly, on surprised and delighted hostesses 'round and about the Capital.

It was more than a week ago now that they parted, for the third time since first dating in London a year ago, and the whole town is still talking.

What did those three incredible days and nights of romantic show-boating prove?

Just this . . . Trendy Trudy is a truly talented swiftie — but really no smoothie — when it comes to catching the public eye and ear.

There has never been another Prime Minister anything remotely like him.

There have been other bachelors, too, former Prime Ministers Mackenzie King and Richard Bedford Bennett, but whatever romances they had — and to hear the Capital's well-informed gossips, there were some hearts and flowers in their Ottawa days — they enjoyed in discreet privacy.

Our Trudy talks a great game of privacy but plays it publicly.

"For a man who insists he puts such great store in having a private life, he sure dates girls who attract public attention," marvelled former Prime Minister Pearson the night Trudy showed up at the National Arts Centre with Barby on his arm.

And so he does. There was London playgirl Eva Rittinghausen. There was Montreal charmer Madeleine Gobeil. There was Ottawa glamor girl Margaret Sinclair.

The kids who came to peer worshipfully at him from the galleries of the House of Commons left disillusioned.

And then along came Barbra.

And it was the romantic Romeo of the kiss and hug and have-fun days of the shopping centres and supermarket malls all over again.

Everybody, but absolutely everybody was talking about Trudy again.

And it could not have caused Miss Streisand — or at least, her public relations man — any great pain either.

What a performance!

Trudy in his front bench seat on the floor of the commons making little signals to Barby up there in the Speaker's gallery.

He blushing like a schoolboy and she giggling and wiggling her fingers at him.

Former Conservative Trade Minister George Hees telling him to tear his eyes away from Barbra and pay a little more attention to the business of the Commons.

He had brought her to the House of Commons for all to see, almost like a dutiful son bringing a girl home for Mum to inspect and approve.

But there was something paradoxically cavalier about it all when Miss Streisand was not around.

It was a sort of flippant attitude that some old-fashioned girls — and old-fashioned mothers — might think was something less than properly respectful.

Spotting a mob of press, radio and TV types, and well-knowing they were waiting to ask him about Barbra, he scopped up a pretty young girl in the lobby and quipped, with a gay laugh, "say, how do you like my new girl?"

She was the unsuspecting daughter of Robert Stanfield. And she might have been just a little embarrassed.

But what about Miss Streisand, they all wanted to know.

"Beter ask her that yourselves," he grinned and went on to hint he might even reveal her "hotel."

Japanese Windfall

Saint John Telegraph-Journal

Among people who think big, the mayor of the Tokyo suburb of Hachioji dwarfs many others. Enji Uetaki has opened a bank account with $27.70 in Japanese money which is to remain untouched for a thousand years, at the end of which period his descendants will inherit handsomely.

At 5.5 per cent interest, by 2970 his deposit will have grown to $500,000,000,000,000,000,000 he was informed by bank officials.

This will be quite a windfall — but there could be so many claimants for a share that lawyers' fees would erode it to a thousand or two.

Two-Edged Sword

Expulsion of U.S. Oil Companies Would Hurt Arabs Most

BEIRUT (AP) — The Arabs should kick out American oil companies unless the United States stops helping Israel, five Arab countries said at their summit conference in Cairo. But nobody knows better than the Arabs that they would be hurt most.

"The Arab nation refuses to see its resources and wealth being exploited and converted into assistance and weapons for Israel. The continuation of such exploitation should be considered an Act of imperialism which must be liquidated by the Arab countries."

..After the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the Arabs decided to stop oil shipments to Britain, the United States and West Germany.

The Arabs soon realized they were suffering more than anyone else and the oil started flowing again.

The three Arab states that have most of the oil did not attend the Cairo conference. Saudia Arabia and Kuwait already have made it clear that they do not intend to cut their own economic throats and even the new revolutionary government of Libya is not likely to choke off the goose that lays a golden egg worth a billion dollars a year.

Of the countries at the "confrontation summit"—so-called because the five nations are those with troops actively engaged against Israel—only Iraq is a big oil exporter. American interests comprise about 23 per cent of the Western-owned Iraq Petroleum Co., which produces Iraq's oil.

It would be impossible to hit the U.S. holdings without affecting the whole operation. This in turn would jeopardize an annual income to Iraq of $5000,000,000.

Syria is a minor oil exporter and does most of it all on its own with some help from Russian experts.

The growing oil production in Egypt depends heavily on the know-how and investment of independent American oil companies in partnership with government concerns. Because of the fields the Americans are developing, Egypt hopes to double its present production by 1975, probably becoming an important exporter in the process.

Despite Cairo's bitter anti-American feelings, oil companies continue to operate smoothly in Egypt.

If the Arab governments will not or cannot strike out at the American oil interests that produce most of their wealth, who was the call really aimed at?

The answer would seem to be the Palestine guerrillas who can operate as free agents because they are responsible for no one and to no government.

But if they start sabotaging American oil installations, they are not only going to hurt the oil countries, they are going to hurt the three biggest have-nots of the Arab world-Egypt, Jordan and the guerrillas themselves.

• • •

By CY FOX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The effects of the Arab-Israeli conflict also are felt in world commerce, especially oil dealings.

The leaders of Egypt and four other Arab countries most directly involved in the current conflict with Israel followed up their summit conference in Cairo this week with a warning about the future of American oil holdings in their part of the world.

Bitter about United States military aid to Israel, the Arabs maintained that earnings from the petroleum investments are helping to finance this assistance.

"The continuation of such oil exploitation should be considered an act of imperialism which must be liquidated by the Arab nation," the Cairo communique said.

The U.S. currently is developing alternate sources of oil—Canada, Alaska and West Africa being among the areas where this process is going on.

Moreover, it's questionable whether Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing Arab countries not represented at the Cairo conference will back any withholding of petroleum from the U.S.

But the Arab oil does remain vital to Western countries.

Thus the Americans might be expected to worry about the Cairo declaration, as well as about the effect their Israeli policy is having on U.S. relations with long-time friends of theirs in North Africa, notably Morocco and Tunisia.

Yet Washington has at least one consolation in that the Russians, too, have found their diplomatic tasks complicated by the turmoil in the Middle East and especially by divisions inside the Arab camp.

In addition to being asked by Egyptian President Nasser for extra help, the Russians seem to be having trouble reconciling their publicly-stated policy on the Middle East with that advocated by Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestinian Arab guerrilla group called Al Fatah.

Arafat says relentless military action is the sole means of resolving the feud with Israel.

Hours before the start of Arafat's current visit to Moscow, the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda reiterated the official Soviet line that "a political solution is the only one possible for the Middle East."

Nicholson Students Boost School Spirit

Nicholson week at the Belleville Catholic high school has sparked student-led activities all this week to foster school spirit and encourage initiative.

Beginning with an assembly Monday, at which Paul King, dean of technology at Loyalist College spoke on future education trends the week continued with tournaments, a slave day, a tea - dance and other student directed activities.

On Tuesday, senior students took over the classes to do all the teaching for the day. Wednesday they attended classes in old-fashioned costumes they prepared themselves. Floor hockey, basketball, chess and card tournaments were held and a hat day is also scheduled.

Another day has been set aside for a "serious and frank talk" about the educational situation, John Marino, president of the student council said.

"We want to show that we, at Nicholson, can discuss intelligently the problems that we face, and can try to do something about them," he said. "I feel this student-organized venture is at least a beginning towards greater involvement."

"What is going to happen to people who have never learned how to occupy their leisure time profitably?" Mr. Marino asked. "There is not an urgent demand on them to work, due to higher parental income and greater access to money. It is not their fault that they find an escape from boredom in drugs, sex, petty thievery and violence, or just standing on street corners."

This is the idea behind Nicholson Week, the student said.

"I think that it is a most vital role of a school to educate people to educate themselves. Fostering genuine interest and enthusiasm, as well as providing access to required facilities, is of greatest importance," he asserted. "We must move away from a nine-to-three-nineteen philosophy and make the whole world our teacher."

Estimates: $40,000 Here

The federal government plans to spend $40,000 on public building improvements in Belleville during the fiscal year starting April 1.

The public works department at the city's federal building reported this morning it had no idea where the money would be spent.

At present, an air-conditioning plant is being installed in the building, but funds were allocated for that project during the fiscal year beginning last April 1, said an official.

The federal government will spend a total of $53,074,000 on major public works projects in Ontario during the fiscal year beginning April 1. Some $37,858,000 of the total will be in Ottawa.

The government's 1970-71 spending estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday, call for $15,216,000 to be spent on 19 projects outside Ottawa.

Only projects valued at $250,000 or more are listed in detail. Previous estimates listed all projects of $50,000 or more. In some cases, the amount to be spent this year is less than $250,000 because the projects won't be completed by March 31, 1971.

Objections to Cottage Zoning

AMELIASBURG — Half of Peat's Point, on Ameliasburg township's eastern waterfront, is designated for summer cottage while the other half is zoned agricultural.

Township council's bylaw to rezone the Point entirely for summer cottage development has received written objections from six residents.

Council, however, has ruled only four of the letters are valid objections since two of them were neither delivered by hand or sent to the clerk's office by registered mail — to comply with official procedure in making a formal complaint.

The objections — which covered a number of probabilities which could result from additional summer cottage development on the Point — referred to pollution of the Bay of Quinte as a factor worthy of consideration.

Council is passing the valid objections along to the Ontario Municipal Board deciding the merits of the rezoning application.

Chief Denies Charges

NEW HAMBURG, Ont. (CP — A hearing into charges against Police Chief George Thomas ended Wednesday with the chief denying he had influenced two former constables not to report for duty.

Chief Thomas was suspended with pay last Dec. 9 in this town near Kitchener, and charged with five counts of insubordination and dereliction of duty.

He denied he had failed to order then-constable Gerald Minnie to report for duty when requested to do so by Mayor Curtis L. Roth.

He said that after he was notified by city council he was suspended, he had summoned Minnie and then probationary constable Frederick Wesson to his home to tell them the news.

The chief said he told the men any decision about their future would be up to them, and they had insisted they would "back up the chief."

Judge Harold Lang of Stratford, who presided at the hearing, said he will return a written judgment as soon as possible, but will make no recommendations.

Quebec Could Ruin Plans

OTTAWA (CP) — Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) asked in the Commons Wednesday what will happen to the government's 1970-71 spending estimates if Quebec decides to enter the medical care insurance program.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, after tabling the estimates, had just told the House that supplementary spending will be kept to a minimum in the forthcoming year.

Mr. Lambert replied that the aim of keeping supplementary estimates at the 1969-70 level will go out the window if Quebec enters the plan.

Quebec government spokesmen have said the province will want $200,000,000 in retroactive federal payments, to the July 1, 1968, date the plan became operative, if Quebec joins.

Mr. Lambert also said the government's $13,000,000,000 in estimates, excluding old age security pension figures, is double the $6,400,000,000 for 1963-64.

The government had devloped the habit of taxing up to expenditures, he said, resulting in a series of surcharges and hidden tax changes.

He said the form of the estimates also disguises personnel and salaries, failing to disclose premium payments to some employees.

The opposition would rivet attention on areas where spending has increased and seek out the personnel and salary figures when the estimates go to standing committees.

Information Canada Will Cost $7 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Information Canada, the new central information organization the government will establish April 1, receives a 1970-71 budget of $7,355,000 in the estimates tabled Wednesday in the Commons.

An initial staff of 520, headed by a director with the rank of a deputy minister, will receive salaries totalling $4,454,000.

Information programs will cost an estimated $2,725,000.

Information Canada, whose creation was recommended by a special study group, is being established to co-ordinate all government information programs. It is also to bring public information and reaction to the attention of government.

The estimated cost of $7,355,000 is based on a total outlay of $10,205,000 and predicted revenues of $2,850,000.

The estimated cost of all departmental information programs for the year is $38,203,000, compared with $38,699,000 in the current year.

Information Canada will spend an estimated $8,488,000 on providing information to the public. Another $526,000 will be spent on "information in" — the program of informing government what Canadians "think about federal policies and programs."

Highlights of Estimates

OTTAWA (CP) — Highlights of the government's main spending estimates for the 1970-71 fiscal year starting April 1, presented to Parliament Wednesday:

Total outlays set at record $14,812,786,336, up 7.5 per cent from $13,778,098,029 for 1969-70.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury says "controllable expenditures" held to 3.8-per-cent increase.

Health and welfare expenditures mount to $3,149,800,000 from $2,734,800,000. In addition, old age pension payments climb to $1,903,000,000 from $1,760,000,000.

Public debt charges climb to $1,799,700,000 from $1,656,600,000.

Defence budget held to $1,816,600,000, an increase of only $700,000.

Medical care insurance, if all provinces participate, climbs to $440,000,000 from $370,000,000.

Foreign aid increased to $192,700,000 from $179,200,000.

Expenditures on cultural affairs cut slightly with savings on national parks and historic sites.

Federal Government Will Trim Employees' Man-years by 6,000

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's plan to trim the size of the public service is reflected in 1970-71 spending estimates tabled Wednesday in the Commons.

The estimates show the government is planning on 247,859 regular employees on March 31, 1971, compared with a ceiling of 255,401 for March 31 this year.

The man-years authorized for the current year total 278,511, while this is being lowered to 272,174 for 1970-71. The man-years designation means that four employees each working three months will count as one man-year.

The authorized ceilings normally are higher than the actual number of employees on staff at any given time. Regular employees totalled 240,092 last Sept. 30.

Most government departments are reducing their "planned total man-years" for 1970-71 from the "total man-years authorized" for 1969-70.

Among the exceptions are the department of regional economic expansion, rising to 2,544 from 2,499, and the state secretary's department, which goes to 14,299 from 14,147. The department includes many Crown agencies, some showing fewer planned employees, some more.

The CBC is planning for 9,158 employees compared with 9,227 in the current year, and the National Film Board is being trimmed to 950 from 1,076. But slight increases are being planned for such agencies as the Canada Council, the National Library and national museums.

The transport department plans to increase to 23,117 from 22,853, and the solicitor-general's department goes up to 18,200 from 17,418. But most other departments either plan decreases or will try to hold employees at the present strength.

The department of Indian affairs and northern development is planning to decrease to 10,667 from 12,137; the labor department to 6,024 from 6,347; external affairs to 4,004 from 4,032, and fisheries and forestry to 4,787 from 5,249.

The manpower and immigration department expects to decline to 9,003 from 9,723, and civilian employees of the defence department will drop to 38,097 from 40,494.

But Parliament Hill will employ more people. The Commons staff will increase to 1,320 from 1,028 and the Senate's to 210 from 205.

ernment's bilingualism program, foreign aid, postal services, health and welfare, Indian and Eskimo affairs and several other programs.

"The programs for which increases are provided," said the minister, "relate to the basic priorities of the country—national unity, social justice, education and economic development here in Canada and in the developing countries."

The downward trend in public service employment would continue, he said.

The number of government employees would be cut to 247,859 by March 31 next year, from an authorized 255,401 on March 31, 1970.

Early next month, Finance Minister Edgar Benson will bring down his budget to show how he plans to raise the money to cover the spending estimates. He has budgeted for a surplus this year—likely to be about $500,000,000—and is expected to plan for another surplus in 1970-71 as part of the continuing campaign against inflation.

While the $14,812,786,336 spending program for 1970-71 includes old-age security payments, the government, in its accounting methods, lists it as a separate expenditure. These pensions are paid out of special taxes imposed on income, sales and corporations.

In round figures, the government is estimating a health and welfare department expenditure of $3,149,800,000 in 1970-71, up from $2,734,800,000 in the current year. With announced plans of holding the defence budget at its current level, it will rise only $700,000 to $1,816,600,000 in the next fiscal year.

Economic development and support programs will go up to $1,817,800,000 from $1,668,500,000. Assistance to education will rise to $450,600,000 from $301,900,000, while the cost of interest on the public debt climbs to $1,799,700,000 from $1,656,600,000.

The cost of medical care insurance for the federal government is estimated at $440,000,000 for 1970-71, compared with $370,000,000 this year. But this is based on the assumption that all provinces will be participating. Quebec does not come into the plan until this July, and New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island have not yet announced their plans.

While expenditures on cultural affairs are being trimmed slightly in the next year—down 617,651,503 were authorized, $254,900,000—family and youth allowances will rise slightly to $620,300,000 from $520,000,000.

Aid for developing countries will rise to $192,700,000 from $179,200,000 this year, and support programs for the agriculture industry will climb to $373,400,000 from $361,500,000.

The estimates will be given a detailed examination by Commons committees. Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the opposition will focus attention on areas where spending has increased. Details on personnel and salary would be sought out, he told the Commons.

Church Commission Gets 'to Nitty Gritty'

WINNIPEG (CP) — A commission studying union of three Canadian churches has wound up its seventh general meeting on a note of optimism that it is finally getting to the "nitty gritty of the problems."

"The feeling is that for the first time we are playing for keeps," said Rev. John W. Grant of Emanuel College in Toronto.

The general commission is charged with preparing a plan for union of the Anglican and United churches and the Christian Church Disciples of Christ.

During discussion Wednesday night, the commission agreed to prepare all reports toward a working plan for union by Dec. 15, 1971 and that this plan after discussion would be presented to the national executive of the three denominations by February.

Foreign Aid Spending to Rise $15 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will be holding the line on defence expenditures while increasing its foreign aid budget in the fiscal year 1970-71, spending estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday show.

The boost in foreign aid spending is $15,000,000, bringing the proposed expenditure in the coming fiscal year to $192,000,000 compared with $177,000,000 for the fiscal year ending March 31.

Defence spending is forecast at $1,812,000,000 — olny about $1,000,000 more than Parliament allocated for the present year.

The defence department has been ordered to live within its 1969-70 budget for an additional three years. This means, barring a change of government policy, that the same level of appropriations will be maintained through 1972-73.

Most other government departments are operating under a hold-the-line spending order for the coming fiscal year only, although this could be extended if thé government's general austerity program so demands.

For instance, the external affairs department's budget for the coming fiscal year is $76,000,000—just about $1,000,000 more than in the present fiscal year.

Foreign aid, administered by the Canadian international development agency, is one of the priority areas of government spending.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, in a statement he made on tabling the estimates, lumped it together with domestic economic development.

Canada's basic priorities, he told the House, are national unity, social justice, education and "economic development here in Canada and in the developing countries."

Nevertheless the modest $15,000,000 increase proposed marks, in effect, a further step away from the objective of one per cent of gross national product which Canada once set itself for foreign aid.

The annual increase would have to be far greater than $15,000,000 if Canada were to attain the one-per-cent target by tain the one-per-cent target by the mid-1970s as formerly proposed. Actually, government leaders have in the last half-year or so stopped talking about percentage of GNP in relation to foreign aid.

In addition to the $192,000,000 for development agency operations during the coming year, the estimates also provide $150,000,000 in loans, investments and advances to developing countries. This compares with $148,000,000 approved by Parliament for the current year.

The defence department estimates provide $1,294,523,000 in operating expenditures, a drop of $22,851,000.

There is a reduction of just over $54,000,000 in operating expenses for Canada's NATO forces overseas partially offset by an increase of $15,277,000 in the area of Canadian security and a jump of $14,892,000 in North American security.

Canada is reducing its forces overseas, while putting relatively more emphasis on continental defence. The over-all strength of the regular forces is in process of being reduced to 82,000 in 1972 from 98,000.

CBC Estimates Remain Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian taxpayers will pay an estimated $166,000,000 to operate the CBC in the coming fiscal year, the same amount authorized by Parliament for the fiscal year ending March 31.

The CBC item is by far the largest under the heading of culture and recreation in the government's 1970-71 spending estimates tabled Wednesday in the Commons.

Total expenditure in the culture and recreation category is $254,500,000, a shade less than the $254,900,000 allocated for 1969-70.

One agency taking a substantial chop is the National Film Board, whose spending is estimated at $10,000,000 compared with $11,000,000 in last year's "blue book" of government expenditure forecasts.

Opposition members of the Commons have questioned the government closely in recent weeks about the future of the NFB. Their concern was roused by reported large-scale layoffs in the film agency.

The amount allocated for national parks is $14,882,000 compared with $15,177,000 allocated a year ago.

The amount provided for the National Arts Centre is $2,600,000, up $100,000.

Explorers Entertain Fathers

Fathers were kings when the Explorers of St. Columba Presbyterian Church entertained the fathers on Tuesday evening at an Indian festival.

Chief Explorer, Angela Cook, welcomed the guests who had been received by Noreen Newson and Beth Pollard with sandalwood and rosewater.

Before the Indian meal of chapati, Hindu Krispies, banana and tea, Valeria Yard and Karen Hamilton performed the hand washing ceremony. Grace was said by Karen Adams. Cathy Newson and Suzanne Taylor led the group in Indian games.

Gail Dawson told something of the country and its people. Using a map made at an earlier expedition Judy Wild spoke on the various phases of work done by the Church.

ST. MICHAEL'S CWL

Bernice Farrell chaired the meeting which opened in the usual manner. General reports were given by the conveners. There are 480 members at present.

Mrs. Holland and Mrs. Rivers attended a meeting concerning the world day of prayer which will be held on March 6 at 2 p.m. in College Hill United Church. Mrs. Healie thanked those who had helped with the Guide and Brownie tea. There were 51 children cared for in the nursery and Bernice Farrell thanked all those who had helped make the Valentine ball such a success, especially Catherine Farrell and Eileen McCabe, dance conveners, and Irene Whalen, convener of ticket sales.

Mrs. Farrell gave a report on a diocesan executive meeting she had attended in Kingston Jan. 28. The objective of the diocesan collections for development and peace this year is $38,000 which will go to buy a bulldozer and trucks for Ocoa in the Dominican Republic.

Mrs. DiRoco showed a film, "The Role of the Layman in the Church," which was followed by a lively discussion period.

Mrs. M. Doyle moved that the meeting be adjourned. Coffee and cookies were served by Mrs. Adrian Vogt.

Frightful Experience Related by Teen-ager

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has been told a dozen times never to ride with strangers but I paid no attention. I was sure those terrible things I read about in the papers always happen to someone else. It was 11:00 o'clock at night, and getting cold. I decided to save the bus fare and hitch a ride. I got into the first car that stopped — a blue sedan. A middle-aged man was driving. Within two minutes I knew I had made a big mistake. The man looked as if he had been drinking. He asked me some crazy questions. Suddenly he turned into a side street then onto a dirt road.

I thought of jumping out, but the doors were locked and he was driving pretty fast. Suddenly, he stopped behind a clump of trees, dragged me out of the car and tried to rape me. I managed to get free and ran for my life. He chased me and I fell. Before I could get up, he literally pulled me up by the hair and began to beat me to "make me behave." I got loose and started to run again — this time into a barbed-wire fence. Somehow I crawled through a hole in the fence and hid behind a clump of bushes. He lost sight of me so I kept my head down and remained still. I must have lain there for 30 minutes when I heard his car drive off.

I then began to walk home. It was the longest walk of my life. I had hurt my knee and my head was bleeding where he hit me. I stopped at the first house I saw and called the police. They came and got me and drove me home. I'm still recovering from sprains and bruises, but I'm lucky to be alive.

If my letter can save just one girl from going through what I experienced, it will be worth the effort it took to write it. — DUMB AND LUCKY.

DEAR D and L: Congratulations — on being alive, that is.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll bet you've had a zillion letters from people who are furious with Los Angeles Bub — the man who wrote to say he doesn't dislike cats — it was children he hates. Bub went on to say he is sick of our child-centred society — that most parents are scared to death of their kids. They cater to them, bribe them and live in fear of incurring their disfavor.

Bub made an excellent case for an unpopular position. But he missed the most important part — that the kids are not to blame. It's the parents.

Children are born unspoiled and lovable. They are taught to be rude, inconsiderate, destructive and obnoxious. They are constantly testing to see how far they can go — how much they can get away with. When no limits are set and they can do as they please, children become insecure and unpredictable, like a car without brakes. Nothing is sadder than a hostile, pesky, disobedient, disrespectful kid. You know at once that he is also lonely and miserable. — BUB NO. 2.

DEAR BUB NO. 2: You are right, I did get a zillion letters from readers who were furious with Bub No. 1. But I received half a zillion letters from people who wrote as you did. But your letter was best. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This might be a petty gripe but it drives me up the wall.

My mother-in-law insists on addressing cards to our daughter (age 2) as Mistress Janet Doe. We are average people and I dislike pretentiousness. Is this the proper way to address a very young girl? — IRKED IN IDAHO.

DEAR "IDA": Why be irked? Instead, you ought to shed a tear for the poor woman's ignorance. She's using the wrong word in the mistaken belief that Mistress is the female counterpart for Master. It isn't. Someone should tell her. But not you.

No matter how much you scold, a small child cannot be co-operative when she's being dressed, if she doesn't understand how she is being difficult. Offer some concrete and imaginative suggestions that will make the routine easier and fun.

Quack Remedies Delay Proper Treatment

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: There are so many things which are being suggested as "cures" for arthritis that it is becoming difficult to keep track of all of them. I thought you would be interested in the enclosed reading magazine.

Even when the suggestions are harmless food products, the important point is that a sufferer should see her doctor without delay for proper medical diagnosis and treatment. — Director of Public Information, The Canadian Society.

Dear Director: I gather that besides wasting valuable time these quack remedies may be a real threat.

According to the article: "there are pills to take, liquids to drink, ointments to rub on, gasses to breathe, and gadgets to wear, fit in, and be vibrated by." I see also that 90 per cent of the 17,000,000 arthritics in the U.S. will fall victim to a quack at one time or another in their lives.

There is still no known cause or cure for arthritis. Modern medicine and physiotherapy can help, and there is none but the slow patient way to achieve relief.

Thank you for making this clear to us. (Readers: write for my 10-cent leaflet, What To Do When Arthritis Strikes.

• • •

Dear Doris: You asked how our oldsters managed. This managing starts when the young person leaves home and strikes out for himself.

I am 81, crippled with arthritis, but I have no complaint. I can walk around home with the help of a cane. Kids bring my mail, go shopping for me and carry my wash back and forth. I left home at 13 and looked out for myself all these years.

I came from Germany to take up a homestead in Peace River Country. I hit the hungry depression years in the 30's, but I hung on. I learned English by writing everyday stories in a scribbler. There was no chance to get married; females don't want to marry a homesteader.

When I retired at 68, I bought a ghosthouse in a village in the mountains. It was not in a big city. I did not want to pay tribute to a King of the Asphalt Jungle, because he spends his money only with Flossie, Blondie and Hussie in Florida. I fixed up the ghosthouse with all comforts. MEANWHILE I sold my farm and have now the means to buy what I need.

I made my plan in Germany and stuck to it in all the 26 years I was on the homestead. I never regretted the move; the homestead gave my life the substance I needed, mentally and physically. —

Dear Homesteader: You did it the hard way, didn't you? And it must have been lonely too. Has your fine philosophy a spiritual ingredient, as well as a mental and physical one?

Confidential to Against Destruction: If you see children deliberately banging boards out of fences, tearing up telephone books, throwing stones at windows, don't just pass by on the other side and then write to me. Stop them or call the police. But don't blame all children for the sins of a few.

The best discipline means, not punishment but guidance. Responsible adults were once small children and quite oblivious of anyone else's wants and rights but theirs. Kind parents help them to see the light. Spankings and deprivations don't do the job nearly so well as discussion and praise.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

An Economical Marmalade

By MARY MOORE

Seven 8-oz. jars of three-fruit marmalade cost me between 50 and 55 cents including the paraffin. That works out to between seven or eight cents per jar. Can you marmalade lovers afford to ignore this? I have given every last detail so you do not need to be apprehensive about "boiling down" timing for I have given it and temperature.

TRIPLE FRUIT MARMALADE (seven 8 - oz. jars)

1 med. grapefruit
1 large orange (3" diameter)
1 med. lemon
12 cups water
6 cups sugar

Wash and dry fruits and cut into quarters. On a large kitchen plate or platter, to catch all juices, with a sharp knife cut into very thin slices—not more than 1-16" thick. Sharpen your knife at halftime to speed up slicing. (NOTE: This fine slicing took me 25 min.) Measure. I had four cups sliced fruit and juice, packed a little.

Turn into very large bowl or clean dishpan and add 12 cups water (or three times as much water as you have sliced fruit and juice). Soak in cool place, covered overnight. Mine soaked 18 hrs.

Turn into large preserving kettle and bring to boil and boil at low rolling boil 1 hr. until rinds are tender. Measure. I had eight cups. Add six cups sugar (¾ cup for each cup cooked fruit and juice).

Stir well and cook at low boil for 2 hrs. or until candy or fat thermometer reaches 218 deg. Fahr. Remove from heat at once.

Have sterilized and ready seven 8-oz. jars (or equivalent in various-sized jars which you have saved) and lids. Pour marmalade into them with kitchen pitcher with good lip. Cover with clean melted paraffin at once. Put on dried lids. Label and store. Save out one unsealed jar for breakfast next morning.

A preserver's delight — jars of golden amber.

Kierans Claims Post Office Shouldn't Absorb Postal Deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Eric Kierans, target of sharp public criticism from publishers for raising postal rates for publications, struck back vigorously Wednesday night with a charge that the publishers are guilty of "exaggeration or misrepresentation."

Insisting that the publishers are still being subsidized by taxpayers to the tune of $24,000,000 a year despite the increased postal rates, Mr. Kierans proposed that Parliament and the publishers should work out a system of direct financial grants to publications instead of hiding the help in a post office deficit.

Mr. Kierans appeared before the special Senate committee on mass media armed with colored charts and toting two mailbags full of parcels to illustrate his arguments.

Mr. Kierans, whose postal changes have been a regular target of witnesses since the Senate committee opened hearing their editorial policy when committee should investigate an example of newspapers changing their editorial lines when their own financial interests were involved.

He said that in September, 1968, when he announced increases in postal rates for third and fourth-class mail on the ground that revenue was not covering costs, he was acclaimed in newspaper editorials across the country for showing good, businesslike sense.

About a month later, when proposals to change rates affecting newspapers and periodicals were proposed to Parliament, there was "a startling reversal of editorial opinion" in the newspapers with the exception of the Montreal Star—perhaps because it did not have many mail subscribers—and the Toronto Star.

The minister said he received no more than a dozen letters of complaint about the rate increases from individuals or businessmen, but there were hundreds of articles and editorials published which criticized his action.

"All this ink was being poured out over the fact that newspapers and periodicals were being asked to pay something closer to their postage costs.

Referring to "many misrepresentations or misconceptions" given to the Senate committee, he said second-class mail amounts to 23.2 per cent of total mail handled in weight, 13.7 per cent by cubic volume, 12.5 per cent in number of items; but second-class revenue amounts to only 2.1 per cent of the total collected in postage last year.

With the rate increases, second-class mail in the current year will provide three per cent of total post office revenue, but accounts for more than seven per cent of post office costs.

Mr. Kierans cited testimony to the committee by R. S. Malone, head of FP Publications group of newspapers and magazines, and said the Winnipeg publisher had not told the whole story.

Observing that Mr. Malone had suggested the increased postal rates are killing farm newspapers, Mr. Kierans said he had not mentioned that his own Free Press Weekly will pay this year postage of $530,000, but the cost to the post office will be $2,275,000.

"This represents a loss, paid by the general Canadian public . . . of $1,745,000—which is by far the largest for any single Canadian publication." It amounts to one-fourteenth of the post office deficit in handling all Canadian dailies, weeklies, magazines, journals and periodicals.

Mr. Kierans said critics have not mentioned that 81 new publications appeared last year and, while 13 weekly newspapers ceased publication, 28 new ones started.

The minister said he wanted the post office to recover in revenue the costs of all its services, but to make publications pay the full amount would be too damaging.

Instead, he said, if Parliament decided it is in the national interest to subsidize the dissemination of information, it should vote a special grant for the purpose.

One way, would be for Parliament to instruct the post office to charge publications below-cost rates and then grant the post office special funds to make up the loss in revenue.

Weather Hampers Tanker Effort

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — Rough seas and high winds Wednesday hampered operations to halt the flow of oil into Nova Scotia's Chedabucto Bay from a grounded tanker. But winds were expected to abate today.

Forty-mile-an-hour gales, churning up 15-foot seas, limited work to a quick survey of the bay and some small-scale experiments on burning the oil Wednesday.

The stern section, containing about 1,000,000 gallons of the tanker's 3,800,000-gallon cargo, shifted on the rock Wednesday and officials at first thought it had floated free.

Later they said it had only moved further along the rock and punctured another tank in the process, freeing more oil. Up to then the stern had been sound.

The flow of oil from the bow section, hard aground, also picked up Wednesday as it was battered by the wind and seas. There has been no estimate of the amount of oil still remaining in its tanks.

The oil, thickened into molasses-like globules by the cold water, now covers the bay from Cape Auget to Janvrin Island.

An attempt to pump air into the front tanks of the stern section was to be made today, depending on the weather. The air is needed to provide buoyancy to the bulk, now at an angle in the water, with its propeller and rudder sticking in the air.

Three compressors have been placed aboard this section and when it was believed that it had slipped from the rock, unsuccessful efforts were made to put the salvage crew aboard by helicopter to start pumping air.

The transport department has ordered the stern section to be towed 400 miles to the end of the continental shelf and sunk.

Experiments on burning the oil—using small glass beads spread on the surface—continued Wednesday and were expected to resume today if weather permits.

Some of Wednesday's experiments were successful.

Ex-policeman Found Guilty Of Kidnapping Mary Nelles

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — A 12-man jury Wednesday found Richard Yeowart guilty in the kidnapping of Mary Nelles, rejecting his plea that he had tried to persuade the five other men involved not to carry out the abduction.

The former Metropolitan Toronto policeman, who had pleaded not guilty to the charge, showed little emotion when the verdict was announced and shook hands with each member of the jury as they left the courtroom.

Judge Alex Hall remanded the 25-year-old Yeowart in custody for sentencing Feb. 18 and told the jury they could have come to no other verdict in the face of the evidence.

Yeowart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yeowart, were in the courtroom. His girl friend cried: "Oh no, no" when the verdict was read.

Mrs. Nelles, 26, was kidnapped last Sept. 7 from her nearby Claremont home and released two days later after her husband, Henry Radcliffe Nelles, paid a $200,000 ransom.

Gary Adams, 30, described as the ringleader of the kidnap plot, now is serving a 15-year prison sentence. Michael Whiteside, 27, and John Rogan, 20, were given 12 years while Peter Burns, 23, and Ralph Cameron, 22, received 10 years.

Yeowart's counsel, Robert Hopkins, based the defence argument on the submission that Yeowart wanted no part of the ransom money and had tried to sabotage the plot.

Crown Attorney W. Bruce Affleck said in his rebuttal that although he believed Yeowart had tried to stop the kidnapping, the defendant's actions did not constitute a defence.

Typhoid Ship Leaves

The 28,000-ton P. and O. Lines ship had been marooned for three weeks at Vancouver, after an outbreak of typhoid fever among passengers and crew.

Capt. John W. Wacher said Tuesday "was the last possible day any late incubator on the ship could come down with typhoid."

Before the vessel left the Canadian port Feb. 4, medical officials said the chances of a "late-incubator" being aboard were about 8,000 to 1.

Policemen Won't Alter Their Note

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A skeleton staff of 16 members of the Newfoundland Constabulary bolstered by an undisclosed number of RCMP policed this city of 100,000 today as dissident policemen remained off their jobs. There were no reports of lawlessness.

A meeting of 174 constables and non-commissioned officers Wednesday night unanimously decided to reject a suggestion by Premier Joseph Smallwood that they return to work and redraft a letter to Police Chief Edgar Pittman "leaving out the rough spots."

Robert Wells, a local lawyer acting for the constables said in a statement following the meeting: "The decision was completely unanimous, not one comma, of that report can be changed, and it will not be changed." It was the first walkout of constables in the 99-year history of the force.

Estimates, Prices, Investments Occupy House

OTTAWA (CP) — Money and its management occupied the Commons Wednesday as the government tabled spending estimates for 1970-71 totalling $14,812,786,336 and debate focused on Canadian ownership of federally incorporated investment institutions.

Members stood respectfully as the estimates were presented in the name of Governor-General Roland Michener.

The traditional gesture of respect, however, gave way to the aggravated concern of Conservative financial critic Marcel Lambert that the possible entry of Quebec into the medical care insurance program later this year will throw out any plan to hold supplementary spending to a minimum.

Mr. Lambert also pointed out that the most recent estimates are double federal expenditures of $6,400,000,000 for 1963-64.

Money again was the subject as Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield led off questioning about the price-restraint agreement reached after two days of negotiating earlier in the week between business leaders and the prices and incomes commission.

Mr. Stanfield asked Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford what proposals Ottawa plans to make, as a result of the agreement, to provincial premiers at a federal-provincial conference next week. He also wondered whether the government plans to use "oral suasion" or more punitive means to control price increases.

Mr. Basford said the agreement was seen as "an extremely useful initiative."

Mr. Lambert attacked the government's investment companies bill during second reading.

He told the Commons he is concerned about a provision which gives to the cabinet final authority over sales of assets by investment companies, as a means to control the sale of Canadian investment firms to foreign interests.

Mr. Lambert was alarmed at the degree of power the bill gives the government.

It was one originally approved by the Senate in the last Parliament but was substantially revised for re-introduction in the new Parliament. Apart from the provision to control sales, there has also been added a measure to permit the Canada Deposit Insurance Corp. to make loans of up to $200,000,000 to investment houses facing serious debt problems.

The bill, in effect, makes the deposit insurance corporation the lender of last resort for investment houses, much as recommended by Mr. Justice Samuel Hughes in his report on the 1965 collapse of the Atlantic Acceptance Corp.

Herb Gray, minister without portfolio, explained that the general purpose of the bill is to establish reporting and inspection procedures for companies that raised investment funds on debt instruments.

He stressed that the act is intended to apply to companies that function mainly as investment intermediaries. He said the provision to permit loans from the deposit insurance company would hold only in emergency situations and would put Canadian companies on a more equal footing with foreign-owned competitors.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) welcomed the protection contained in the bill for Canadian investors—"a house-keeping measure"—but called for a broader act that will regulate not only investment houses but trust, insurance and loan firms. The legislation, he said, is similar to bills now in the committee stage to cover the other financial institutions. All should be brought together to give greater government control over Canada's capital resources.

The Commons will continue consideration today of a motion to send the bill to the finance committee.

Trudeau, Stanfield Both Talk to Mayors

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau entertained a group of mayors from a number of large Canadian cities at a dinner Wednesday night.

A spokesman in the Prime Minister's office said the dinner was held at Mr. Trudeau's official residence, 24 Sussex Drive.

Earlier, informed sources said the after-dinner conversation would be about how the mayors can help check inflation.

It was also described as a chance for the mayors to air their concerns to the prime minister. It was believed 10 mayors attended, but the guest list was not disclosed.

Prime Minister Trudeau has used previous Wednesday night dinners at his residence as occasions to get first-hand views from youth, businessmen, labor leaders, artists and academics.

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield Wednesday night met privately with local municipal officials in a downtown restaurant to hear firsthand some of the urban problems they face.

At the same time, in Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau was having dinner with 10 of Canada's city mayors for much the same purpose.

Mr. Stanfield, in an interview after the dinner, said it was "purely co-incidental" that the dinners were on the same night, but he added with a smile that his dinner had been planned first.

Givens May Quit Politics Unless Attention Given Cities

TORONTO (CP) — Philip Givens, former mayor of Toronto and the Liberal member of Parliament for York West, said Wednesday night he may quit politics if the Trudeau government does not soon begin to pay more attention to the problems of the cities.

Mr. Givens said in an interview on The Pierre Berton TV show he has no chance to influence government policies, and also is embarrassed in having to follow the party line in voting against Opposition motions criticizing the government's handling of urban affairs.

He said he sees no future for himself in Ottawa, but that he is not considering returning to municipal politics or entering provincial politics.

"It all depends on what will happpen within the next 2½ years" before the next federal election, he said.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1970

by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

Belleville's Camel-herders will swap humps for bumps Friday night when they try and shepherd a junior B hockey crowd into the Memorial Arena.

Under the guidance of chief camel-herder Jack Lazenby, (who presumably earned the office because he takes the longest pause between sips), the dromedary wranglers and their Shriner cohorts will engage in a broomball massacre with the Knights of Columbus — Alhambra 109 mob.

The object — to help draw local attention to the fact that Belleville hockey-watchers have a first-rate junior team to support.

The unofficial city broomball Stupor Bowl is billed as an 8.15 preliminary to the night's main event, a 9 p.m. game between the Ellis Juniors (Hooray!) and the Peterborough Don Byes (Boooo!)

The opposing broomball factions are not taking their Friday the 13th encounter with a grain of salt (unless it's thrown over their left shoulders).

Edward Nicholson, the Knights of Columbus' Grand Pilsener, has put his lineup through strenuous preparation this week, including two solid hours of "Hail Marys" Monday, 20 laps of Toronto's Labatt building Tuesday, and a rugged session of stop-and-start elbow-oiling Wednesday.

Alhambra 109's Wilf Fitzgibbon will probably get the starting goaltending assignment — both for the game and in his life.

Meanwhile, Harold Bankier's adequate frame will demand a keen scoring eye to be beaten in the Shriners' net.

Of particular interest to the Knights will be Harry McConnell, the big cheese for the Fezzerheads.

McConnell is regarded as one of the best left-handed broom shots south of Roslin, where he has spent the last three evenings firing frozen horse tracks through an inner tube.

Winner of Friday night's broomball showdown will receive the Eastern Ontario Good Housekeeping Award of the month.

Of somewhat more sustained interest will be the 9 o'clock offering by the Ellis Juniors.

With their backs to the wall, and mindful of last winter's basement finish by the Belleville B's, the Ellis gang arose to the occasion with seven undefeated outings.

"I haven't said anything all season in the way of back-patting," Crawford beams. "But now we've made it, I can say it was strictly a team effort."

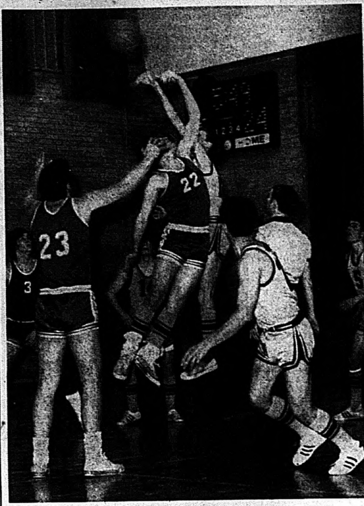
Friday night's game with Peterborough affords the local hockey following an ideal chance to make up for the empty seats the juniors have ignored all season in achieving a playoff berth.

Sports Brief

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro's major policy statement on amateur sport won't be delivered on schedule because his cabinet colleagues want to see it first, sources said today. Mr. Munro, whose portfolio includes sport, was to have made the policy speech Feb. 27 on the eve of the meeting of the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation. But with cabinet now insisting that the policy be revealed to it first, the meeting has been postponed to March 20 at the minister's request.



Come to Papa

Quinte senior basketball player Bill Skinner waits with open arms for the ball, as Leo Baker (22) and Greg Brown of Trenton battle for possession. Quinte won the game 54-47 to complete a sweep of the three games played last night.

Late Senior Surge Gives Saints Sweep

Quinte Seniors outscored Trenton 9-2 in the final two minutes of play to complete a three game sweep for the Saints in Bay of Quinte basketball play last night, as the juniors and bantams posted easy victories.

Trenton led at the end of three quarters 37-36 but missed several key foul shots near the end of the game, as Quinte took a 54-47 win. Six - foot, four - inch centre Steve "Stretch" Ogden played one of his better games of the year, controlling the boards and stuffing numerous Trenton scoring attempts. Ogden led the scoring with 16 points, followed closely by Leo Baker (15) who played strongly in the second half after a poor start. Pete Middleton added 10 points to the winning total. Greg Brown was top man for Trenton matching Ogden's 16 - point output. Spiro Kanellos sank 11 of 16 foul shots and added two field goals for a 15 - point effort.

The Quinte juniors kept their 10 - game unbeaten string intact as they handed the visitors a 52-19 setback. Quinte, which has featured outstanding defensive play most of the year held the Trenton juniors to six points in the last half. Darwin Easton scored 13 points for game's high total with Rick Meagher and Barry Culkin eight apiece. Dow had six points and Weston four in the Trenton loss.

Quinte's bantam team ran up 40 points in the first half as they posted a 60-35 win over Trenton.

Terry Collins was the game's high scorer tossing in 22 points. Bruce Nickel was good for 10 points and Ian Hayman and Don McTaggart contributed nine points apiece. Wilson had nine points for Trenton.

Gym Site of Pre-season Kicks

While most people in the area are kicking cars that won't start or their spouse out of bed to shovel out the driveway, members of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association are warming up for the coming season by booting soccer balls in the Quinte Secondary School gym.

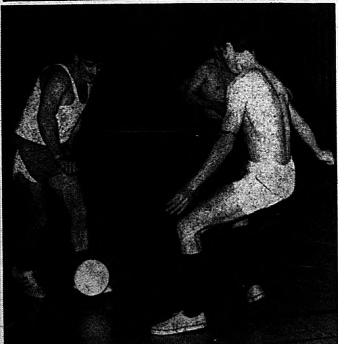
Members of many of the league teams are meeting Wednesday nights to work themselves into condition for the coming season. While the league opener in May doesn't seem to be "a stone's kick away", getting into shape early is especially essential in soccer, which is one of sport's most demanding games, physically.

Even with the early practice start, the first few games can be rough. As one member puts it, "These sessions are certainly a help, but even so, you notice the difference when you start running on the bigger fields."

Another aim of the practice session is to promote soccer to Canadian youngsters. At present many of the league's players have learned their soccer in Europe and later migrated to Canada. To help with the development of local youngsters the Quinte grouping hopes to add one or two junior-age teams to last year's seven-team entry.

At this time, soccer in Canada is far behind that of all of the European and South American countries. Ken Fletcher who learned the sport in Scotland claims, "The level of soccer in Scotland is way above that of North America. A good junior team could probably beat Toronto's professionals."

The Quinte league plans to maintain the seven teams operating last year and possibly add one or two more. The future of soccer in the area looks rather promising with a strong minor league system developing that should produce top quality players for the future.



Putting His Foot in It

Joe Iasenza attempts to move past Bill Lucas as players from the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association scrimmage in the Quinte Secondary School gym. Members of the league teams work out on Wednesday nights to reach top condition for their schedule, which opens in May.

Contributes 6 Points

Mikita's Rise to Fame Ripe for Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

After a slow National Hockey League start, Stan Mikita is beginning to move.

The Chicago Black Hawks centre picked up six points on three goals and three assists Wednesday night as the Black Hawks overpowered Pittsburgh Penguins 7-1. A week ago, the former scoring champion collected five points in his team's 8-4 victory over Boston Bruins.

The six points Wednesday night gave Mikita a total of 63 this season, still a long way from scoring leader Bobby Orr of Boston, who has 84.

Orr picked up two assists Wednesday as the Bruins rallied to defeat the Blues 3-2 in St. Louis. In other games, East Division-leading New York Rangers downed Los Angeles Kings 6-3, Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 3-3 tie and Oakland Seals nipped Minnesota North Stars 2-1.

Mikita was not only the star in the game against Pittsburgh but also was prominent in the fight-filled encounter. He was involved in one of two major brawls during the game and drew a major and minor for battling with Bryan Watson.

The victory was Chicago's fifth in a row over the Penguins and moved the Black Hawks to within a point of Detroit Red Wings in the battle for the fourth eastern playoff spot.

The Bruins continued their domination of West Division clubs by edging the Blues, who lost their fifth in a row. Boston has yet to lose to a western team in 27 meetings.

John McKenzie's power-play goal with less than two minutes remaining in the game gave Boston the edge. Orr, who set up the winning score, also assisted on a goal by Fred Stanfield. Bill Speer got the other Boston goal, his first of the season.

St. Louis had taken a 1-0 lead early in the second period when Bob Plager's attempted goal-mouth pass to Red Berenson was accidentally tipped in by Speer. Plager got credit for the goal.

The Rangers got their fifth straight victory against the Kings, bombarding goalie Gerry Desjardins with 45 shots, 19 in the third period.

Rod Gilbert paced the Rangers with two goals while defencemen Brad Park and Arnie Brown, and Dave Balon and Bill Fairbairn got the others. Eddie Joyal and defenceman Bill White scored for Los Angeles.

Mike Walton scored two goals to lead the Leafs to their tie with the Canadiens at Montreal. Walton's second goal, his 17th of the season, came with Toronto goaltender Bruce Gamble on the bench in favor of a sixth attacker. His first goal was on a power play in the first period. Ron Ellis scored the other Toronto goal, with Gamble getting his first NHL assist.

STAN MIKITA

Ralph Backstrom and Mickey Redmond scored the first two Montreal goals and before defenceman Serge Savard's goal at 7:40 of the third sent Montreal ahead 3-2 with Montreal playing a man short.

Claude Provost, Montreal's veteran right winger, suffered a damaged nose when struck by a puck during the game but a club spokesman said it did not appear to be broken nor did he require stitches. John Ferguson missed the game as a result of being struck by a puck near the eye in the previous game.

Outstanding goaltending robbed the North Stars of at least a tie in their game with Oakland. Charlie Hodge, who had not seen action for 36 games, replaced Gary Smith and shut out the Stars in the final period, stopping 21 shots in the game.

Centre Ted Hampson opened Oakland scoring in the first period but Bill Collins tied it for the North Stars early in the second. Defenceman Harry Howell scored the tie-breaker midway in the second period when he intercepted a clearing pass by the Minnesota defence and fired a 45-foot screen shot past Cesare Maniago.

The North Stars have won one victory in their last 27 games while suffering 17 defeats. They tied nine.

Play resumes tonight when the Leafs take on the Flyers at Philadelphia and the Blues meet the Red Wings in Detroit.

Stars Scream Foul

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ralph Hurley, manager of the Syracuse, N.Y. Stars hockey team, says a statement by Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, about the Allan Cup competition status of the Stars is "pure discrimination 1970 style."

Hurley said in an interview Wednesday night that he would make no further statements about the dispute with the CAHA until after he had consulted Alan R. Eagleson, legal adviser for the National Hockey League Players Association.

Juckes said in Winnipeg earlier Wednesday that the Stars were ruled ineligible for Allan Cup play on the basis that they are members of a non-eligible intermediate league.

Hurley's response to this was: "If Mr. Juckes is going by his own rule book then he's absolutely wrong on all counts. As far as I'm concerned, this is only a smokescreen for the real reason. After all, Victoriaville, Que. are also a senior team in an intermediate league, or don't they use the same rule book?"

Hurley had said Tuesday he would meet with Eagleson on the matter. He also said then that "there's petty nationalism mixed up in this thing—they figured they'd embarrass themselves if an American team won the Allan Cup."

The Stars are the only U.S. entry in the Ottawa District Hockey Association Intermediate League and currently lead the league. They were ruled ineligible for Allan Cup competition by the CAHA last month.

Sport Briefs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Goalie Doug Favell of Philadelphia Flyers cut his heel in a freak locker room accident Wednesday and underwent surgery, the club reported. Keith Allen, general manager of the NHL team, said Favell will be sidelined in a cast for at least a month. He cut a tendon when he fell backwards into a skate.

TORONTO (CP) — Detroit's Bayview Yacht Club Tuesday was accepted as the fifth American challenger for the 1972 Canada's Cup yacht race series. Manitou, of Toronto's Royal Canadian Yacht Club, won the 1969 series on Lake Ontario last September, defeating Niagara of the Cleveland, Ohio, Yacht Club in three straight races. The defending champion RCYC stipulated the American challenger must be decided from a series of trials. Other U.S. yacht clubs in the running are Cleveland, Rochester, N.Y., Chicago, and Grosse Point, Mich. After winning the 1969 series, Manitou was purchased by Carter Sales of Bayview and will beu sed as a trial horse for the Detroit club's entry.

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's boxers won the first three bouts Wednesday and went on to rout the United States' amateur team 9-2 before a crowd of more than 13,000 in the Sports Palace. It was the Soviet Union's second straight victory over Americans. The Russians won the opening dual meet, 6-5 at Las Vegas, Nev., last Oct. 25.

Ellis Has Clay's Footwork, Tunney's Finesse: Braddock

This is the second of a series of articles by James J. Braddock, former world heavyweight champion, analyzing the Joe Frazier-Jimmy Ellis fight for the undisputed heavyweight crown in Madison Square Garden on Monday, February 16th.

By JAMES J. BRADDOCK

Jimmy Ellis will be 30 Feb. 24. I was 30 years old when I beat Max Baer for the heavyweight title. The age of 30 is a good age for heavyweights. I was at least a 10-to-1 underdog against Baer. Nobody believed anybody could beat the handsome strong man from California, least of all a makeshift fighter off the Hoboken docks like me.

Ellis is a 5-to-1 shot against Joe Frazier, a strong man from Philadelphia. That's a lot of bunk. There's no such thing as a long shot in boxing when two top professional fighters get into a ring. As I see it, and I'm not picking anybody just yet, Frazier should be maybe a seven or eight to five over Ellis and that mainly on the fact that he's been more active.

We've taken a look at Frazier already. We know that he's a guy who likes to pour it on and wear his opposition down. He's done a fairly good job of it in most of his fights because he's not been beaten yet. What about Jimmy Ellis?

Some people say that Ellis fights a lot like Cassius Clay. You can't spar hundreds of rounds with a guy without some of the moves rubbing off. Ellis makes what may look like Clay moves but Ellis is a lot more than that. He has a style completely his own and every time I've seen him he impresses me as a real smart fighter who can change styles to fit the other guy.

He looks like Clay, with his shifty footwork and the speed of his hands. And he looks like Gene Tunney in the way he boxes. He has a little of Ezzard Charles and maybe some of Jersey Joe Walcott, too. Put them all together and you have Jimmy Ellis. He has a little bit of everything.

I have been around a long time and have watched a lot of fighters but I have never seen as sneaky a right hand as Ellis's. It is a punch he throws when he's ready and he has been able to time it almost perfectly because it does the job. That's how he got into the heavyweight title picture. They fed Ellis to Johnny Persol in a Garden semi-final one night and Ellis landed the right in the first and it was all over. Ellis knocked down Oscar Bonavena twice with that right hand, something Frazier couldn't do even once in 25 rounds with Bonavena.

Simon Fraser Quarterback Tops List of 76 Draftees

TORONTO (CP) — "Eagle Keys should win the Coach-of-the-Year award for years to come—he's got his own alumni organization."

Dennie Veitch, general manager of British Columbia Lions, made the observation while reviewing the changes in coaching and front-office personnel which have swept the Canadian Football League.

"Look at Jack Gotta in Ottawa, Jim Spavital of Winnipeg, and Jim Duncan in Calgary," Veitch said. "They all coached under the Eagle."

"And if those three votes aren't enough to swing it," Veitch said, "Keys is a close friend of Jackie Parker." Parker is in his first full season as a head coach—with B.C.

Three of the five Western Football Conference clubs have had coaching changes since last year; a fourth has a coach going into his second season.

Montreal Alouettes have former star quarterback Sam Etcheverry as head coach. They have a new owner in Sam Berger, a new general manager in Red O'Quinn and a new assistant coach in Bob Ward.

Etcheverry has been out of football for years; Berger bought the club from Joe Atwell and brought in O'Quinn and Ward from Ottawa.

Jim Spavital, former assistant coach with Saskatchewan Roughriders, succeeded fired Joe Zaleski as the new head coach with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

In Vancouver, Jackie Parker, former assistant coach with the Lions, took over toward the end of last season when head coach Jim Champion was fired. The Lions picked up Kay Dalton, head coach of the Alouettes until Etcheverry moved in, as an assistant.

Going the other way was Joe Scannella, offensive co-ordinator of the Alouettes, who became head coach at the University of Vermont.

Gene Gaines, defensive captain with Ottawa, moved over to Montreal as an assistant and a player.

"A philosophy exists within the CFL—and I'm quite proud of it—that you look first within your own club and second within your own league," Veitch said.

But sentiment plays only a small part.

"You look for people who have had experience in Canadian ball. Canadian football is a different game from all other games. You really have to coach in the Canadian game."

Veitch, here for the CFL annual meeting, said "you'll find a guy with Canadian experience somewhere in every successful NFL franchise," and pointed to Minnesota Vikings as an example, with Armstrong of Edmonton as an assistant to head coach Bud Grant, formerly of Winnipeg.

By hiring within the league, a team saves at least that year what an import coach spends "learning the game," Veitch says.

"We could have had our choice of coaches from the U.S., but football in Canada is an immediate business.

"You win right now, you get paid right now."

Frazier Punching For Last Laugh

NEW YORK (AP) — Fighting for the undisputed heavyweight boxing championship is serious business, and that's how Joe Frazier is treating his preparation for his fight against Jimmy Ellis.

Humor, even his own, does not bring a smile to the face of Frazier as he trains for Monday's scheduled 15-round fight at Madison Square Garden.

One of Frazier's handlers has a mechanical device which transmits the sound of laughter and is placed in a cloth bag which is lettered "A Bag of Laughs."

It brings smiles and laughs from those congregated in Frazier's dressing room, but not from Joe Frazier.

Frazier, champion of six states including New York, knows the dangers of fighting and realizes Ellis, the World Boxing Association king, probably will be the most dangerous opponent he has ever faced. He intends to be as ready as possible.

"I've got respect for all fighters," Frazier said after working out Wednesday. "I've got to get in shape for regardless of who he is.

"I don't think Ellis can move away from me as fast as I can move in on him," Frazier said.

Ellis is a boxer while Frazier is a puncher, and Yank Durham, Frazier's manager, thinks Ellis won't be able to stay away from his man.

Krouse Wins Right to Sue Car Company

TORONTO (CP) — Linebacker Bob Krouse of Hamilton Tiger-Cats Wednesday won the right to proceed with a suit against Chrysler Canada Ltd. and an advertising agency for allegedly using his photograph for commercial purposes.

Mr. Justice W. D. Parker of the Ontario Supreme Court dismissed a motion by Chrysler for an order to strike out Krouse's statement of claim against it and Grant Advertising of Canada Ltd.

Krouse sued for damages, alleging invasion of privacy, after a photograph of himself in uniform appeared in a promotional item called Plymouth Pro Football Spotter.

Krouse said he did not consent to the use of the photograph for commercial purposes and did not receive any remuneration for it.

Mr. Justice Parker called the action "novel," but said it had not been shown that the court "in this jurisdiction would not recognize a right to privacy."

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Atlantic Gale Sinks Freighter

DOVER, England (AP) — Gales whipped the Atlantic coasts of Europe and Britain today, sinking a Danish freighter and leaving at least eight more ships in trouble.

At the height of the storm, 10 sailors were injured in an explosion aboard the submerged British submarine Auriga in Gibraltar.

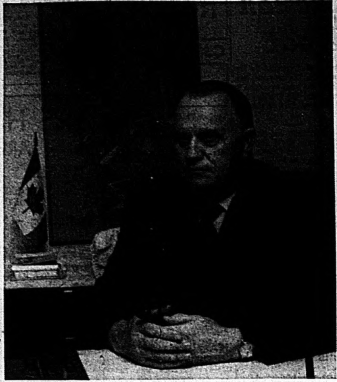
Hit by 102-mile-an-hour winds off France, the 300-ton Danish cargo ship Renate S flashed a distress signal and sank just after dawn in the Bay if Biscay. The German freighter Thoralbe picked up the Renate S's seven-man crew when they abandoned ship.

The 10 British submarine ratings were hurt when a battery aboard the Auriga exploded beneath their bunks. None of the injuries was serious.

Off the French coast the 502-ton Belgian coaster Nicole radioed a distress signal and reported: "We are abandoning ship." The message said the Nicole's engine room was flooded.

The Greek freighter Santa Paolo, 1,932 tons, radioed that gales were forcing it toward shore on the Bay of Biscay.

The 3,420-ton freighter Czestochowa from Poland called for help, saying it was drifting toward the French coast north of Brest.



Quebec Representative

Baby Fed Directly to Heart

MONTREAL (CP) — Matthew Berke was two months old and dying last October when Dr. Sydney Pedvis decided to throw him a "lifeline," a technique of intravenous feeding that involves inserting a tube through the neck and directly into the heart.

Today Matthew is home with his family, weighs 12 pounds and is reported doing well.

The drama began at the hospital when Matthew was only three weeks old. Shortly after birth he developed severe diarrhea which could not be controlled.

The bacteria were brought under control but not before the lining of the intestine had been stripped away by the ailment.

Consequently, whenever Matthew was fed by mouth, there was not enough lining left to absorb the food, and fluid loss continued.

Dr. Pedvis knew the intestine needed a complete rest of three or four weeks so that it could rebuild its lining.

For a month, from the end of September to October, he was fed intravenously. But this method could be used for only a few days at a time.

That's when Dr. Pedvis decided to try the "lifeline" method of intravenous feeding, developed in Philadelphia in 1968.

"We inserted a tube at the neck and through fluoroscopy traced its path as it was directed into the right atrium—a chamber—of the heart."

There the heavy flow of blood quickly diluted a highly concentrated nutrient solution so that doctors could substantially increase the concentration of nutrients for the baby.

The rich liquid soon provided Matthew with all the essential food requirements and he began to gain weight rapidly.

Equal Law Is Oppression

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

Enemies can rarely be reconciled unless each thinks he is getting somewhat the better of the compromise; this is why "50-50" solutions so rarely manage to maintain the peace, either between disputing countries or divorcing couples.

• • •

For every folly that ignorance itself commits, ignorance of ignorance commits a thousand follies a thousand times worse.

• • •

What's wrong with "equal law" in a grossly unequal society was expressed in a single poetic line by William Blake more than a century ago: "One law for the lion and ox is oppression."

• • •

The House of Parliament in England has voted overwhelmingly to abolish capital punishment for all offenses, even though every poll shows that the majority of Britons are in favor of capital punishment for certain crimes; whether one regards this act as "enlightened leadership" or "defiance of majority desire" depends upon one's feeling toward capital punishment more than upon the theory of self-government.

• • •

The less faith you have in yourself, the more you have in a "cause."

• • •

The mind has a "temperature" just as the body has, but it is not uniformly the same in all minds as it is in all bodies, for there are minds that are chronically feverish, those that are clammily cold, and some that alternate between fever and chills, so that "normality" is impossible to designate in the mental sphere.

• • •

Patriotism, more than charity, begins at home, but many's the time I have heard a politician declaiming his love of country at a meeting to which he has fled from a home containing a resentful wife and disaffected children.

• • •

Teachers should be graded regularly on the quality of examinations they give — for dumb questions and trivial assignments are fully as common among teachers as dumb answers among pupils, and may ever inspire the latter.

• • •

The upper classes in American life are characterized chiefly by the emasculation of the men and the embittered dominance of the women, which seems an uncommonly high price to pay for affluence and status, and may explain the staggering and stultifying consumption of martinis at this level.

• • •

Churches should send out missionaries to learn from other religions, not to convert them, and then some degree of amity might be possible.

Retraining Justified

Heart Attacks Not End of Life

TORONTO (CP) — The life expectancy for survivors of heart attacks is high enough to justify energetic rehabilitation and job retraining programs, a University of Toronto professor of medicine said Wednesday.

Dr. Alexander D. McKelvey told an Ontario Heart Foundation symposium on heart problems in business and industry that people who recover from heart attacks stand a good chance of resuming normal activities.

He said 75 to 80 per cent of those who have a heart attack live five years or more; one-half live more than 10 years, and one quarter more than 20 years.

Dr. McKelvey said rehabilitation should begin in the hospital. When the patient returns to work, there should be constant communication with his doctor, his foreman, the plant doctor and public health nurse.

Dr. Lloyd A. Wright, western area medical director for Bell Canada, said 24 men and one woman of the company's 38,000 workers died of heart disease in 1968.

He said the company has estimated that death and illness from heart disease has cost Bell about $5,196,000, directly and indirectly.

Dr. Donald K. Grant, director of medical services of Ontario Hydro, said employers think twice before hiring applicants who are overweight, sedentary, and who bite their nails, chain smoke or reveal a family history of heart disease.

He said men of muscular body build are predisposed to heart attacks, while tall, skinny men are least likely to get a heart attack. Careful selection of employees is one way industry can reduce the costly loss of key men through heart disease, he said.

Ice Capades Production Claimed Visual Treat

NEW YORK (AP) — Highlights of the Ice Capades on NBC Wednesday night was ablaze with sparkling color and was a visual treat.

And color is increasingly important to full enjoyment of TV spectacles.

In content, the Ice Capades was practically indistinguishable from other ice shows. It had the soloist, the duet, the clown and of course the production numbers, plus elaborate scenery and sparkling costumes.

There were also the usual non-skating stars, in this case Bobbie Gentry and Ottawa-born Lorne Greene who walked around the slippery surface with caution and sang acceptably.

These programs are enormously popular with family audiences. NBC's recent circus program and Peggy Fleming's ice show landed on top of their respective Nielsen lists and so, probably will this most recent entry.

CBS and Jackie Gleason now are in one of their occasional periods of glaring at each other. It is contract renewal time and there is some evidence that the Great One is not in as good a bargaining position as usual.

Gleason's Nielsen ratings have not been particularly impressive this season, particularly on nights he has presented variety hours instead of the Honeymooners. His program, too, is among the most expensive to produce—and the Florida-based star turns out only 20 shows a year.

The film studio that produced NBC's recent World Premiere drama My Sweet Charlie is so impressed by its reception that it slapped it right into a New York moviehouse for a run and now is busily pitching a series starring Patty Duke to a network for next season.

The film, with Miss Duke playing a white girl in trouble who is befriended by a Negro, racked up the biggest audience for any movie broadcast this season and drew critics praise.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market declined fractionally in light mid-morning trading today as a rally that began late Wednesday petered out.

A sharp recovery in the final hour of trading Wednesday sent the market to a sharp gain. The turnabout was touched off by strength on Wall Street which began on rumors of a possible bank rate reduction. However, most major banks in New York quickly denied such rumors.

On index at Toronto today, industrials were down .20 to 178.12 and western oils .68 to 202.32. Golds gained .46 to 151.93 and base metals .28 to 112.46.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 508,000 shares compared with 522,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Inter-City Gas, at 14¼ bid and 14⅜ asked, did not trade. The company will seek shareholders' approval of a 2-for-1 stock split.

Chrysler traded an odd lot of 85 shares at 29¼. The stock rose 1 Wednesday although the company announced it had cut its quarterly dividend to 15 cents from 50 cents.

Wednesday, the market made a sudden reversal in the last hour of trading and rose sharply in light volume.

For most of the session, the market appeared headed for its second consecutive downward session as it held with a small loss.

On index, industrials closed up 1.36 to 178.32 after being down .17 in the first four hours of trading. Western oils were down .85 to 203.00, base metals .24 to 112.18 and golds .19 to 151.47.

Losses outnumbered gains 248 to 206 with 263 issues unchanged.

Chrysler jumped 1 to 29¼ after touching 27½ in earlier quarterly dividend to 15 cents from 50 cents.

Firm to Build Home Under Ice For Use in Arctic Exploration

One of Ben Ackerman's ideas for ignoring the realities of life in the harsh North is an underwater habitat that he says would enable up to a dozen persons to live under 12 feet of ice for months.

Complete with living quarters, workshop and laboratory, it would be part of an under-ice exploration system designed to exploit offshore marine and mineral resources.

Though it's only a design on paper now, and it will be perhaps three years before the first habitat is ready for winter testing in the Great Lakes, the Dominion Welding Engineering Co. Ltd., Wednesday announced plans to go ahead with it.

Part of the problem to be overcome is the estimated $6,000,000 cost and here the company said it has had favorable interim response from Ottawa for federal government assistance in the project.

Mr. Ackerman, a consultant for the company which turns out diving and high-altitude simulators in this little town 20 miles north of Toronto, is a veteran of offshore diving in the Arctic Ocean. He was in charge of United States and Canadian navy divers during construction of the DEW (Distant Early Warning) Line in the 1950s.

Mr. Ackerman described his proposed habitat as simply two barge-type vessels, each 75 fet long with 25-foot beams, of carbon steel, towed into the Arctic and placed in position over the relatively shallow continental shelf, about 600 feet deep.

One would be sunk to the sea bed. In it would live and work the scientists, technicians and divers engaged in exploration. The other would remain on the surface as a base and be frozen into the 12-foot-thick ice sheet. Supplies would be taken to the base by air and relayed to the submerged habitat through air locks.

Each vessel would operate in its own atmosphere, like a space ship. Replenishment of the atmosphere would be by using oxygen, carbon dioxide being removed by chemicals, or by using a generative system such as that used by nuclear submarines.

Dominion Welding said plans are to construct one vessel initially. After testing in the Great Lakes, it would be towed to an Arctic site for further trials. This vessel would carry decompression equipment and a small submersible for underwater exploration. The second ship would be built later.

Mr. Ackerman, 49, a native of Peterborough, served on corvettes and minesweepers in the North Atlantic during the Second World War. He retired in 1955 with the rank of lieutenant-commander.

English 'Powers' in Quebec Are Defended by Teachers

MONTREAL (CP) — It would be tyranny for French-Canadians to take away the powers of the English-speaking community in Quebec, a spokesman for the Federation of English-speaking Catholic Teachers said Wednesday.

Stan Machna made the statement in presenting the federation's brief to a provincial royal commission studying the status of the French language in Quebec.

Edward McWhinney, a member of the commission, said he was astonished at the use of the word "powers" to refer to rights which are basically privileges.

Mr. Machna replied that all rights are acquired. When the English gave in to demands for French-language education in Quebec after the conquest, French-Canadians gained acquired rights just like English-Canadians.

"Quebec is a bicultural society which must become truly bicultural," the brief said.

Since both languages are well established in the province, the brief said, the refusal to grant individuals the choice of either English or French would destroy "the delicate equilibrium" between individual and collective rights.

"This could create a precedent allowing a collectivity to tyrannize the individual."

Doctor Is Really Medical Detective

It's worth repeating that MD might also stand for Medical Detective as well as for Doctor of Medicine.

The doctor's daily life is one against the human body and taking measures to eradicate them. Nowhere is this more true than in the fight against "contact dermatitis." Let me give you some examples:

Here is a young girl who has developed oozing and itching and crusting of her fingers and forearms. Nothing seemed to help until the real offender was discovered — hiding in a pretty container of fingernail polish. When she discontinued its use, her chronic inflammation of the skin cleared up.

Here is a young secretary who has been plagued by a chronic inflammation of her eyelids and neck. Cause? Sensitivity to a hair dye.

One woman had to give up wearing fur pieces to produce cure of a persistent inflammation of the skin of her neck. A businessman changed his wristband to plain leather. After discarding his expensive metal band his skin inflammation disappeared.

Here is a school teacher whose improvement came only after it was discovered that she was super-sensitive to her spectacle-frame.

It may take weeks or months to run down the proper clues, but it's important to keep on searching. Treating the flamed skin without removing the actual cause of the trouble is like pouring water into a leaky bowl.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are silicone injections of the breast staisfactory? Or do they eventually slide around? — Mrs. W.

Comment: They are unsatisfactory, not used at this time by most competent plastic surgeons, and as you've aptly described, may eventually "slide around" and be ineffective.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are cigars an improvement over cigarettes? I hate the smell of them in the house. But if it means my husband's health, I'll suffer along with them. — Mrs. B.

Comment: Statistically, it seems that they are not so harmful to the lungs and heart as cigarettes. But I personally believe that "tobacco is tobacco" and some day the distinction may not be made between cigarettes, pipe and cigars (in that order) as being more or less liable to injure the smoker. Cigar and pipe smokers inhale more than they realize.

But meanwhile, Mrs. B., be thankful that your husband has gone from very bad habit to the supposedly lesser bad habit. And who am I — not knowing how much he smokes or how he smokes — to tell him to quit?

Comment: Not only in allergy, but in all diseases, the emotions are a part of it all, again. You can't separate the psyche (mind) from the soma (body). However, I don't go along with the beliefs of some that only psychoneurotics suffer from hay fever or asthma. It's bad enough to suffer, without wearing a false label.

Investment Clubs

Reading Is Vital

This is the first in a series of articles on investment clubs.

INVESTMENT CLUBS

By ROBERT CAMERON
Toronto Telegram News Service

They've all thrown an initial $50 into the kitty, and promised to provide another $15 each every month.

You've elected officers, started a bank account, signed on with a broker, and ordered three dozen jelly doughnuts for your monthly meeting.

Now what?

Or you could phone your broker and tell him to buy you anything that looks good.

Both choices are equally useless — although you might do better financially with the second alternative.

Let's get something straight right now. You're not going to get rich in your neighborhood investment club. Your main purpose in joining — if you're like most club members — is to learn enough about the market to do your own investing.

You're not learning anything by leaving investment decisions to chance, or to your broker.

I'm not suggesting you ignore your broker's advice. I am suggesting you treat the advice as advice and not as the word of God, or else quit the club and join a mutual fund.

Learn enough about earnings and profit and price-earnings ratios so you can understand your broker's recommendations. Later on you'll learn to evaluate the advice.

If you're on your club's investment committee, you'll want vast amounts of knowledge about any company whose stock you buy. That way you won't have to worry all the time about losing your neighbors' money and having to move to some other block.

So how do you get the information?

The Financial Post Corporation Service is an excellent source. The FP information cards give a wealth of financial information about a company under more than a dozen headings — more information than you'll probably know how to use.

But you can tell at a glance what the high and low price of the stock has been for the past five years, and what the earnings and price earnings ratios have been.

A supplementary card gives current information on a company. If you've bought a stock, expecting it to rise, you'll want information on quarterly earnings. A low quartery report can be the first danger signal.

Quarterly earnings information appears in daily newspapers and in the Financial Post each week. You should read financial pages each day, and the weekly financial press — the Financial Post, or Financial Times, or Northern Miner.

The more you read, the better understanding you'll have of new developments in business and how they affect the company and industry in which you've invested.

Try to get as wide a spectrum of investment advice as possible. Various club members might have private accounts with several brokers. Get research material from all these brokers and compare them.

Find out which brokerage firms have monthly newsletters. Get on as many mailing lists as you can.

And finally, read books. Your local library should have several "how to invest" type books for beginners.

Call the Investment Dealers Association and ask for their educational pamphlets.

This reading is necessary because it doesn't do much good having 20 pages of information about a company if you haven't enough background knowledge to interpret the facts and figures.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 13

Your birthday today: Your years ahead includes much excitement, detours from time to time and place to place. With confidence, you have the chance to smooth out all problems as you progress.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The day is full of sound and chaos, nothing of lasting impact but exciting while it lasts. Outdoor activities produce more satisfaction than indoor doings. Let well enough alone wherever you can.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): At its strongest, your personality projects only at a fairly low intensity today. This may help relieve you of blame for some of the foolishness that develops. Pray and meditate this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): By not believing anything you hear, you have an excellent chance of enjoying this day and incidents.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Wishful thinking pervades everything you have under consideration. Double check all your facts and figures. Home life is better this evening than gadding about.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Make temporary adjustments on your ventures, just to keep them moving through a bewildering day. Travel and other arrangements are frustrated by delays, shortages of equipment and supplies, misunderstandings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Some good recommendations are under way for you. Somebody is trying to catch your attention and co-operation. Start early on all trips as extra time, beyond normal, will be needed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): This is not a day for signing agreements, contracts, purchase orders. Your sympathies and distractions could lead you into an embarrassing situation. Stick to routines; leave elaborations for another time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Today you should not plan on changing anybody's mind but your own. That takes much doing, as you well know. Group funds, partnership deals are under pressure. Non-interference becomes a fine art.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You must go it alone and take the responsibilities involved. Doing whatever is important exactly right the first time is your own personal concern. Keep shopping and other purchasing to a minimum.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19); Since everything tends to confusion throughout, stay on the surface and enjoy the hilarious features of the day's miscalculations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): People have second thoughts about their promises and limitations. Family responsibilities bear heavily where there have been misjudgments.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): False alarms characterize the day. Pay no attention to rumors. Serious inquiry would stir so much disorder you'd never get the story straight. It all comes out if you will just wait and listen.

Major Policy Statement On Broadcasting Coming

TORONTO (CP) — Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, will make a major policy statement today that could force radical changes throughout the broadcasting industry.

Mr. Juneau set off a hum of speculation among 500 people attending a CRTC public hearing when he gave notice of the statement Wednesday.

Although no details have been revealed, the most likely subject appears to be future guidelines the commission will enforce on radio, TV and cable TV operators.

There was speculation that Mr. Juneau would announce decisions on several major applications before the CRTC. But these have never before been announced during public hearings.

A statement on guidelines would be in line with an assurance by the commission that new directions for broadcasters would be set out following a CRTC ban last December on the use of microwave by cable companies to import United States TV programs over vast areas.

This assurance, coupled with several other recent moves by the CRTC, led most broadcasters to expect a statement dealing with programming.

Announcing the microwave ban Dec. 3, Mr. Juneau said the move was intended to provide Canadian broadcasting with a "breathing space" in which to strengthen itself to withstand U.S. competition which was "inevitable."

Further steps to make certain improvements were made would be announced in future, Mr. Juneau said.

Then the commission hired Sidney Newman, internationally-known as a CBC and B producer, to act as a progr policy adviser.

Cairo Crowds Call For Revenge Raids

Israeli Bombs Kill 70 in Steel Plant

CAIRO (Reuters) — A crowd of 200,000 angry Egyptians engulfed an open car taking President Nasser to prayers today, demanding vengeance for the death of 70 civilians in Thursday's bombing raid by Israel.

"Revenge by fire" and "bullets and bombs until victory" were two of the slogans shouted as Nasser, flanked by the leaders of Libya and the Sudan, drove through packed streets to the 1,000-year-old Al Azhar Mosque.

Maj.-Gen. Gaafar el Nimeiry, the Sudanese prime minister, and Col. Muammer el Kadafi, chairman of Libya s Revolutionary Command Council, have been attending tripartite talks here on the Middle East situation.

At the mosque, Sheikh Abdel Rahman al Naggar, delivering the sermon, called for armed struggle to restore Arab rights.

As doctors tended the injured, many of them with severe napalm burns, Egyptian Army engineers Thursday night defused three unexploded Israeli time bombs in the cordoned-off area of the factory ruins at Abu Zabal, 20 miles northeast of here.

Military officials in Cairo said it was not the first time Israel had dropped delayed - action bombs, and they socrnfully brushed aside a warning by Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan to Egypt that one unexploded bomb was timed to explode in 24 hours.

(In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman said the bombing of the factory was accidental and said Israel's policy of striking only at military targets was unchanged.

(" . . . It appears that one plane may have dropped bombs as a result of technical error outside the target area," he said after the debriefing of pilots who took part in two deep strikes at military areas close to Cairo International Airport and the big industrial centre of Helwan.)

The factory death toll was the biggest civilian loss suffered by Egypt in an Israeli attack since the six-day war of June, 1967, and was viewed in Cairo as a serious escalation of the undeclared Arab-Israeli war.

About 2,000 workers were beginning the morning shift when the Israeli planes came over and the bombs—five of them napalm—started falling.

Seconds later the plant's maintenance workshop and power plant were mounds of rubble. The administrative building was a shambles, with broken desks and typewriters, uneaten sandwiches and personal belongings strewn among the debris. Every window was shattered and corridors stained with blood.

'Safe or not, I still say it's ridiculous!'

Truce Move Pushed By U.S.

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States today stepped up its diplomatic efforts to bring about an Arab - Israeli ceasefire in the wake of a deadly Israeli bombing attack on a factory north of Cairo. The raid, which killed 70 Egyptian workers and injured 100 civilians, caused grave concern at the state department and prompted a new appeal for restoration of the 1967 Middle East ceasefire.

The United States increased its diplomatic pressure at Big Four talks at the United Nations in New York, where efforts have been in progress for almost a year to draw up proposals to serve as a basis for a peaceful settlement in the Middle East.

The state department said it hoped Britain, France and the Soviet Union would join it in exerting influence to restore the ceasefire and that it would continue its own efforts in contacts with Israel, Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Lebanon.

The state department Thursday condemned the Israeli raid on the factory at Abu Zabal and also the bombing attack Tuesday by three Arabs on Israeli airline passengers at Munich airport.

Fuel Cells Could Supply Big Buildings' Electricity

TORONTO (CP) — Pipelines carrying fossil fuels to small fuel cells were offered Thursday as a solution to the problem of transmitting large amounts of electrical power to office buildings and apartment developments.

H. J. Davis, head of the electrochemical section of the Ferranti-Packard Ltd. electronics division, told a joint meeting of the Institution of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers that transmission of large amounts of power even over conventional means.

He said fossil fuels transported as gases or liquids would permit more efficient small electrical generators near the user.

As generators he suggested fuel cells, which convert chemical energy directly into electrical energy at high efficiency.

Mr. Davis said bulk transportation methods make possible transportation of fossil fuel energy at one-sixth the cost of transporting electrical energy over the same distance.

Fossil fuels include such fuels as coal, lignite, oil and natural gas.

WARNINGS ON IMPACT of White Paper on taxation were brought to Bellevillians last night. Leading campaign for Canadian Council for Fair Taxation is John Bulloch (right) who shared Belleville Collegiate platform with Toronto accountant Charles Baillie.

BCI Audience Hears Attack

White Paper Is Called Clever Socialist Plan

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The government's White Paper on taxation is a clever political document that introduces socialism by the back door, Bellevillians were cautioned last night.

It would erode initiative and personal savings.

It is the brainchild of government theorists without any knowledge of the dynamics of free enterprise.

These warnings were sounded as the Canadian Council for Fair Taxation carried its campaign to the Quinte district to rally support for a national crusade against the White Paper.

The event drew close to 600 to Belleville Collegiate auditorium to hear Council spokesman John Bulloch and Charles Baillie.

Both men shared the stage for more than two hours of speechmaking and answering questions from the audience.

For Bellevillians it was the first on-the-spot involvement with the Council, formed recently in Toronto on "behalf of middle class Canadians" to oppose the controversial tax blueprint.

From Mr. Bulloch, 36-year-old Ryerson Institute business-management teacher, and catalyst of the movement which caused the Council's foundation, they learned:

The Council plans a coast-to-coast organization to support its opposition to the White Paper.

It will become a permanent organization to act as watchdog on government taxation moves.

The Council, said Mr. Bulloch is non-political — a point he reemphasized when questioned from the floor.

Second My Lai Massacre Alleged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charges filed Thursday against a U.S. Army officer alleged a second massacre of South Vietnamese civilians occurred near the hamlet of My Lai March 16, 1968, it has been learned.

The Pentagon is not releasing details, but military sources told The Associated Press 20 deaths are alleged in unpremeditated murder charges lodged against Capt. Thomas K. Willingham, 25, of Allenhurst, N.J.

The Pentagon is withholding the number of victims set forth in the specifications pending a required investigation to determine if Willingham will, like Lieut. William L. Calley Jr., be courtmartialled.

Military sources, who provided the number, said the specifications against Willingham do not say whether he actually killed the victims or ordered it done by the platoon he commanded.

The alleged incident in which Willingham stands accused occurred about two miles from My Lai where, the army says, Calley killed 102 civilians March 16, 1968.

Both incidents occurred the same day and were part of the same U.S. military operation conducted in the Song My area, which encompases My Lai and several other hamlets.

Seven Die In Blaze

MONTREAL (CP) — A family of six and a fireman perished in a two-alarm fire that swept a two-storey brick house in zero temperatures early this morning in west end St. Henri.

Dead are Mr. and Mrs. Noel Belanger and their four children Roger, 4, Carol, 2, Lucie, 1 and eight-month-old Francine.

Albert Papodekz, 50, a member of the city fire department, died in hospital of a heart attack after collapsing on the scene of the incident while attempting a rescue.

Police reported that the Belanger family, which moved into the house last October, was trapped on the second floor of the building.

Attempts Are Being Made to Burn Oil Lying Thick on Nova Scotia Shores

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — Mopping-up operations along more than 40 miles of oil-fouled shoreline got under way today, 10 days after the source of the pollution, a Liberian tanker, ran aground on a rock off the coast of Chedabucto Bay.

Attempts were being made to burn thick patches of bunker oil gathered in coves and tidal pools along the rocky shoreline.

The main pollution areas are: 15 miles along the north side of Chedabucto Bay, 11 miles on the south side of the bay in he Canso area, five miles in the Cape Auget area near the mouth of the bay and 10 miles along the shore near this Cape Breton community.

The emphasis was on salvage operations until Thursday, when high winds and rough seas pushed the stern section of the broken 11,379-ton tanker Arrow off Cerberus Rock into about 70 feet of water.

With it went about 1,000,000 gallons of oil.

The bow of the tanker has been ground down into the rock, so that only its superstructure and masts show above water. There has been no estimate of the amount of oil still in this section.

James Hornsby of Halifax, a transport department official in charge of the operations here, said the oil in the stern section would be released in "controlled leakages."

The priority now was on cleaning up oil already on the shore.

Frank Weston, regional director of marine services for the transport department said there was no rush to go to work on the stern.

The oil, congealed into black globs by the cold water, now covers the north shore from nearby Cape Auget, westward to Janvrin Island, the south side for 11 miles east of Canso and a 15-mile section of the Nova Scotia mainland near the entrance to Canso Strait.

The strong southeast wind which had been upshing the oil against the north side of the bay was forecast to drop to 25 miles an hour today from the northwest.

Dr. Al LeFeuvre of the federal energy, mines and resources department, in charge of a committee looking after cleaning up operations, said the large accumulation of oil would be burned, but it was impossible to mop up every drop of oil in the bay.

Volatile compounds would escape over a period of time from thin sheets of oil on rocks along the shore, leaving a black composite.

Officials had been hoping to tow the stern section out to sea when weather conditions permitted and three ocean-going tugs were trying to hold it in place when it slipped under.

Captain Roger Marchand, an investigator with the transport department in Ottawa, said there was no definite plan for releasing the oil from the stern.

Captain Marchand said he would report on the grounding to transport minister Don Jamieson.

Mr. Jamieson was scheduled to arrive here today for a first-hand look at the situation and a news conference this afternoon.

Mr. Weston confirmed, there was no pilot aboard the tanker when she ran on the rock. A pilot normally would be taken on in the area before the vessel could proceed further into the bay. But on that night, rough seas and winds gusting to 70 miles-an-hour prevented the pilot from going out.

"From an environmental viewpoint, the church is on," said Dr. Richard Warner, a marine biologist from Newfoundland's Memorial University.

He said bunker oil, one of the least toxic of oil compounds, was no danger to adult fish but would kill birds, seaweed, shellfish and other marine life it might cover along the shore.

Summer Sailing Preview

Although the bay is covered with ice, the executive of Bay of Quinte Yacht Club is preparing for the 1970 sailing season by giving a course designed to increase the pool of available crew members for distance racing. Commodore Richard Bird is preparing for the first session at the club tonight with a demonstration of one of the winches used on C and C yachts, built on Belleville harbor.

A Question from the Floor

Question-answer period involved audience in discussion of White Paper taxation proposals at Belleville Collegiate last night. Earl Sager, Madoc-area resident, here makes bid for attention of members of Canadian Council for Fair Taxation — campaigning against federal tax blueprint.

White Paper Called Social Document in Disguise

(Among points stated in Council's list of objectives in a pamphlet available at last night's meeting is "to work together to elect at the next federal election only candidates who oppose the White Paper".)

The Council does not oppose tax reform. Mr. Bulloch said.

But the White Paper is really a social document in the guise of tax reform, he warned. While it has taken part of the Carter report on tax reform it has dropped a lot of its equity.

It is a "very real attack" on the middle - class taxpayer, who bears the brunt of taxation, and on his values of work and initiative.

Its ramifications for small business companies would be fatal and could result in economic domination by a handful of big, multi-national corporations.

Mr. Bulloch charged the White Paper had a "Big Brother" emphasis.

It "seemed to create a faceless society and was the work of a group of intellectuals who, at the present time seem to be in control of the Liberal Party in Canada."

It also was "cleverly timed so it comes into effect by 1972 — which would be an election year."

"With the kind of strongman rule that exists in the country at the present time, we had a great fear that — despite opposition of a number of Liberal MPs and a great number of red herrings — this White Paper would go through as legislation."

"How much of the White Paper would have gone through had there not been organized opposition in the country?" queried Mr. Bulloch.

Its presentation included overt propaganda and misleading statements, he charged.

"I feel we should have a government that is willing to say what they believe at election time. And if the country wants socialism we should vote for the NDP. I don't like to be socialized through the back door," declared Mr. Bulloch.

An area of concern also was the "disincentives" contained in the White Paper.

"I don't know how we're going to solve some of the problems we have in our society if we don't encourage some of our most energetic and ambitious people to work," he said.

"If you destroy in people's minds the idea that work and self-discipline and thrift are . . . .values you destroy a bulwark of society."

It could also provoke migration of the nation's managerial sector to the United States.

With its White Paper proposals the government seems "bent on a course to destroy this sector of our economy," said Mr. Bulloch.

"There seems to be a deliberate effort to sound the death knell for the small corporation," he added.

This could result in economic concentration in a small group of big enterprises.

Mr. Bulloch said he was "frightened to death what we would pay for products if the market is dominated by four or five big multi-national corporations."

Mr. Baillie, an accountant specializing in international taxation, also warned about the White Paper's effects on smaller business.

"The theorists who put together the White Paper, in the main, have never had to meet a payroll," he said. "They do not seem to understand what makes a business tick."

Unless incentives are provided for this group it will spell the end of growth that benefits the economy.

The proposed reforms can lead to an accelerating decline in financial morality, warned Mr. Baillie.

The Benson proposals could "mean the destruction of the middle class. The destruction of this class may also mean the destruction of the financial establishment," predicted Mr. Baillie.

Last night's meeting was arranged by the city's Chamber of Commerce — which also has had Mr. Benson accept an invitation to outline the White Paper at a date to be confirmed later.

The Chamber earlier announced it had arranged last night's session because of keen interest in the White Paper and without any special endorsation of the Council.

Lennox, Addington Teachers Ask 25 Per Cent Pay Raise

Lennox and Addington county's secondary school teachers have called for a 25 per cent salary increase for the 1970-71 school year.

A committee of trustees placed the salary proposal before the board of education Wednesday.

The salary proposal would cover 140 secondary school teachers who teach in Napanee District Secondary School, Ernestown Township high school at Odessa and North Addington District High School at Cloyne.

The 25 per cent increase if accepted by the board, would cost taxpayers another $215,000 in the 1970-71 school year. The elementary school teachers have not yet submitted their salary proposals.

The high school salary schedule calls for annual salaries of $8,200 for a category 1 teacher, $8,500 for category 2, $9,100 for category 3 and $9,200 for category 4. For some teachers this would amount to a raise of about $1,500 over last year's salary.

At the board meeting, the trustees accepted a 10-year capital works budget of close to $15 million.

Spending of $11,316,000 between now and 1980 for elementary schools in the county has been forecast. The report proposes spending $425,000 in 1971 for an administration centre.

By 1980, the report predicts that a new secondary school will be required in the county at a cost of $2 million. The sum of $160,000 is earmarked for a school for the trainable retarded at Morven this year.

A large proportion of the capital works costs is expected to be covered by Ontario government education grants.

Council Said the Voice Of Average Citizen

An exercise in participatory democracy drew an audience of 500 to BCI auditorium last night to hear two members of the Canadian Council For Fair Taxation shoot down the proposals of the government's White Paper on taxation.

Speakers John Bulloch, founder and general secretary of the Council, and financial consultant Charles Baillie, later termed the evening "very successful" and the large number of young people in the audience "encouraging".

Their visit to Belleville is part of a cross-country speaking tour arranged to promote support for the grass roots protest movement directed against federal finance minister Edgar Benson's tax proposals.

The council's aim is a permanent national organization, 1,000,000 strong, to act as "watchdog on all taxation, federal, provincial and municipal."

Memberships in the council were available last night — at $10 for an individual non-voting membership to $500 for a company employing 100 workers or over. Pledge forms, asserting the signers support of the council's aims and objectives were also available.

Miss Sylvia O'Reilly of the council said from Toronto this morning that 100 Bellevillians took out memberships in the organization last night. She expects more to come in over the next two weeks.

"The Belleville audience was very much a thinking audience, the kind that would go home and ponder what it heard", she said. "We are looking forward to hearing coments from Belleville during the coming weeks".

"We will concern ourselves with tax reform, not with the deep social change they (the Liberal government) are planning for our country," Mr. Bulloch asserted. "I don't think the majority of Liberals support the White Paper — there is more talk of separatism in the western provinces than in Quebec."

Mr. Bullock said the council plans to support the candidate in the coming Selkirk, Man., by-election who opposes the White Paper proposals.

But to a query from the audience as to whether the council "would remain apolitical or field candidates in future elections," M. Bulloch would say only "we're concerned about tax reform".

Master of ceremonies Frank Murray of radio station CJBQ was forced several times to warn questioners to stick to making queries, not reading statements of their own.

The council's founder said the government's tax proposals are "inflationary, because they encourage spending as opposed to saving".

"The country is in the control of the cabinet and a few members of the Prime Minister's staff," he said. "Policy is being made by a few people in the Prime Minister's office, not by politicians."

"What rights do we have?" asked a woman in the audience.

"You have the right to hold open forums such as this," he replied. "You can organize your friends to flood members of Parliament with letters on the subject."

It was a letter from Mr. Bulloch to Mr. Benson that started the ball rolling into the form of the permanent council now being set up in key cities across Canada.

Later, the Ryerson instructor published a copy of the letter in a Toronto paper as part of an advertisement for his family's business. The response from concerned small businessmen led to the organization of the council.

Mr. Bulloch has now taken a year's leave of absence from his Ryerson position to act as general secretary of the council and rally support in a cross-country lecture tour.

"There is no way the average citizen can voice his position on government proposals," he said last night. "Our council is set up to give him a voice, not just now, but in the future."

Bell Faces Meeting Over Pay

A federal government conciliator has been appointed to mediate in a contract dispute between Bell Canada and its 7,000 women employees in Ontario and Quebec, a spokesman said today.

Mary Lennox, president of the Traffic Employees Association, said the situation is serious and a strike by the workers might follow if negotiations are not brought to an amicable agreement.

Miss Jean Barry, Telephone Employees Association chairman for the District, quoted Miss Lennox as saying, "Operators in Belleville start at $51.50 a week and their pay rises in nine stages over four years to $78 a week. In other Ontario and Quebec communities, starting rates are as low as $48 and top rates $73, which includes Bancroft."

The present contract expires Feb. 25.

Miss Lennox said the union applied for a conciliation officer after negotiations, mostly over wages, broke down in Montreal, Jan. 28. She said the meetings had been going on since Jan. 12.

"We don't want a strike because our girls can't really afford it," Miss Lennox said in an interview. "But we are determined this time to use our collective strength to get a square deal from the company."

She would not specify the union's wage objective nor what the company had offered.

The association represents telephone operators, associated office personnel and employees of Bell cafeterias and dining services.

George Thompson, Belleville manager for Bell Canada, said this morning "because negotiations are still going on, I would consider it improper to make any comments at this time."

Central Bridge Receivership Ends

The interim receivership was imposed Jan. 1, 1968 because of the firm's inability to meet the demands of its creditors. This situation caused near bankruptcy because "we just ran out of money," Plant Superintendent R. Ferguson said this morning.

Until yesterday, all of the firm's transactions had to be carried out on a cash basis. Now credit may be extended to the firm enabling it to expand its operations.

"Many of the bigger firms would not enter into bids with us during the receivership because of the imminent danger of our being unable to meet our contract demands. Now it means that they will again consider our company as, indeed, some of them have ben doing in the last two or three months," Mr. Ferguson said.

D. M. Cameron, Toronto Iron vice-president and general manager of the Central Bridge Division reported yesterday that Algoma Steel had agreed to defer its claims of more than 2½ million dollars until Sept. 30, 1970 which would permit Toronto Iron to pay all other creditors. Shareholders of the company approved the agreement with Algoma Steel Corporation Limited at a meeting yesterday.

Toronto Iron was established in 1907 and acquired the former Central Bridge Company in 1951. Central Bridge has operated from its Trenton location since 1937.

Mr. Cameron stated that the patience and co-operation of all creditors to enable the company to reorganize its financial affairs has been a major factor in enabling the company to emerge from interim receiveship.

Arm of Government

Opposition fears about the new government information agency to be known as Information Canada may be well-founded.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield sees it becoming an arm of government — Manipulation Canada" he calls it — while the NDP's David Lewis envisages it becoming "a perpetual election campaign for the party in power."

Sure, the government is establishing a parliamentary committee to oversee its operation and guard against political abuse — but this sounds like the concept of the Press Council in Britain which the Press in Canada generally is against. And in any event, how could one committee possibly keep tabs on such a multifarious operation as the information (or propaganda) being disseminated from Ottawa?

As a means, however, of co-ordinating all information programs and informing Canadians of what services are available to them; and shorn, ideally, from any political bias, the organization could perform a valuable service.

What is not-clear from reports is whether the separate press and information offices already attached to each ministry come under Information Canada. Presumably they do; as it is, nearly $8,000,000 is being budgeted for its operation.

Tax on Culture

There was Finance Minister Benson attempting to justify his proposed tax on art collections — but the lady would not let him. Every time he opened his mouth, his critic (rudely perhaps, because she was interrupting like fun) opened hers. Her possessions, she said, were hers, and any attempt to assess them for tax purposes would be an intolerable intrusion.

The exchange was seen on television and as we recall, Mr. Benson, when he did get a word in edgeways, said there would be an exemption of $500 which would absolve a lot of people with only modest collections.

In effect it would be a tax on culture and if that stamps the Government as a bunch of philistines . . . well the shoe probably fits. Of course all Mr. Benson sees in his daily rounds are dollar signs and if he does not come up with at least one new tax prospect every day he is likely disappointed.

People amass wealth, he finally got to saying, with stocks and bonds. They do the same by collecting art treasures — paintings and the like, and it was unfair, he believed, that they should get away with this without being taxed.

Perhaps now we shall see a move by private collectors to sell (or lend) their art pieces to public galleries, as a means of circumventing such a measure. Or does Mr. Benson contemplate taxing the galleries as well?

We wonder did the minister get the tax on art idea from the private collection of NDP member and former Toronto coroner, Dr. Morton Shulman?

Man's Inhumanity

Human nature being what it is, this day and age being the way it is, it is not difficult to understand the hooliganism that marred the mardi gras in New Orleans.

Such events attract not only the genuine reveller who manages to keep his nose and the fun clean, but also the nuts and the hippies and the hoodlums and the degenerates.

They are the people (if we can dignify them as people) who are always present at any such gathering, the sick exhibitionists and the bottle tossers, who spoil such an event for everyone else. And probably the saddest episode of the whole affair was the terrible injuries suffered by trumpeter Al Hirt.

Struck on the face by a brick while riding a parade float, Hirt required 15 stitches for injuries to his lip which may put an end to his career.

Life has its raw aspects — some, like this, so base and mean as to be almost beyond comprehension. Except that we know, unfortunately, people are capable of such horrors, and regrettably it will ever be thus.

As for trumpeter Hirt, what is there to compensate him for such an injury, one that strikes at the very foundation of his being, his raison d'etre?

And Where Is It Getting Him?

PM's Army of Advisors Draw $15,000 to $35,000 Each

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Prime Minister's office is making more and more executive decisions than have been made since the early Diefenbaker days of 10 years ago when the Conservatives exercised the enormous voting clout of 208 of the Commons' 265 seats.

Reason now, as it was then: strong majority government.

But you should see the difference in the cost!

Pierre Elliott Trudeau has the big parliamentary battalion and is free of the eternal pressures under which John Diefenbaker in his final year of failing power, and Lester Pearson in all of his six years, operated so uncertainly.

Seldom a minority government day went by for either Dief or Pearson that there was not an Opposition challenge of their regimes teetering on the brink of disaster and defeat.

The Opposition groups had only to close ranks and that was the end of it for the Conservatives.

That the Opposition failed to unify against the Pearson government — and make it stick — never lessened the peril.

For Opposition then was just that, opposition.

Hammering Dief in his last and losing year were the Liberals' "Four Horsemen:" Paul Martin, Jack Pickersgill, Lionel Chevrier and Pearson himself.

How different the Opposition now. How easy is life for the government. And how much higher the price.

It is not just that the Opposition, as its leader Robert Stanfield has put it, prefers to be "reasonable," and even "constructive" in its criticism.

It is more that the government with its strong majority simply does not have to worry what the Opposition may think, say or do. Cost? Who cares? Or can do anything about it?

So there is the Prime Minister, safe and secure from all the perils of Parliament, free and clear to make decisions.

In his decision-making majority government days, John Diefenbaker did pretty much of a solo job.

Of course he consulted his cabinet, listened to their counsel, then made up his own mind.

Trudeau gets a maximum.

Diefenbaker did not get a great deal of help from specialists not so much because he did not want it and could not have used it — but because he believed it the proper thing to do to get along with what was available.

And it was not much.

Liberal Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, whom he replaced, had managed with never more than six personal aides and special advisers.

Diefenbaker believed he could do as well, maybe even better, with just as few, or fewer.

On taking power, he called for St. Laurent's staff chart and declared that he would hire not one more man nor spend one more dollar.

Nor did he.

The cost of the Diefenbaker staff never exceeded $50,000.

When he took over in 1957, Diefenbaker had the help and advice of six "professionals," as these specialists in the Prime Minister's office are known.

In an economy drive the next year, he cut his staff back to four, increased it to five in '61, and when he fell from power in '63, he had six.

Pearson came to power with nine "professionals," and while he never appreciably increased their number, he recruited "specialist" help through the "back door," the Privy Council, a branch of the Prime Minister's office.

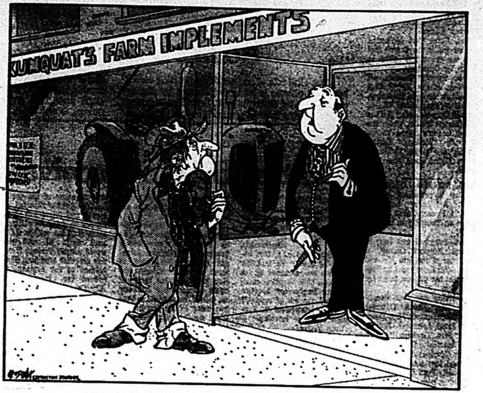
And when he handed over power to Trudeau, he had a total of 92 "professionals" in the prime ministerial establishment.

Cost of the operation, including clerical and stenographic help, had soared to $1,743,863, and "travel costs" for the "professionals" had rocketed from an annual $4,431 in Pearson's first year to $114,630.

Currently, Trudeau, to counsel him in his preoccupation with decision-making, has a personal staff of 219 with 53 of them drawing a basic annual $15,000 priced all the way up to $35,000.

Calculate it, and the complete Diefenbaker staff at its highest-price point cost only $15,000 more than the one top-rated hand in the Trudeau establishment.

But are all that many decisions being made, and is the end product of government that much greater?



"If you're looking for something in the price range the average farmer can afford they're in the stable out back!"

Quebec and the French Fact in Africa

Ottawa Le Droit: A year ago at Niamey, on African soil where everything grows so quickly, they laid the foundations of the French-speaking community. With the return of Jean-Eudes Dube (Veterans affairs minister) from his tour of French-speaking Africa . . . (and) following the talks between the federal government and Claude Morin, deputy minister of intergovernmental affairs for Quebec, in preparation for the coming meeting of the French-speaking community, it is urgent to ask what this organization amounts to. . . .

During the last year, the provisional secretary of this association in gestation, Jean-Marc Leger, has worked energetically on the drafting of the constitution of this association labelled cultural and technical, but which apparently is in danger of being political. . . .

In the absence of precise (constitutional) texts, it seems necessary to ask questions touching on realities and not on myths. If French-speaking peoples form a friendly association . . . is it for strictly cultural purposes . . . or to help each other by technical, material and economic exchanges . . . ?

It seems the sum-total of the aid offered by Canada, including Quebec, goes beyond the area of simply cultural ties. . . . Will the meetings of the French-speaking community also serve to chart the evolution of these (African) nations, to make periodic revisions to work out programs of co-operation?

It would seem normal that the Canadian delegation to the next conference of the French-speaking community be composed first of all of representatives of the federal government, responsible for our international relations, while entrusting to Quebec a major role but not preponderant from the constitutional point of view. (That is) if we wish to safeguard in the eyes of the world our national identity as a sovereign country.

Mr. Masse, (Quebec minister of intergovernmental affairs), on his return from his consultations with Mr. Lipkowski (French junior cabinet minister responsible for foreign affairs), has appeared scowling on the French network of the CBC to speak to us in a tone which gives warning of new storms.

We may, however, be optimistic about the outcome of talks between Quebec and Ottawa, and for several reasons.

A parliamentary committee on constitutional reform has just been set up. It would be premature to take action before it has finished its work. Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand is seeking . . . to avoid confrontations.

It is difficult to imagine a question of community being a cause of schism for Canada or that the next meeting of French-speaking countries, instead of being an example of teamwork, degenerates into a spectacle in which one or another tries to steal the limelight.

Better to build than destroy.

Mistaken Identity

Kingston Whig-Standard

The Quebec provincial police put on an exhibition of brutality recently which may well result in a shakeup which will be felt by police forces all over Canada. If they had chosen to beat up an ordinary citizen, one with no influence, an unknown, they probably would have been exonerated. They would have used the usual police excuse: understandable confusion in the matter of identifying their victim, the result of commendable zeal on the job (usually referred to as "good police work").

Walter Robert Redel is the director of the lands branch of the Government of British Columbia. He was attending the first day of the meetings of the Canadian Resource Ministers in Quebec City when he was forced into a unmarked car with his hands handcuffed behind his back by two uniformed men.

It finally filtered through the skulls of the police that they were holding a member of the Government of British Columbia and that they had obviously mistaken him for a bank robber for whom they had been looking.

The Attorney - General of British Columbia, Leslie Peterson, questioned later about the case, said that it is "difficult to believe that this sort of thing can happen in Canada."

Why should Mr. Peterson make a statement like that? Such things happen all the time all over Canada, and certainly not just in the province of Quebec. What this case should do is awaken the whole country to the fact that the police need better training than they are getting. What is required to force the justice establishment in this country finally to face the truth?

Food in Growing Demand

Ottawa Journal

The United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organization estimates that by 1985 the demand for food in poor nations of the world will be 140 per cent higher than it was in 1962. It warns that despite the fact under-developed areas are emphasizing agricultural development "one-half" of the people living there are likely to be under-fed or under-nourished or both."

The biggest scarcity in the next 10 years FAO says, will be productive land:

"Within a generation every available acre of farm land will be under the plow in Southern Asia and Northwest Africa. Several Middle East nations will reach near saturation point and about 80 per cent of the available land in Central America and most of East and Central Africa will be utilized."

One of the paradoxes of the world's food shortage situation is that rich countries like Canada have suprluses but economic and political obstacles seem to make it difficult even to give food away. Perhaps we don't try hard enough.

A Daughter's Passing And A Poem for Those Who Are Handicapped

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

One month ago my 25-year-old retarded girl passed away, and in going through some things I had cherished over those heart breaking years I came across a clipping I had taken from some newspaper.

The report noted that the Ontario Hospital School for Mentally Retarded Children in Smiths Falls had been given a new name — the Rideau Regional Hospital School, and that other Ontario Hospitals likely would be re-named as well.

It also quoted hospital superintendent Dr. H. F. Frank as saying he felt the name "Ontario Hospital" carried a stigma in the minds of some. Hence the new name. The hospital, with more than 2,000 patients, would become exclusively an eastern Ontario school for the retarded.

I also came upon a beautiful piece of poetry called "God's Retarded Children." It would be wonderful to see this printed in your newspaper, as I know there must be more mothers who feel as I do; and it would surprise you the number of people who try to hide the fact they have any retarded children.

The altar boy (a man in his 60's, I believe) at my daughter's funeral came to my one daughter, paid his respects and then said, "My dear, when we come into this world we have no choice and we cannot choose the life we'd like." He was also a patient (probably all his life) there.

Maybe if someone read this piece of poetry it would help them understand and not feel ashamed of their retarded child, but love him.

My little girl could not talk so I couldn't tell her how my heart ached for her or how much I loved her; I could only show her for the six years I had her home, then sent her where I knew she would get the care I could not give her. But I still loved, and what a shock when God called her home on Jan. 2. We did not know she was ill as she was sick only two days and we lived 137 miles away from her.

MRS. DON TURCOTTE,

* * *

God's children are the little ones
Who will forever dwell
Where childhood glows with golden suns
And moonlit miracles.
These children cannot leave the walls
Of infancy to grow
Into adulthood's marble halls
Where other children go.
So consequently, sin and shame
And tragedy can not,
Touch God's dear children, and their name
Is free from stain or blot.
Like angels on this earth they stay
The beautiful and odd,
From Heaven just a step away
And very close to God.

'Socialist Overtones' of White Paper Make Robarts Suspicious

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts said Thursday that Ontario's suspicions of the federal white paper on tax reform are based on its "socialist overtones" and its possible detrimental effects on national unity.

Mr. Robarts, asked if national unity has lost its importance as a subject for federal-provincial discussion, told a news conference that "it is not behind us as a problem by any means."

"It is very much with us, and the white paper doesn't help us much," he said.

The white paper constitutes an attack on personal initiative, is destructive of small-business enterprise and because of its policies on natural resources "the West is up in arms against it."

But Ontario's greatest concern is with "the basic philosophy that emerges as you study the paper."

"It is a philosophy that will concentrate more money and power in the central government and subjugate the individual to the state. It has great socialist overtones."

"It is ostensibly a tax reform but it has become an instrument of social reform, and people should be aware of this whether they accept its philosophy or not."

Mr. Robarts was speaking on issues he believes might be raised during next week's federal-provincial conference on inflation, pollution and urban problems.

Ways can be found for the federal government to contribute to the solution or urban problems while meeting the constitutional requirements of the provinces "if there is a will to do so," he said.

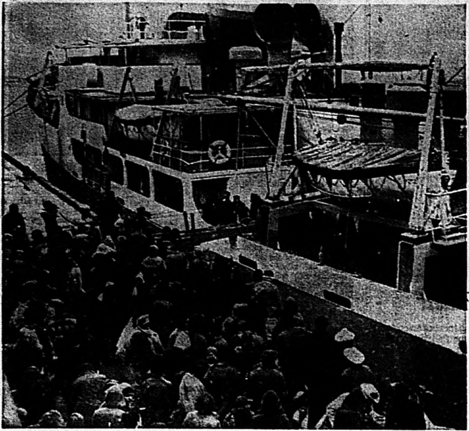
"Agreements are one way. We built a seaway by agreements reached in correspondence and we can do it again if we want to do it."

The premier said Ontario is willing to co-operate in federal efforts to fight inflation which "we recognize cannot be handled entirely by Ontario."

But the province will oppose any parts of the proposed Canada water act that threaten the future of its own pollution-control institutions.

"Through the Ontario Water Resources Commission we have built up a wide range of programs that must be taken into account, and if the act gives the federal government powers we think are provincial we will object.

"We have pretty sophisticated techniques in such areas as the treatment of municipal waste and to attempt to interfere with that would by silly, really."



Bound for Cuba

Five Hundred Arrive by Bus To Board Cuban-bound Vessel

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Five hundred young Americans, bound for sugar fields in Cuba, were to sail from here today aboard the freighter Luis Arcos Bergnes.

The group, which assembled in Boston from points across the United States, arrived Thursday by chartered buses as the freighter docked with a similar group of more than 200 returning to the U.S. from a two-month sugar cane harvesting expedition in Cuba.

For much of the day the two groups milled about uncomfortably in raw weather at the vessel's pier 14 berth as departure arrangements were made for both.

The travellers were members of the Venceremos Bridage (Spanish for we shall win), an organization sympathetic to the Communist regime of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

A freight shed containing thousands of sacks of potatoes was the site of an impromptu noon news conference at which leaders of the returning group praised the Cuban government, condemned "U.S. imperialism" and extended "heartfelt thanks" to the Cuban people for hospitality during their visit.

The statement was read by Patricia Bouchard, 28, of Chicago who said she could "not say strongly enough how much this visit to Cuba has heightened our revolutionary consciousness."

They had learned to "fuse thought with action" and understood "better than ever before the necessity for total destruction of U.S. imperialism."

They were committed to "put these lessons into practice" in the revolutionary movement in the U.S. to nurture . . . the growing bonds of friendship between the peoples of North Americ and Cuba" which would destroy "falsehoods and attacks" on Cuba by the "monopolist" U.S. press. ..

High spirits, but an open suspicion for reporters, prevailed among members of both groups, some loghaired, many bearded and most dressed for work in the fields—boots, dungarees and duffle coats.

They told reporters a spokesman had been appointed to "deal with the press" and that, as individuals, they had nothing to say.

Those who would talk expressed whole-hearted support for brigade objectives and there appeared little or no disillusionment among those returning. About a third of the travellers were girls.

Although the homebound travellers had little trouble with U.S. border immigration personnel, customs officers withheld cigarettes, books, sugar, posters, medals and souvenirs they brought back from Cuba.

A border spokesman said if regulations were strictly enforced, all belongings of Cuban origin would be confiscated.

Hundreds of Sport Lovers Flee Avalanche-hit Town

VAL D'ISERE (Reuters) — Hundreds of winter sports enthusiasts poured out of this avalanche-stricken French ski resort today after being awakened well before dawn with news that the road out of town was clear.

A steady stream of buses and several hundred cars moved cautiously down the tortuous mountain road from Val d'Isere. People without transportation thumbed lifts from passing motorists.

The road was opened briefly Thursday for the first time since an avalanche killed 42 persons Tuesday. But it was blocked by a new avalanche and was cleared again during the night.

A new avalanche roared down the opposite side of the mountains early today but caused no injuries.

Workmen began digging out other vehicles which had lain under six-foot drifts of snow for days in the main street.

Hotels normally packed full at this time of the season were emptying as new guests failed to arrive.

AOSTA, Italy (AP) — Townspeople issued an appeal for food and medicines today from an Italian alpine valley isolated for two days by avalanches.

Fresh avalanches fell during the night in the Grisanche Valley, tearing the roof off a house. Authorities planned to send supplies to the snowbound villages with special snow tractors. Fierce winds made helicopter supply impossible.

Half Million Pounds Sought to Restore Albert Hall's Glory

LONDON (CP) — When Queen Victoria opened the Royal Albert Hall in memory of her husband in 1871, she was so impressed by its grandeur that she said it looked like the British constitution.

But in 99 years the grandeur has grown threadbare and an appeal went out Thursday to the millions who have been entertained in London's famous landmark to restore it to its Victorian splendor in time for its centenary concert in March, 1971.

"I can assure you that the money will be well and properly spent," said Sir Louis Gluckstein, president of the voluntarily supported hall, as he launched the appeal for £500,000 ($1,300,000) to repair the unique, highly decorated exterior of the circular building and renovate its faded auditorium.

Gluckstein told reporters that if the 1,000,000 persons who attend the hall each year give only 10 shillings each, the target would be met, but approaches had also been made to civic authorities and Britain's arts council. Two Canadian-born newspaper publishers are among a distinguished roll of appeal sponsors—Lord Thomson and Sir Max Aitken, son of the late Lord Beaverbrook.

With its vast, iron-framed dome supported only at the circumference, it is regarded as an outstanding feat of Victorian engineering.

The honey-colored terracotta decorations around the walls are gleaming like new, but many have crumbled badly and need urgent repair. The famous frieze of figures representing Victorian art and industry also is emerging from its coating of city dirt.

The interior of the hall, which seats 7,000 persons, is scheduled for modernization. The new decor, designed by architect Sir Hugh Casson, is in rich colors of crimson, gold and dark green and will tone in with the hall's existing circular, red-upholstered seats and add glamor to its triple, horseshoe-shaped tiers of boxes.

The Albert Hall's notorious echo was finally cured last year when BBC experts helped devise a series of mushroom-like hangings from the dome. For years, the acid test of a solo singer at the hall was whether he or she had a powerful enough voice to overcome the acoustics.

The echo made its appearance at the moment Queen Victoria opened the hall March 29, 1871. The queen's small voice was almost lost, but when the Bishop of London intoned a ringing prayer, the echo delivered back to him a resounding "Amen."

Over the years, the hall has been a forum for every kind of entertainment from grand symphony concerts to wrestling and pop festivals. Artists who held the giant audience enthralled have ranged from the Russian bass Feodor Challapin to America's squeaky-voiced Tiny Tim.

The annual Promenade Concerts, attended by thousands of teen-age and more elderly enthusiasts, moved to the Albert Hall when the Queen's Hall was bombed flat in 1941.

And each November, wartime comradeship has been renewed at the Remembrance Day reunion, originally the brainchild of Daily Express executive Michael Wardell, who later became publisher of the Fredericton Gleaner.

In 1927 Wardell enlisted the support of the then Prince of Wales for the project, which was organized jointly by The Express and the British Legion. Later, however, the legion decided it wanted to run the reunion under its own banner.

Wheat Glut May Force West Into Meat Production Contest

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eastern farmers may find themselves confronted by a challenge from the West in livestock and poultry production as western farmers turn away from mountains of unsold wheat to other sources of income.

An indication of the switch was given Thursday when plans to put Saskatchewan's economy now heavily dependent on wheat, on a broader base were outlined in the speech from the throne at Regina.

The Liberal government pledged more help for farmers wanting to diversify into livestock and poultry at a time when the province's grain storage facilities are chock-full of unsold wheat.

At Victoria, meanwhile, the federal government was accused in the legislature of trying to maintain a bureaucratic empire by continued development of heavy facilities in the port of Vancouver.

In the other provincial house open, at Edmonton, a Social Credit backbencher suggested Alberta should be maintained as a television-free area to which all Canadians could travel to take advantage of the natural scenic beauty without being distracted.

The Saskatchewan throne speech said industrial incentives legislation will be introduced, offering inducements to firms to locate in parts of the province that do not qualify for federal governments grants to new industries.

Reducing to 19 from 21 of the age for legal drinking and for marrying without parental consent and large-scale spending on highways also were proposed. The government will assume "a larger proportion of the over-all costs of education, in an attempt to ease the burden on the local taxpayer."

In B.C., Frank Richter, commercial transportation minister, said the federal attempt "to maintain a bureaucratic empire was the only reason he could see for continued development of Vancouver to handle coal and other raw commodities.

"Why are they persisting . . . in an area in the heart of what is acknowledged as one of the most beautiful metropolitan areas in North America?" he asked.

He said the Roberts Bank port, about 20 miles south of Vancouver, supplied an opportunity to establish adequate transportation facilities at minimum cost.

Charles Drain (SC—Pincher Creek-Crowsnest) made his suggestion in the Alberta house of a TV-free province as two motions were debated dealing with the Canadian Radio-Television Commission's decision to reject Albert's bid to establish a cable television system.

Members on both sides of the legislature said the CRTC decision was just another case of eastern discrimination against western Canada. Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart said that while he did not want to boost American television programming, he did resent "eastern do-gooders deciding what I should see."

Newfoundland Bows To Demands of Police

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Full police protection returned to this city of 100,000 Thursday night as the government bowed to demands to re-instate 32 suspended constables unconditionally.

One hundred and seventy four sioned officers of the Newfoundland Constabulary, most of them on strike since Tuesday, voted to return after receiving individual letters from police chief Edgar Pittman. He suspended the 32 constables in a disciplinary dispute, leading to the walkout.

Chief Pittman, who tendered his resignation to Premier Smallwood Wednesday, promised the men they would not lose any pay.

Mr. Smallwood appointed Mr. Justice Arthur Mifflin of the Newfoundland Supreme Court to head a 'thorough and impartial" inquiry into "charges and accusations" made to the chief in a letter signed by 32 constables.

Premier Smallwood also said the 99-year-old force will be reorganized and reformed and a new salary scale would be detailed in the provincial budget.

Administration Passes Given Sit-in Students

MONTREAL (CP) — No one threatened to eject 100 students from the occupied computer centre at Sir George Williams University before police were called in Feb. 11, 1969, an 18-year-old Crown witness testified Thursday.

In fact, some of the students were given administration pass cards allowing free entry and exit from the downtown Hall Building, she told the jury. She herself had one.

The girl, whose name was ordered withheld, was testifying at the conspiracy trial of 10 West Indians, the first of 87 adults to face trial in the $2,000,000 computer-wrecking incident.

Congregational Meeting

BRIDGE ST. UNITED CHURCH

The annual congregational meeting of Bridge Street United Church was held Sunday afternoon in the church school lowing the regular morningq worship service.

The meeting this year took the form of a "potluck" luncheon and resulted in an increase in attendance over previous years. Dr. Harry M. Davis was chairman and Dr. J. G. Demeza recorded the minutes.

The meeting opened with a brief devotional service conducted by Dr. Davis, followed by the reading of the names of 18 members of the congregation who passed away in 1969. Rev. Alfred Poulter closed this portion of the meeting with a prayer of remembrance.

The annual reports for 1969 were presented.

The board of session reported a slight increase in church membership over 1968. Benevolent Fund contributions were greater and the Mission and Service Fund met its budget of $22,000. The Library Board increased the resources of the Christian Education Library by the purchase of $200 worth of new books.

The report of the committee of stewards revealed that church operation offerings had increased. However, building repairs in the amount of $8,200 had more than offset the increased givings. Most satisfying was the fact that the building fund debt for the new Christian Education facilities, opened in 1962, had been reduced from $200,000 to $22,100.

Despite a decline in attendance and membership the United Church Women of Bridge Street met all its obligations and contributed greatly to the spiritual and financial life of the church.

The AOTS Men's Club was active during the year. One of its most important acheive-underwriting the cost of the church school picnic.

Nominated and approved for membership for the board of session for election to a five-year period terminating in December 1974 were: R. E. Berry, R. M. Gunsolus, V. J. White, A. D. Revill, J. R. Reynolds, L. H. McQuaid, Bryce Philp, Garry Sherman, Dr. J. R. Birchard, George Frederick, Arthur F. Jones, Robert J. McKnight, Mrs. J. B. Leslie; to fill vacancy in group whose term expires in December, 1973, Mrs. Burle Summers; to fill vacancy in the 1972 group, R. J. Ord; to fill vacancy in the 1971 group, W. J. Williams, and to fill vacancy in the 1970 group, Mrs. Grace Anderson. For election to represent the young people are Debbie Holway, Dorothy Maddocks, David Nelles, Ron Chaplin.

Nominated and approved for membership for the Committee of Stewards were: J. Edgar Buchanan for a one-year term expiring December 31, 1970; B. E. Bauman for a two - year term expiring December 31, 1971, and the following for a three-year term expiring December 31, 1972: Walter Elliott, Kenneth Huntley, Gerald Hyde, Harold Mott, Newton Thompson, Jack Parrott, John D. O'Flynn, Jr., Mrs. Burle Summers, Freeman E. Burrows, Jack Ireland. The nomination of Mrs. George Greatrix and Mrs. E. S. Fairman by the UCW to the Committee of Stewards was approved.

Dr. Davis called on T. K. Franklin, chairman of the committee studying the restructuring of church boards, for a brief statement. Mr. Franklin noted that the general council has authorized such restructuring by local congregations and invited suggestions from members as to the form this reorganization might take.

Dr. J. G. Demeza moved a vote of appreciation to Dr. and Mrs. Davis for their leadership and devoted Christain service during the past year.

In response, Dr. Davis expressed thanks, and stated his appreciation of the excellent work of the many talented laymen of the congregation in support of his efforts.

The report of the salary committee was approved.

T. K. Franklin closed the meeting.

Open Door Policy

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — The door of 10 Downing St., the British prime minister's residence in London, opens an average of 940 times a day, Prime Minister Harold Wilson's wife Mary told women members of the South Wales Labor party.

Almost Finished at Last!

Designer Lindsey Hallam helps arrange the finishing touches on costume of Flo Yanover who portrays Queen Mother Yoland in the Belleville Theatre Guild's production of "The Lark," chosen as an entry in the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival.

Much Time and Effort Required In Theatre Production Costumes

Costumes are always an integral part of any production but they are doubly important in Belleville's Theatre Guild's production of "The Lark", which has qualified for the Eastern Ontario Drama Festival.

"A great deal of time and effort has gone into this venture," commented Mrs. Marion Wilson, producer of the play. All of the 15th century costumes approximately 50, have been designed by Lindsey Hallam whose work on the project began before Christmas. Helping her to research the period costumes were Monique Templeman and Victor Rabel. A diversity of costumes is essential to produce this play — costumes for the clergy, army, courtiers and peasant sections. They all must be completed by Friday, the first complete dress rehearsal.

However, the finished products are a group effort. Mrs. Bonnie Maidment is in charge of the sewing and arranging the finishing touches. Under her direction are 12 sewers who are members of the Theatre Guild. After Lindsey drew up the designs, she and Mrs. Maidment drew up their own patterns, bought the necessary materials, brought the group of sewers together and started sewing.

A number of Belleville businessmen have co - operated by donating various items. A local furrier donated fur trimmings and a white fur jacket for use as part of a costume; a jeweller donated costume jewelry for the event and one of the local dry cleaners offered to loan clothes racks. As a result of radio advertisements, velvet drapes were donated with which to make some of the costumes. Most local fabric stores marked down their materials as a co - operative effort to help support the Guild. Some of the properties are also borrowed.

The designer and sewers were not without the customary problems. Mrs. Maidment said that sometimes she was forced to research the garments and draw them up to scale. Also the flu hit a number of sewers and put them behind schedule.

Miss Hallam mentioned that she chose the color scheme from paintings of that period.

But she has found it difficult to get the right colors for tights consequently, the orders must be sent to Toronto. Luckily she does not have to worry about designing hairdos since the actresses will be wearing tight fitting headdresses. This fashion idea started when a member of the royal family got rheumatic fever, lost all her hair and was forced to keep her head covered.

Jo Anne Cunningham from Picton, a ceramist, has worked on the jewelry and done the beading on the gowns. Eleanor Jourard has been working on the headdresses. Ordinary boots will be covered with sueding to carry through the look of "authenticity," a key word behind the designs. Louis Stover will be doing make-up for the actors and he will be conducting a practice session under lights to see that everything is in order.

Mrs. Wilson pointed out that planning had to involve flexibility in movement since the Theatre Guild is entering the EOD Festival.

The play will be running for ten performances and two nights are sold out already.

Authenticity is an important factor in any endeavor and with the help provided by some of Belleville's local businessmen the Guild hopes to provide an extra special entertainment effort.

'Far North' Topic At Study Guild

The first meeting of the Women's Study Guild for 1970 was held at the home of Mrs. R. C. Ellis, with Mrs. A. Wells and Mrs. H. G. Wylie hostesses for the social hour.

The president, Mrs. K. Daley, held a short business meeting during which letters were read from the adopted girl, Marylene Cohen. When it was learned she had been ill in hospital, it was decided to send her an additional sum of scarcity or abundance of the entertain and amuse her during her convalescence.

Miss Josephine Tickell based her devotional on Tennyson's poem "Ring out the old, Ring in the new".

Mrs. Rose Kincaid presented a most interesting talk on "The Canadian North". Using maps, books, pictures and articles from papers and magazines, the North come alive. Mrs. Kincaid pointed out the trans-Arctic crossing by the ship, "Manhattan"; the discovery of huge deposits of oil; the problems of pollution and of the Indian and Eskimo in the changes taking place in the Far North.

First, using a topographical map, she described the rocks and formations of the Arctic islands, the valley of the Yukon, the rich soil and the delta of the great Mackenzie River, the depth to which the permafrost goes, and the vast tundra country to the east with its cirques, crevasses and eskers formed by the ebb and flow of the ice during many centuries.

Speaking of the wildlife of the various regions, she said that the life and economy of the native people of those areas had been based on the scarcity of abundance of the reindeer, the caribou, the polar bear and the many fur-bearing animals. Now with the coming of machines, ships and the development of the mines and the oils wells, their whole way of life and economy had been changed. Children are being sent to boarding schools where they learn the new ways of the white man, then on their return, find they have little in common with their families who tend to cling to the old ways.

Turning to a political map of the Territories, Mrs. Kincaid showed the location of various settlements and explained their importance in this new Canadian North, such as Frobisher Bay, the administrative centre for the eastern Arctic, building its $13 million modular pre-cast town to attract tourists; Yellowknife, the seat of the two-year old Territorial Council, on the new Mackenzie highway, served by two jet planes daily from Edmonton, and the site of the world's 4th largest gold mine; Wood Buffalo Park; Norman Wells weather station and Fort Norman.

MR. AND MRS. PETER ROOKE

Rooke – Purcell

Eastminster United Church, Belleville was the scene of the marriage on Saturday, Feb. 7, 1970 of Rosemary Jane Purcell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Purcell of Belleville and Peter George Rooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Rooke also of Belleville. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. A. McDowell; organist was Mrs. R. G. McGugan and soloist, Mrs. Bob Pugh, sister of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length A-line gown of French lace with long lily pointed sleeves and a front panel of peau de soie, accentuated with a small bow at the bodice. The train of French lace fell from the shoulders and a shoulder-length three-tiered veil of tulle was attached to petals of lace and pearl coronet. She carried a cascade of red roses.

Maid of honor was Miss Ann Kehoe wearing a floor-length empire style dress of mauve sparkling crepe chiffon with long sleeves. A bow of matching material in mauve formed the headpiece. She wore matching shoes, and carried a cascade of yellow roses encircled with yellow carnations.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Mary and Sarah Rooke, sisters of the bridegroom and Miss Kathryn Purcell sister of the bride. They were dressed identically to the maid of honor, but in deep purple gowns. Each carried a cascade of yellow carnations.

Best man was Bob Pugh of Burlington and ushers were Doug Purcell of Toronto and David Purcell, brothers of the bride and Ron MacDonald.

The bridegroom's mother wore a winter white wool crepe two - piece suit trimmed with gold, brown accessories and a Woburn Abbey rose corsage.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and to various points in the U.S. the bride wore a patterned cranberry walking suit with black accessories.

The couple will reside at 338 Sidney St., Apt. 6, Belleville.

WALLBRIDGE WI

Mrs. E. Evans opened her home for the January meeting of the Wallbridge WI. After opening the meeting in the usual way, the president Mrs. Everett Phillips called on Mrs. Ray Shorey to introduce the guest speaker Wayne Martin, associate agricultural representative for Hastings County.

Mr. Martin spoke about 4H noting the changes made in regulations. It is no longer necessary to live on a farm in order to be a 4H member, but one must reside in a rural area. Mrs. Phillips thanked Mr. Martin and presented him with a small gift in appreciation for his time and effort in bringing a lot of interesting information on 4H Club work.

Business was taken care of and it was decided to send $1 per member to the MacDonald Institute. Mrs. C. Vandervelde gave a reading entitled "I Will". The draw was won by Mrs. E. Evans.

After the meeting closed, refreshments were served.

Psychiatrist Predicts

Increase in Women Medical Students

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Laura Muir Coleman Forgues, an Ottawa psychiatrist, says she expects that one-quarter of Canadian medical students will be women by the end of the decade.

No militant suffragette, she is convinced there are no barriers left to break for women in medicine.

"We have arrived, and we're wanted for our skills," Dr. Forgues said in an interview. "Women have problems that are their own and we can't ask men to solve them for us.

"We must work them out for ourselves."

She is concerned, however, with the financial problems of women medical students. During her coming term as president of the Federation of Medical Women of Canada, she plans to do something about them.

Dr. Forgues will be formally installed as federation president in Winnipeg next June. The federation promotes the interests of medical women in Canada, aids and encourages students and administers a scholarship loan fund.

"It costs $50,000 to educate a doctor, and the costs are difficult for the female student to bear because, unfortunately, she is limited in the type of summer employment she can obtain.

"The boys can make $2,000 in the summer, while a female student probably will be able to earn only $650 or so. She may not have parents who can help her financially, and even if she has another scholarship she may need more money to carry on.

"We don't like to see girls dropping out of medical school after the third year because of financial difficulties, and generally that's the reason they do, rather than through scholarship failure."

Dr. Forgues said the criticism that women eventually leave the medical profession to raise families—thus wasting their education—used to be true. But a 1969 study showed that 85 per cent of women licensed to practise medicine in Canada were doing so, either in part-time or full-time practice.

"As a result of the refresher courses held in Ottawa and Toronto last year, a good number of women have returned to work. Many of these women are operating office practices in their homes, so they can combine careers with family responsibilities."

Dr. Forgues comes by her interest in medicine naturally. Her father, the late Dr. Ralph Elwood Coleman, founded the first medical laboratories in British Columbia.

Her mother, the former nursing sister Mary McBride Muir, came to Canada from Edinburgh to open a tuberculosis sanatorium at Ste. Agathe des Monts, Que. At the outbreak of the First World War, she went overseas with the first 100 Canadian nursing sisters who accompanied the Canadian Expeditionary Force in November, 1914.

Dr. Forgues, whose husband, Roland, is also a psychiatrist, got her medical degree from McGill University. She completed post-graduate studies at British Columbia's Creese Clinic of Psychological Medicine and overseas at the Institute of Psychiatry at the University of London.

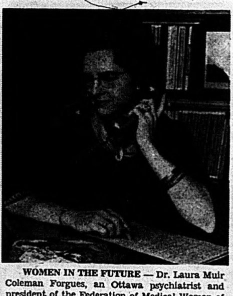
Formerly director of the children's psychiatric services at the Royal Ottawa Sanatorium, she now is in private practice and is a consultant to various hospitals and clinics in eastern Ontario.

Acting as what she terms "a family psychiatrist," she handles everything from adolescent to senility problems.

She is concened about changing family patterns and the effects they have on old people. She believes that part-time, short-term hospital treatment should be made available to retarded children and senile adults so that the other family members—especially the mother—can get away for a vacation.

"Many men think their wives have an easy time of it today but these men don't realize that in their grandmother's day there were other people available to do this.

"If mother felt she couldn't cope any longer and wanted to lie down for an hour, there was usually a maiden aunt of someone who could take charge. Today they have no one."



WOMEN IN THE FUTURE — Dr. Laura Muir Coleman Forgues, an Ottawa psychiatrist and president of the Federation of Medical Women of Canada, says she expects a quarter of Canadian medical students will be women by the end of the decade. She is convinced there are no barriers left to break for women in medicine, but she is concerned with financial problems faced by women medical students. (CP Photo)

Successful Living

Don't Trouble About What Others Think

By DORIS CLARK

A man's true greatness lies in the consciousness of an honest purpose in life, founded on a just estimate of himself and everything else, on frequent self examinations, and a steady obedience to the rule which he knows to be right, without troubling himself about what others may think or say, or whether they do or do not do that which he thinks and says and does. — Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.

Quite a code of ethics! I particularly like that part about "without troubling himself about what others may think or say."

Sometimes what - people - think worries us beyond all reason. Perhaps this is a tremendously important argument for having a Higher Allegiance, a Principle beyond oneself to be true to.

Dear Doris: My husband expected us to live in an old shack and he is away working most of the time. My dad was sick and asked me to come home to be with the rest of the family, so I did this.

My husband has come to see me several times and seemed quite happy, but this last time he was mad, and wanted a divorce. The only reason he could give was that he could not manage financially to support his family. Yet he wanted to take the children, but I wouldn't let him.

His dad won't leave him alone, is always telling him untrue stories about me. He has been trying to break up our marriage. — Upset

Dear Upset: You haven't given me much to go on. If it is true that you left the home he made for you and moved back to your parents' place, I'm curious as to just who is trying to break up that marriage.

Yet you may be justified in leaving him if your home lacked reasonable comfort. It goes without saying that a divorce is not available on grounds of inadequate finance. Expert personal counselling is what you need now.

• • •

Dear Doris: We took in my husband's 16-year-old niece. She comes from a family of seven and we thought this would give her a chance to keep on with school. She is supposed to help us with our three children.

What hurts me is she tells our friends that we use her as a slave and she has to do all my housework. She hardly does a thing around the house and only wher asked to.

We give her an allowance of $10 per month just for herself, and I have made her some dresses. I won't let her go out on school nights, or ever stay out after 11 p.m. She never wants to go back home as she would have to do all the work there and her father drinks and is always screaming at her or the mother.

Sometimes I am ready to throw in the towel and send her home, and the heck with her. But if she were to end up in trouble, I would feel guilty about it. Her three older sisters had to get married. — This I Don't Need

Dear This: Believe it or not, your rebellious girl is glad of your controls — and your care. And though she helps you reluctantly, this is also a challenge which she knows, deep down, is helping her to grow.

Talk to her about that slave complex and remind her of your real concern for her. Lay it on the line that as long as she lives in your house, she must share the work along with the friendship, and that the rules are the same as they would be for your own children.

Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Doris can tell you how it is done in Canada.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Spanish Rice and Beef Casserole

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Could you please send me a replacement for one of my favorites from your column, which I have lost? It was called Spanish Rice a la Rive, or something similar. Main ingredients were: ground beef, rice, tomatoes, beef bouillon cube, mushrooms, olives, and I forget what else. This wet, sloppy mixture comes out beautifully in the oven and I surely miss that recipe. — Mrs. S. C.

ANSWER: That was a beauty. I remember it well and am delighted to repeat it.

SPANISH BEEF AND RICE CASSEROLE (Serves 6)
(repeated from Nov. 1966)

- ¼ cup cooking oil (naturally the Spaniards use olive oil)
- ¾ cup raw long grain rice
- 1 envelope Bovril (or 1 beef bouillon cube — see below)
- 1 lb. ground chuck beef
- 1 10-oz. can mushroom stems and pieces
- ½ cup chopped stuffed olives
- 2 cups broken-up tomatoes, canned or fresh
- 1 cup liquid (liquid drained from mushroom pieces made up to 1 cup with water)
- 1½ tbsp. Angostura bitters
- ½ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- Additional stuffed olives sliced for garnishing

In medium frypan heat oil and add rice and stir until golden. This happens fairly quickly. Turn into large casserole. Sprinkle Bovril powder over. (Note: If beef bouillon cuve is used heat the one cup liquid required later on and dissolve bouillon cube in it.) Add chuck beef to same frypan, breaking it up with a fork to crumble and brown it. Drain off excess fat and turn meat into casserole. Add drained mushrooms, tomatoes, olives, bitters, 1 cup mushroom liquid and water, salt, pepper. Stir with a fork to mix. This mix is quite wet. (See note below.) Bake uncovered at 350 deg. Fahr. 40 min. or until rice is tender. Garnish top with additional sliced stuffed olives just before carrying it to the table.

NOTE: If you are planning to make this up to bake later, do so, then put in refrigerator until just before baking time. But remember to bake it for 50 min. at 350 deg. Fahr. because it is going into the oven refrigerator - cold.

70th Anniversary

IODE Performs Many Services

Today the IODE (Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire) celebrates its 70th birthday.

The IODE, a progressive Canadian Women's Organization, faces a continual challenge in the world of today but can be justifiably proud of its many accomplishments.

This national organization, comprised of over 24,000 members, raises and disburses annually over $1,000,000 for education, emergency and disaster relief.

In the field of "Service" over a half a million dollars annually is spent at home and abroad: $379,000 in Canada and $129,000 overseas.

It is impossible to give a complete resume of the work done or gifts contributed, but some of special note are: a revolving bed unit for treatment of burns, a heart monitor, a resuscitator, an anaesthetic table and a collimator, which is a cone shaped attachment for an x-ray machine sent to Korea.

Countless hours of volunteer assistance are given to hospitals, Red Cross clinics, Senior Citizen's homes, Canadian Cancer Society, with local chapters, Argyll and St. Julien Chapters taking part. Members of both chapters have an active part in Citizenship Court, greeting and entertaining New Canadians to this area.

Large shipments of clothing and knitting valued at $66,000 were sent overseas by Ontario chapters. The MEND program provides volunteers for the Ontario Government's Program for Children with Mental and Emotional Disorders. IODE volunteers work in clinics and homes, and as drivers to clinics and special schools.

Locally, the Argyll and St. Julien Chapter, IODE are donors to Quinte Mental Health Association; also donate to the Christmas Exchange.

In educational services over $330,000 was expended. The number of Canadian schools receiving assistance is an impressive total of 1,888. Books, magazines and educational equipment are sent to the Secondary Schools in the West Indies. Also to the Adult Education Centre at Frobisher Bay, Northwest Territories.

Awards to assist students are given throughout Ontario from the Lucy Morrison Memorial Fund for Education. Students from the local area have received assistance from this fund. The St. Julien and Argyll Chapters both award bursaries to students of secondary Schools in Belleville. In addition to this, IODE calendars are placed in the Elementary Schools of this community.

The National Ballet, National Theatre School of Canada and the National Youth Orchestra continue to be supported financially, thus showing the interest of the Order in Canadian Arts. St. Julien Chapter is a member of Quinté Arts Council and has sponsored the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra in their presentation for six years.

Approximately $60,000 was awarded from IODE First and Second War Memorial Funds to provide post-graduate scholarships of $3,000 each (for study in Canada) and $5,000 each (for overseas study.)

Members have shown an acute awareness of the needs of Indians and Metis, and have offered willing assistance where possible. The IODE maintains close contact with the Friendship Centres in Canada and gives outstanding donations to them.

The IODE is now "Seventy Years Old". It is anxious to remain strong and vital, have a modern outlook, projects of widespread interest and, above all, continue as an organization which is young at heart and swinging with the times.

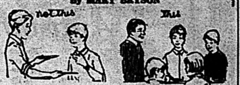
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Johnny, hurry up and finish your dinner. I want to get the dishes done so I can do the ironing tonight."

Johnny: "I'm not through telling you about the basketball game. You're always so busy since you started to work."

Make a special effort to be available when children want to talk. Even teen-agers need family companionship and often the dinner hour is the only time the family can gather to converse in a leisurely fashion.

A half hour of conversation and companionship will be more important to your family than all the housework you can do in the same half hour. Working mothers, especially, must take time, make time to listen.

Ann Landers

No Such Thing As 'Free Sex'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I met a girl about a year ago. I was 21. We fell in love and I asked her to marry me. I made it clear I'd have to finish school first. She agreed to wait. For ten months we had a beautiful love affair.

ANN LANDERS

Last fall the girl enrolled in college and is now living away from home. She says she loves me and is waiting for me — but not exactly. By that she means she is having "free sex" with several boys but she is not emotionally involved with any of them. When I ask her why she does this she says she needs to learn the difference between uncommitted sex and meaningful sex. She also insists the only way she can learn if our love is real is by comparing it with other kinds of love.

I believe if she really loved me she wouldn't need all this experimentation. Furthermore, I don't understand "free sex." Please explain it? — BIG Q.

DEAR Q.: There's no such thing as "free sex." Everything has a price and sex is no exception. The price your girl might have to pay is the love of a young man who really cares for her. Uncommitted sex is a new name for an old game. We called it "shacking up — no strings attached." The game was always a disappointment and, of course, the female players, then, as now were the losers. The odds always favor the dealer, honey. And when it comes to sex, the men hold the deck.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Everyone I know reads Ann Landers. Please convey a vital message to Mr. and Mrs. Reader and their children.

The minute you finish this column, place a pen or pencil and a writing pad by the telephone. You never know when you'll be asked to take down a number or a name. How often has your memory gone blank and no matter how hard you try, you couldn't reconstruct the message? This can create real trouble when the message is for someone else.

At first glance this letter might seem to dull to print, but it could save lots of fights. — LEARNED THE HARD WAY.

DEAR LEARNED: Well said — and now may I add a word? Since people habitually carry off pens and pencils, tie a writing instrument to your phone. Even then, they often disappear, but it diminishes the chances of being caught without one.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a Catholic. My fiance is a Methodist. His folks have money. Mine don't. We couldn't have much of a wedding if my folks paid for it so I agreed to let his folks pay.

Now I find we must be married in his church instead of mine. I'm sick about this because my religion is important to me. He says his religion is important to him, too. What does this sound like to you? — MARY.

DEAR MARY: Trouble. The kind that gets worse with time. His and Hers are O.K. for guest towels, but not for places of worship. We all know exceptions and, of course, we all like to think of ourselves as exceptional, but not many of us actually are.

Benson Under Attack

Anti-inflation Policies Are Assailed

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson heard his anti-inflation policies savaged as heartless, ruthless, inhuman and wrongful in the Commons Thursday.

David Lewis, New Democrat deputy leader, said the government has deliberately created unemployment in an unsuccessful effort to combat inflation.

"There has been no effect of that policy on the price level in this country," Mr. Lewis said as he introduced a motion calling for a turn-about in economic policy.

"Prices have been steadily going up and the rate of increase has hardly been affected by this ruthless and inhuman policy of the government."

In the meantime, the national unemployment figure had hit six per cent and may now by 6.5 per cent, just as Prime Minister Trudeau said in December that it might.

"But altogether more disturbing . . . is that there is no indication the government is ready to call a halt to this continuing descent into recession for the people of Canada," Mr. Lewis said.

Mr. Lewis dismissed the agreement on price restraints reached earlier this week by business leaders and the prices and incomes commission at a two-day meeting in Ottawa.

The agreement was nothing more than a declaration of profit maintenance with business merely saying it would not put up prices if profits remained at their 1969 level.

As for the banks who have agreed not to increase service charges, he claimed the service charges were already usurious, immoral and gouging.

Such agreements were not going to role back the cost of living.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield hesitated to accept the remedy proposed by the New Democrat: "a genuine price control policy with teeth."

That would lead to a thoroughly planned economy, he cautioned. "That is not the policy suooort."

Mr. Stanfield called once again for voluntary wage and price guides, modified by a selective public works program in underdeveloped areas of the country.

Mr. Benson said unemployment is at normal seasonal levels, higher than last year but at a much lower rate than in some years past—1961, for example, when it reached 10 per cent under a Conservative government.

"It is a fact of life in Canada that in January unemployment is typically higher than in the summer months."

Robarts Anxious to Keep Ontario's Economy Booming

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts will go to a federal-provincial conference next week with a promise of co-operation in fighting inflation, but with a warning to Ottawa not to prevent the Ontario golden goose from laying its Canadian golden eggs.

"I don't know what proposals will be made by the federal government, but I take inflation very seriously," he told a news thing we can do to control it we will do."

There is a "real worry," however, that Ontario, as the richest province in Canada, may be adversely affected in attempts to control inflation by slowing down the economy.

"We have a booming economy and we want to keep it that way," he said. "Ontario is very important in the economy of Canada, and we must be careful that nothing is done in the name of inflation-control that can damage our economy to the point that it cannot continue to be used as it is in the national economy."

Mr. Robarts said the federal government "puts back into Ontario $1,125,000,000 less than it takes out."

The premier said Ottawa has the power to do anything it wants in a national emergency, and noted it has done so in wartime. Ontario will not, on technical grounds of constitutional authority, take issue with any federal action taken in light of a national emergency.

But some economists believe fiscal and economic measures already taken by the federal government are working, and that Canada may be coming to the end of its inflationary period.

Britain May Tighten Its Law on Abortion

LONDON (Reuters) — A move to tighten a British law legalizing abortion will be made in Parliament today by a Canadian-born legislator.

Opponents of present legislation claim that London is becoming the abortion capital of the world. They say American women are being offered package tours for operations to end unwanted pregnancies and that doubtful characters lurk at airports to steer girls to "get-rich-quick" doctors and clinics.

But defenders of the April, 1968, law which legalized abortion reply that any measure to amend the law would merely increase the number of criminal abortions.

Briant Godman Irvine, an opposition Conservative party MP who was born in Toronto, will seek approval in principle today for a bill that will require a consultant gynecologist within the National Health Service or medical practitioners of equal status to supervise abortions.

"The way things are, any general practitioner is able to set about chopping a woman up," said Irvine, whose work as a lawyer brought him into contact with what he called the cruelty and inhumanity of abortion.

He said a government minister in Denmark told him that Scandinavian women, refused abortions under their own laws, mostly headed for Britain or Poland.

"Our system seems to be even more liberal than that of Sweden and Denmark," Irvine said.

He said his reform bid is supported by the British Medical Association and by an association of Gynecologists and obstetricians.

Bristol to Winnipeg

City Offers July Welcome to Nonsuch

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
(Staff Reporter)

The old-fashioned ketch Nonsuch, now chugging her way placidly up Bristol Channel today after riding out a severe storm Thursday, may cast her anchor in Belleville harbor this summer.

"Belleville's recreation committee is optimistic that the Nonsuch will make a stop in Belleville this summer, probably in the latter part of July," said Ald. Donald Soutter this morning.

The Hudson's Bay Company vessel, a replica of the 17th-century ship that laid the foundations of its fur trade, is heading for upchannel Bristol today to be shipped to Montreal late in March. Before she goes to Winnipeg as a permanent exhibit, she will make her way at a leisurely pace up the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

The Hudson's Bay Company has indicated its willingness to have the ketch come to Belleville if adequate docking facilities can be provided.

"Laird Rankin of the company has said he would be coming to Belleville in late February. At that time the recreation committee hopes representative of the Harbor Commission and Bay of Quinte Yacht Club can get together with the recreation committee members to solve any problems that might arise," said Ald. Soutter.

The ketch draws slightly over nine feet of water at her stern, and requires a turning circle of 60 feet to come about — both conditions readily available in Belleville harbor.

Nonsuch weathered a 65 - mile-an - hour gale yesterday that created fears for her eight-man crew. An air-sea search was called off after the vessel turned up and advised she needed no help.

History came to life Aug. 26, 1968 as the second Nonsuch was launched in the little Devon town of Appledorf. A full-sized replica of the first ship that carried courier-de-bois Groseilliers and company to Hudson Bay in 1668, she was reconstructed from 17th century models and paintings lodged at the National Maritime Museum at Greenwich, England.

The building of the vessel called for the revival of old skills now rapidly passing out of use. Carvings decorate Nonsuch from bow to stern, and canvas sails give a centuries-old air to the little ketch.

Sail makers and apprentices relished the change to canvas from modern terylene sails, but the striking thing they noted about the finished product is how little things have changed over 300 years.

Twentieth century additions for the crew's comfort and safety include a coat of anti-foulent paint, an electrical supply system, a modern galley and a 100 horsepower diesel engine for manoeuvring in and out of port.

Nonsuch was built as one of the major events of the Hudson's Bay Company's 300th anniversary celebrations in Canada in 1970.

Following the historic voyage of the first Nonsuch, during which the vessel carried back to England a cargo of fur worth $60,000.00 in modern currency, a group of businessmen and courtiers formed "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay". It held intact a vast territory of 1,400,000 square miles of Canada until advancing technology made settlement and development possible.

Second Stage Looks at World Through 'Rose Colored' Glass

By Word of Mouth, Belleville's most successful drop - in Centre to date, has changed its name to the Second Stage.

And with that name change has come a new system of management and, more important, a new philosophy and sense of responsibility.

The centre is offically run by two private individuals, Roland Belanger and Byron Casselman and a committee of young people who take care of the centre's maintenance.

And now a manager has been obtained, someone there most of the time and answerable to the committee.

All of the drop - in's organizers, including manager Ian Rutherford, are happy with the new atmosphere.

"Now it's got atmosphere where it didn't before," Mr. Rutherford said. "The kids are more willing to come in."

Things also improved now that everyone is pitching in to keep the centre maintained. And its design could compare with any drop - in within hundreds of miles.

Mr. Rutherford also explained that renovations are not yet complete with more barn board being located and bar stools yet to be installed.

However, the centre in its present state testifies to what unified young people can do when it comes to design.

One wall is comprised of a shellacked collage while another has been painted in the tradition of the best exponents psychedellia complete with the youthful message of life—peace, love and happiness.

At present, the Second Stage activity calendar is full of events, mostly of a rock music nature. The centre features at least one rock dance per weekend to be held in the centre or elsewhere.

And Wednesdays there are events planned as well as some jamming done by local musicians.

"The main thing on the Wednesday is to break the week," Mr. Rutherford explained. "We don't plan on much money. The Friday and Saturday evenings are designed to pay for things."

Still the idea of the events is to keep the admission low and yet build up an activity fund.

Another upcoming plan is to add a discussion room to the centre a little later on and the discussions would have no age restrictions.

Of course at present the centre has no restrictions on age. "The place is open to respectable adults," one patron commented.

The Second Stage is suffering growing pains, pains that the Belleville young people are finding pleasant.

Since renovations have been completed the centre has held four dances including the carnival production at Ben Bleecker.

Ameliasburg Fire Hall To Be Opened Saturday

AMELIASBURG —On Saturday afternoon former Reeve George Cunningham will cut the ribbon to officially open the township's new fire hall at Rossmore.

Afterwards, one of the earliest settled areas of Upper Canada, many years before Confederation, will be able to advertise its fire protection service for the first time.

The event provides fire chief Arnold Wetherall and the other 20 volunteers with the opportunity of running through their drill and training syllabus with a crowd watching.

Invitations to the opening ceremony have gone out to Norris Whitney MPP Prince Edward - Lennox, Gordon Lloyd, warden of Prince Edward County, Clyde Pope representing the Ontario Fire Marshal's office and others. The general public is welcome and expected to participate.

The ribbon cutting has been set for 2 p.m. and signals open house to continue through to 7 p.m.

Sailing Skippers Seek Crews with Experience

With interest in sailing growing rapidly and the number of large yachts on Quinte waters increasing each year, a shortage of crew is becoming evident locally.

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club is doing something about it, with the institution tonight of a course for sailors, beginners and experienced.

The course will run every Friday night at 8 p.m. at the yacht club in Victoria Park, under the direction of Commodore Richard Bird.

The series of lectures and demonstrations is open to the public for a nominal fee to cover cost of film rental and the evenings will be conducted on a semi-social basis with wives welcomed to participate. There are no tests or examinations.

Each Friday evening will include a lecture on such topics as winches, spinnaker handling, sail construction, and racing rules.

Special evenings are planned with Ed Botterell of Hood Sails in Kingston as lecturer and with films of this year's Canada Cup macth. Personnel from C and C Yachts in Belleville will also be on hand some evenings to lecture. Films of the last two challengers for the America's Cup by the Australians will be shown.

Club directors hope the senior sailing course will fill a community need and ensure a pool of crew for the long distance races now popular on local waters — especially the 120 mile around-the-county race held each August.

Madoc Eagerly Awaits Visit of 33 Students

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Brotherhood will soon be more than just a word in Madoc.

It will become a living experience for elementary school children in the village and their parents when 33 Negro children from a Washington DC school arrive Feb. 22 to spend a week.

The Washington sixth graders, ranging in age from 10 to 13, will be accompanied by their teacher, Jay Cohen, his wife, and three parents representing the Parent - Teacher Association of their school, W. B. Patterson Elementary School.

While they are in the Madoc district, the Washington children will be billeted with families of Madoc pupils. To give the visitors as many experiences as possible some have been placed on farms — the first chance they will have had to sample rural life.

Plans now call for the Grade 6 through 8 pupils and their visitors at the Madoc school to occupy the large open area classroom recently built at the school.

Three hundred children will share the room with eight teachers. The Washington teachers will join the Madoc staff for team teaching during the week.

"The teachers' job will be to correlate the interest of the students in as many subjects areas as possible," said principal John Murphy in announcing the visit. "The visitors and their hosts will go by bus to Ottawa Feb. 25 so that the children may compare the two capital cities. Other than short excursions to nearby points of interest, the rest of the week will be spent directly at the school. The time table and program will be extremely flexible."

Excitement is running high at the Madoc school as the host group prepare for the visit. The Madoc and Washington pupils are corresponding and doing a major study of the geography of the area separating Madoc and Washington. They have also learned each other's national anthem.

The practical venture into brotherhood is the outgrowth of a 1966 visit made by 40 teachers from the centre Hastings area to Washington.

They spent their professional development day that year in a tour of Washington schools and learned of the dearth of knowledge there concerning Canada. The visit of the Negro children to Madoc is an outgrowth of the Washington excursion and the correspondence that developed afterward.

"The invitation was extended to the Washington group as part of the Ontario department of education's 'project school to school' in conjunction with international education year 1970," said Mr. Murphy. "In this project, schools in Ontario are twinned with schools in other parts of the world. One Grade 7 class at Madoc Public School has been twinned with a Grade 7 class in Port of Spain, Trinidad. Other pupils felt they would like to have visitors from some other country. Washington was chosen so that we might return the cordial welcome we received in 1966."

"The community response has been terrific," said Mr. Murphy this morning. "We have had people telephoning us to offer their services and equipment for winter sports activities for the pupils. Sleigh and snowmobile rides are scheduled to give the southern children a sample of traditional Canadian winter fun."

The Madoc and district Home and School Association is planning a social evening Feb. 23 as an official welcome for the visitors.

Although the Hastings county board of education and its administration is solidly behind the principal's brotherhood scheme, there is no financial involvement. The Washington group is paying its own transportation expenses, and the costs in Madoc are a volunteer community matter.

Bowman Blasts Blues After Sixth Straight Setback

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Manager and coach Scotty Bowman fired a few verbal blasts at his St. Louis Blues earlier this week in an attempt at pushing them out of their recent slump, but the competition is proving too tough.

Bowman's Blues took their second beating in as many nights when they went into Detroit Thursday and gave up a 5-2 decision to the Red Wings.

Despite the loss the Blues hold a 10-point lead in the West Division, but second-place Philadelphia Flyers stayed on the trail by holding Toronto Maple Leafs to a 3-3 tie in the only other scheduled contest.

The Blues now have lost their last six games and Bowman's reaction to the slump was to demote three of his regulars—Andre Boudrias, Larry Keenan and Ron Anderson—to the minor leagues last Monday.

"It's going to be back to work for the Blues," he said. "Work and more work."

Their work Thursday night was not nearly adequate as Pete Stemkowski scored twice and set up another goal by captain Alex Delvecchio to lead the Wings before a home crowd of 14,281.

The Blues' chances of getting back into the win column are slightly improved by the weekend schedule which has them meeting weaker West Division opponents—last-place Los Angeles Kings and second-last Minnesota North Stars.

The Flyers' win column, meanwhile, holds a total of only 13, but their total of ties grew to 19 Thursday night, just four short of the league record of 23 by Montreal Canadiens in the 1962-63 season.

Dave Keon broke a 1-1 tie and put the Leafs ahead 3-1 with two second-period goals in the game before 14,606 fans at Philadelphia, but goals by Reggie Fleming and Simon Nolet brought the Flyers back to the deadlock. Nolet's tying goal came with more than five minutes remaining in the game.

"I thought we deserved to win," Leafs coach Johnny McLellan said after the game. "But when you blow a two-goal lead. . . ."

Bill Sutherland of the Flyers scored a first-period goal that was matched by Mike Walton's 18th of the season for the Leafs who dropped 10 points behind Detroit in the run for a playoff spot in the East Division.

The Red Wings now have 62 points, seven behind third-place Montreal and three ahead of Hawks.

Goalie Bernie Parent provided the difference for the Flyers who were outshot in the contest 38-32. Bruce Gamble took the loss in the Toronto nets.

The Flyers announced Thursday that Parent has lost his backup man. Goalie Doug Favell will be out for the rest of the season with a severed achilles tendon, the club said.

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — There may be fewer Canadian Football League games seen this fall in Kingston and Peterborough, Ont., Montreal, Lethbridge, Alta., Brandon, Man., and the entire province of Saskatchewan.

The two CFL conferences, negotiating separate television contracts, are seeking to extend the 75-mile blackout area to prevent cable companies from televising games back into the city where they originate.

This was one of the more significant developments out of the league annual meeting here Thursday.

The CFL also voted to modify its import restrictions to make an exception for quarterbacks.

Under the previous ruling, when a team dressed all 14 imports, one had to be designated as an alternate. If he got into a game, the man he replaced was out for the rest of the contest.

Under the new rule, this has been extended to allow a coach to name a quarterback as his alternate import and allow this man to spell off the regular quarterback as necessary without forcing the regular quarterback out of the game.

But it was the cable television problem which held the spotlight.

CFL Commissioner Jake Gaudaur termed it "the No. 1 problem" in the league and said it was far from settled.

"One thing we have to do is convince the appropriate authorities of the gravity of the situation as it relates to football," he said.

The commissioner said cable companies "do not need to retransmit our signals into a blackout area to prosper normally."

Extension of the blackout area, he said, diminishes the exposure of the game and also diminishes the worth of the product to regular television.

"Hopefully, we can arrive at some sort of a solution which would preclude the necessity, as an example, of extending blackouts in the case of Ottawa home games to Kingston and Montreal, because of the millions of Canadians who are going to be deprived of seeing Canadian football," Gaudaur said.

Gaudaur said the Eastern conference is negotiating its television contract on the understanding that Kingston and Montreal would be blacked out on games played in Ottawa. This would mean that games involving Montreal Alouettes playing in Ottawa would not be fed back into the Kingston and Montreal areas. However, there would be no such reciprocal restriction on Ottawa appearances in Montreal.

"Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats ask that Peterborough be blacked out on Toronto and Hamilton games," he said.

Out West, Calgary Stampeders want Lethbridge blacked out; Winnipeg Blue Bombers want Brandon cut off and "Saskatchewan Roughriders want the entire province of Saskatchewan blacked out."

In other developments Thursday, it was announced that the 1970 Grey Cup, to be played in Toronto, would be on Saturday, Nov. 28. It was on a Sunday in Montreal last year.

The league will also require that the Grey Cup teams show up in Grey Cup city at the latest by Wednesday of Grey Cup week, bowing to demands by reporters who found little to write about in Montreal last year for most of the big week.

The nine CFL clubs agreed that none of them would use any electronic communications devices during a game other than bench-to-spotter equipment bench-to-spotter equipuse by teams of video-tape replay machines such as used by TV stations.

And the CFL ruled that a man who retires after July 15 must stay retired for the rest of the year.

Teams with an import more than the 14 allowed were tempted to "retire" him, keeping him handy to be "unretired" in case of injury to another import.

Clampdown On Late Stalling

TORONTO (CP) — Two of the most maddening tactics in football—late-game stalling by taking too much time in the huddle, and deliberately giving up two points to keep possession of the ball—have been curbed by the Canadian Football League.

Commissioner Jake Gaudaur, in a news conference at the CFL annual meeting here, stated:

"A violation of the 20-second time count will cost the offending team the loss of a down if such infraction occurs after the three-minute warning signal has been given in either half. Such will be the case on the first or second down; however, the penalty on third down shall be loss of 10 yards with the down repeated."

As under the existing rule, the time-in signal will not be given until the ball is snapped on the play following the penalty.

Under the old rule, no loss of down was involved and the penalty was five yards.

Teams leading by a slim margin late in the game have resorted to "stalling tactics," running out the clock by taking repeated penalties for exceeding the time count.

"The amendment was made by the CFL rules committee," the commissioner said.

"We asked the coaches' opinions and not all of them were in favor of a change. They felt the situation should be left as it was. But while we seek the coaches' advice, they have no vote on the rules committee."

Gaudaur said he had heard complaints that in the last season there had been "about eight" instances of stalling tactics in the late stages of close games.

One of the other significant rule changes for the 1970 season allows a defending team the option of declining to accept the two points resulting when a team intentionally gives up a safety touch to retain possession of the ball.

Previously, the team in possession could run the ball back into its own end zone, giving up two points but retaining possession on the 25-yard line.

Now, the defending team "can elect to have the play ruled as an ordinary incompleted pass," with the team in possession going ahead with the next play from the previous line of scrimmage.

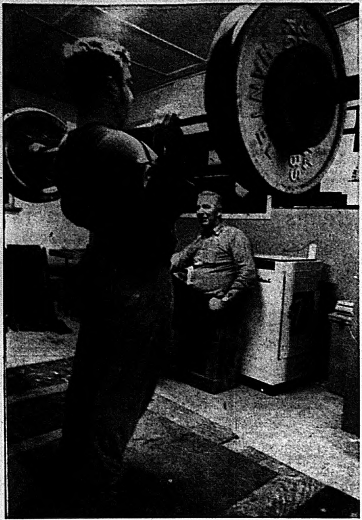
Apollo Lifters Know Calorie-counting Doesn't Necessarily Pay Dividends



Weight-Watching

Apollo Barbell Club coach Ken Carr-Braint watches heavyweight Price Morris go through his training paces in preparation for the British Commonwealth Game Weightlifting Team trials to be staged in Belleville May 23. Morris, who held the Canadian heavyweight championship for five years, has already met the standard required to compete in July's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Reducing is one of the more popular hobbies in this calorie-conscious age.

A year ago, Walt, 20, was a Commonwealth lightweight (148-pound class) record-holder. A couple of months ago, at 161 pounds, Bob was trying to make the 800-pound minimum standard needed to be a serious contender as a middleweight member of Canada's nine-member lifting team to July's Edinburgh Commonwealth Games.

But in weightlifting, beefing up one's body usually means adding more plates to the barbells.

"Bob's made tremendous gains," enthused coach Ken Carr-Braint. "His three-lift total went from 740 to 780 pounds from November to January."

Over the same period, Walt beefed up his frame from 161 to 180 pounds.

"Bob decided in November he wanted to make the Games' standard in light - heavyweight," Carr-Braint explained. "He's doing around 800 right now and has a couple of meets between now and the Games Trials to make it."

All Apollo Club activities are being geared toward the May 23 British Commonwealth Games Weightlifting Trials to be held in Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

The local lifting club has already qualified six lifters to compete in the prestigious event, which also doubles as the Canadian Weightlifting Championships.

The lifters who hoise the most above this year's Commonwealth Games standards in their respective weight classes get berths on the nine-member Canadian contingent to Edinburgh.

Bob Walt is one Apollo Club lifter given a good shot at one of the nine spots by Carr-Braint. The other is Price Morris, former five-time Canadian heavyweight titlist making a heavy comeback following a six-month layoff after losing his title in Quebec City last year.

BOB WALT
Beefing Up

The 28-year-old strongman didn't accomplish a 900-pound total in 1969, but since the first of the year has met the 950-pound standard required for Commonwealth Games heavyweights.

Morris still has until May's Belleville Trials to regain the 1967 form that brought him the Canadian record of 1,030 pounds.

"He's been over 1,000 pounds about four times, but not since 1968," coach Carr-Braint noted.

Meanwhile, the Apollo Club members have several opportunities to publicly test their performance capabilities.

Senior lifters will compete in the Feb. 21 Bay of Quinte Invitational meet, and a group of Apollo members will give a Thursday, Feb. 26 demonstration to the Duke of Edinburgh Unit of the Army, Navy, Air Force Association.

The following Saturday, Feb. 28, will see the Apollo Club well represented at the Ontario and Canadian teenage championships in Hamilton.

Art Walt's Canadian light-heavyweight teenage mark of 750 pounds should be in no danger, and Ron Hayes, currently doing 405 pound totals, is a strong contender for 114-pound class honors.

In Kingston Tonight

Mo-Hawks Starting at Bottom

Belleville's Mo-Hawks are literally starting at the bottom up to try and revamp their OHA Senior A attack.

"We're going to be concentrating on our skating between now and the playoffs," said coach Davey Jones as the Mo-Hawks prepared to head into Kingston for a 9 o'clock game tonight.

"If you're skating, everything else 'comes easy.'

Lack of conditioning that developed during the club's month-long slump has even affected the club's better skaters, like George Godson.

Jones had Godson doing duty with every forward combination he could think of in the third period of Friday's 6-3 loss to Barrie. "That's the only way to get your skating legs, by getting lots of ice time," said Jones.

Jones has also been concerned about the performance of Godson's right winger Al Ferguson.

The husky Trenton forward had 20 goals in his first 28 games, but has connected for only two in his last eight outings. Jones is toying with the notion of replacing Ferguson on what started off as the club's "Bread - and - Butter" line, whose other member has been hard-working left-winger Lorne O'Donnell.

"I'm interested on how best to work our young players — like Wayne McConnell — into the lineup," he added.

With only this weekend's home-and-home series with Kingston, and one with Orillia next weekend remaining in the regular schedule, Jones is looking for some fast forward combinations to throw at first-round playoff opposition.

The club went through a hard hour-long workout Thursday night, and go into tonight's Kingston game with only Lou Kazowski and Bob Wilson definite absentees.

Wilson, who has shown steady improvement over his first four games of rugged defence duty, will miss tonight's game and Sunday's 2 p.m. Memorial Arena return match with the Aces due to his coaching commitment with the Havelock juvenile all - stars.

The length of Kazowski's layoff has not yet beeen determined.

Going into Kingston tonight the Mo-Hawks have lost their last five meetings with the third - place Aces, after winning their first three confrontations of the season.

McClocklin Reinstated

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Rick McClocklin of the Barrie Flyers, suspended indefinitely earlier this week by the Ontario Hockey Association, was expected to return to action tonight in Senior A play against Orillia Terriers.

Team manager Larry Wood said OHA president Clarence Smaltz agreed to have the player reinstated after talks between him and Flyers coach Ray Gariepy.

McClocklin was suspended after an incident with a referee in last Sunday's game against the Belleville Mo-Hawks.

Now Ellis Juniors After Third

"Fourth - place high and rising" could sum up the situation for the Ellis Juniors as they face the Peterborough Don Byes in a home-and-home series this weekend. The Juniors trail Peterborough by five points, with each team having three remaining games and a weekend sweep by Belleville could set the stage for a do-or-die situation in their final games against Trenton and Cobourg.

The teams have split their last two encounters with Peterborough winning 8-4 in Belleville and dropping a 6-5 decision on home ice. The game in the Liftlock city was the best of the season from a spectator standpoint, as each team hammered in four goals in the last period, after the Printers had taken a 2-1 lead. Since then, Belleville has been unbeaten in five games to run their string to seven.

The 13 points accumulated in the last seven games is over half the Ellis total for the year as the team has caught fire after some early season difficulties.

One Don Bye who'll receive special attention Friday night will be winger Gary Brewer, whose goal total has climbed to 35, tops in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League. As Ellis coach Floyd Crawford put it, "We plan on making Brewer number one on our hit parade when he crosses that blue line."

In all probability the visitors will be returning the favor against Ellis scoring leader Terry Meagher. The right winger with the devastating slapshot has counted 26 goals and 29 assists, tying him with scoring leader Jim Robson.

JOHN McCONNELL
Nose No Drawback

Meagher was particularly hot in the last two games against Cobourg, counting consecutive hat tricks. It was his tally at 17.13 of the third period that gave Belleville their 6-5 comeback win in Peterborough.

Centre John McConnell, second only to linemate Meagher in team scoring, suffered a broken nose when he was caught by a high stick in the game against Cobourg on Monday night.

The lanky Picton product was operated on Wednesday morning, but will be in action against the Don Byes wearing some kind of protective device for his plastered proboscis. His presence will keep intact the Printers highest scoring line.

The defence will be strengthened considerably by the return of top cop, Dalton Lambert, who was suspended for the last game.

Lambert, along with Greg Burkitt and John Mulvihill have been the bulwarks in front of netminder Ron Jury, who has a goals against average of 3.71 for the last seven games. Jury has been the steadying influence behind Belleville's drive to this season's playoff wars.

Hockey, Hockey, Hockey, . . .

Quinte Secondary School students hope to make history for history this weekend when they try to break the North American hockeython record of 57 hours and 19 minutes, set by a Chicago high school group.

A hockeython, as the name stop hockey game which implies, is a marathon non-could result in paralysis of the writing hand for the scorekeeper. In a recent game in Montreal a team called, appropriately enough the Sleepwalkersn edged the opposition 260-259, in a 55-hour battle.

The objective of all this blister - raising is to collect funds for a school history trip to New York City. Each of the 36 boys participating is backed by a group of sponsors, who agree to pay him so much an hour for the games duration.

According to organizer Jim Sled, Quinte's hockey hotshots have set an objective of 60 straight hours. The contest began at 3 o'clock this afternoon and could run through until 3 a.m. Monday.

Each shift will rompete for six consecutive hours after which they will be replaced by another group of hockey-playing diehards.

Site of the contest will be the open-air rink on College Street next to Quinte Secondary. Mayor Russell Scott of Belleville was to drop the puck for the opening face-off this afternoon.

Sunday Last Tomorrow With Trenton for Minors

There are no tomorrows for three of Belleville's minor hockey league all-star teams. The Rollins Construction Pee-Wees, Kinsmen Bantams and Blake Kerr Imperial Midgets all play the deciding games in their first - round play-off series with Trenton Sunday.

The Rollins crew took a tight 3-2 decision from the Trenton Flyers to square their series at one game apiece last Sunday, after Trenton won the first match 5-2. The Belleville team hopes to repeat the close checking formula that was successful for them in the second contest. The third game of the series will be played Sunday at the Belleville Arena, starting at 5.30 p.m.

OMHA "AA" champions for the past two years, the Kinsmen bantams hope to get a chance to make it three in a row by eliminating Trenton's Kiwanis team in a 5.30 Sunday game in Trenton's Community Gardens. Belleville was a victim of Curtis McLean's overtime goal at 6.36 in the last game, won 2-1 by Trenton, which prevented the Kinsmen from taking the series, after an 8-0 win in the second contest. The clubs played to a 4-4 saw-off in the opener.

Goaltender Bruce Clarke has been a standout in the Belleville nets allowing just five goals in the three games played, and forward Andy Ricketts has accounted for six of the Kinsmen's 13 series' goals.

According to Blake Kerr Imperials coach Bob Burrows, "We'll have to hustle to beat Trenton. I just hope the team plays as well as last game — when you get 43 shots on goal you're not just standing around."

Burrowes midget all-stars showed a complete reversal of form taking a 5-3 decision after being bombed 11-6 in the opener. Final game of the series will be played in Belleville Sunday night at 8 p.m.

A fourth member of the minor hockey league system, the Towers Food City Novices begin defence of their Zone 4 championship, which they have captured the last two years. The novices meet Trenton in a 12.30 Sunday game at the Memorial Arena after a tournament warmup Saturday in Prescott.

Braves Get Inspiration

"Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition" sums up the play-off strategy of coach Wayne Drake of the Bata Braves in the upcoming Eastern Ontario Intermediate C semi-finals against Little Britain.

The Brave mentor announced the signing of Father Frank Murphy who has been performing recently with the Flying Fathers hockey team and Don Hughes, who Drake hopes will bolster the fire-power of his front lines. Hughes has been refereeing and been playing intersquad hockey at CFB Trenton.

Opening game of the playoffs is scheduled for next Thursday night in Stirling.

Braddock Picks Underdog Ellis to Outclass Joe Frazier

This is the last in a series of three articles by James J. Braddock, former world heavyweight champion, analyzing the Joe Frazier-Jimmy Ellis fight for the undisputed heavyweight crown in Madison Square Garden on Monday, Feb. 16.

By JAMES J. BRADDOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The more I think about it, the more I'm amazed by the fight between Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis in Madison Square Garden next Monday to clear up the heavyweight situation.

It's so much like my own fight for the title with Max Baer in the Long Island Bowl on June 13, 1935. At the end of 1933, I was just another Irishman working on the Hoboken docks taking a fight here and there to make a few bucks. As far as I was concerned, my career as a fighter was over. I never thought about titles or big money. Just making a living and that was tough in those days.

Then, in 1934, I got a break.

The Garden put me in against Corn Griffin and I knocked him out in three. Then they gave me John Henry Lewis, who later became light heavyweight champion, and I beat him in 10. In March of 1935, they fed me to Art Lasky in a 15-rounder to provide a challenger for Baer and I won. I got my Baer. And I'm saying right here that Jimmy Ellis will get his Frazier.

Baer was the powerhouse, cocky, always popping off, and everybody thought unbeatable.

Frazier is undefeated, strong and bullish, and like Baer, showing no respect for an opponent. Like Baer, he appears to be a little too sure of himself.

Baer and Frazier were different in styles, of course, but if ever two fighters were made for each other, Baer was made for me, and Frazier is custom-tailored for Ellis.

Ellis will beat Frazier because he's the better, smarter, more mature fighter. He'll move in and out, keep Frazier off balance with a good left hand and always be ready with that "sneak" right of his that is a deadly punch. He uses it better than I have ever seen and it's on target.

Frazier is the perfect target for Ellis. He's easy to hit, particularly with right hands. He has only one way of fighting and that's to pressure in, punching all the time to the head and body. But Joe Frazier is not a knockout puncher and he'll find a different kind of enemy in Ellis. Ellis knows what he's doing every minute and he'll take charge right away.

Ellis is also a little hungrier than Frazier. He hasn't fought in more than a year but that won't bother him at 30. He hasn't had too many fights and he hasn't taken too much punishment. Ellis is as much a 5-to-1 underdog with Frazier as I was a 10-to-1 underdog with Baer. The prices are ridiculous.

Ellis can win this fight by a knockout or decision. He has the punch to knock anybody out and he can box better than anyone in the heavyweight division today. He's a real pro. At times, Frazier fights like an amateur.

Ellis fought his way to his part of the title by beating the best in a tournament. He deserves to be champion of all the world and I predict he not only can do it but will.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Fred Hunt, a 24-year veteran of professional hockey in Buffalo, was named assistant general manager of the city's new National Hockey League team Thursday. Hunt has been general manager of Buffalo Bisons for 18 years and before that played nearly six seasons with the American Hockey League club. Hunt, a native of Brantford, will be assistant to Punch Imlach, named general manager and coach of the new club last month. The team begins play in the NHL next fall. "I expect to be closely concerned with scouting, promotion and publicity, and general area problems, while Punch is away coaching and handling other matters," Hunt told a news conference.

LA RIVIERE, Man. (CP) — Four girls from Old Crow, Y.T., swept the junior women's cross-country event Thursday in the Canadian Junior Nordic Ski championship, winning the first four places. Ottawa competitors were favored to win the events going into the first day of competition, but the young Indian girls from the community about 300 miles north of Dawson City, Y.T., shut out other top contenders. Fourteen-year-old Mary Frost was first, running the 5-kilometre course in 22 minutes 45 seconds. Shirley Frost and her sister Glenna, both 15, were second and third respectively.

Lewis Rink Drops Openers

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Three rinks remained undefeated Thursday night following completion of the second round in the eight-rink, round-robin Ontario mixed curling championship.

Earl Hushagen of Toronto defeated another Toronto rink, skipped by Paul Weiland, 13-5 following his morning 5-4 defeat of Vince Lebano's Orillia rink.

Kitchener, skipped by John Cathers, defeated Lebano 6-3 in evening action, after walloping Weiland 11-3 earlier Thursday.

John Winford of Ottawa also remained unbeaten, adding a 9-4 win over Bill Lewis of Kingston to an earlier 13-3 decision over Jere Baker of St. Thomas.

In other games, Baker defeated Ernie Huget of Burlington 8-3 in evening play and, earlier in the day, Huget downed Lewis 11-5.

The competition ends Saturday.

Prime Suspect ?

TORONTO (CP) — The Grey Cup, symbol of Canadian football supremacy which was stolen in Ottawa recently, still is missing and while he isn't accusing anyone, football commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Thursday night:

"The last four people known to have seen the Grey Cup were Prime Minister Trudeau, myself, Russ Jackson and Ken Lehmann."

"This isn't to suggest they have absconded with it," Gaudaur said.

Exemption Lets 'Time' Sell Ads Worth Million

OTTAWA (CP) — A prominent business press executive said Thursday he would like to see Time magazine lose the right that permits Canadian firms to place tax-deductible advertising in it.

James Daly, vice-chairman of the Southam Business Publications board, said the change would make $1,000,000 a year in advertising available to other Canadian media.

Time and Reader's Digest are on a list of foreign-owned publications exempt from the tax rule that disallows deduction of advertising in foreign publication for tax purposes.

Mr. Daly, testifying before the special Senate committee on mass media, said that not all of the freed advertising dollars would go to the business press of Canada. But at least the Canadian business press would have a chance to get some of it.

About one-quarter of the advertising in U.S.-owned Time—which publishes a Canadian edition—should be in the Canadian business press, Mr. Daly uaid.

He said some Canadian advertisers used both the business press and Time to reach a particular trade market. Others "succumb to the blandishments" of Time alone.

On an average, the ad rates of trade magazines put out by Southam Business Publications are 20 to 25 per cent of the Time rate. One reason why Time gets the nod is that the ad agency placing the ad gets more for the higher-cost Time ad.

Mr. Daly also said that the 34-publication Southam group has learned to live with the $300,000-a-year increase in its mailing bill because of increased postal rates.

Southam publications now more than pay their cost of handling by the post office. They are largely "qualified" publications—sent to a particular profession or group on a tightly-controlled basis without charge to the subscriber.

Mr. Daly said he wants other publications with paid circulations to pay equivalent postal rates. Now they pay less than the "qualified-circulation" periodicals.

Mr. Daly said that if the Southam publications had the lower paid-circulation Time magazine postal rates, the Southam mailing costs would be cut by half.

The average cost of mailing a Southam magazine is more than five cents. If there is a second-class postal deficit, it must be caused by other magazines.

Reacting to Postmaster-General Eric Kierans's suggestion for possible direct grants to media rather than hidden subsidies in postal rates, Mr. Daly said government subsidy to the publishing industry is "distasteful" in any form.

Cost of Convicting Polluters Is High

OTTAWA (CP) — Governments fail to enforce anti-pollution laws because the legal and political cost of convicting the polluter is so high that only outraged public opinion brings action, Richard W. Judy, University of Toronto economics professor, told the Commons resources committee Thursday.

He supported the federal government's plan in the proposed Canada Water Act to launch a water management system, based on fees to be paid for the discharge of effluent into the lakes, rivers and seas.

The government has said it aims, in co-operation with the provinces but alone if necessary, to manage water use and quality for each water basin through local agencies.

Fee levels and water quality standards proposed by local water basin agencies would be subject to federal and provincial cabinet veto.

Professor Judy maintained that this system has worked well in Europe and some parts of the United States, quickly bringing remarkable improvement in water quality.

He said federal and provincial authorities should ensure that local agencies do not engage in competitive efforts to attract industries through low water quality standards or low effluent fees.

Surveillance to avoid "fratricidal competition" and fees reflecting the idea that "the more you pollute, the more you pay" would enable communities to restrict effluent to whatever level of water quality they desired.

Professor Judy rejected the label 'licence to pollute" on the fee system. It was a control device that "rations the total amount of effluent to what is deemed by the control agency to be consistent with the collectively determined standard of water quality."

Professor Judy said national standards applied across the country might impose lower water quality than some areas would want and would make it difficult if not impossible for that area to require polluters to meet a higher standard.

However, he said the same approach to setting water quality standards should be taken by each water basin agency although the final result might be higher standards in one area than another.

He argued that it is uneconomic to require the sole effluent discharger on one river to meet the same standard of discharge as was required of effluent dischargers on a multi-use waterway.

Chicago Riot Trial Nears End

CHICAGO (AP) — After five months, the marathon trial of seven men charged with conspiracy to incite rioting at the Democratic national convention in 1968 is headed for the jury.

William Kunstler, a defence lawyer, was to conclude his final argument today, followed by Thomas Foran, the U.S. district attorney, who has been alloted two hours for rebuttal.

After that it remains for Judge Julius J. Hoffman of U.S. district court to instruct the jury of 10 women and two men and have them locked up to deliberate.

If convicted, each of the seven men could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and fined $20,000.

The trial has recorded outbursts, arguments and slurs perhaps unequaled in American court annals.

The defendants have maintained a constant stream of insults and discourtesies.

B. C. Longshoremen Finally Accept Fourth Offer of Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's 3,200 longshoremen were expected back at work on the docks at six ports by noon today following acceptance Thursday night of a fourth contract offer.

Union members voted 55 per cent in favor of the three-year contract offering a $1.15 hourly wage increase on a current base rate of $3.88. The vote was 1,519 to 1,242.

It was the fourth offer from Maritime employers—the second in less than two weeks.

"It was a close vote but I have a feeling the membership will adapt itself to that," said Bob Peebles, Canadian-area president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

"We are all very happy that we have finally agreed on a contract that will benefit the membership and the employers."

Wage and benefit clauses worked out in earlier offers were retained in the newest proposal but new working condition clauses were included to meet continued opposition by a large proportion of union members.

Gang sizes will be spelled out in the contract until changed by negotiation or arbitration and permanent employees will remain on one job site rather than be transferred around the waterfront.

The contract includes a work guarantee of 130 days excluding Sundays, which means that a longshoreman available for work five days out of six will qualify for pay in the event of a work shortage.

It includes a 40-cent hourly increase retroactive to Aug. 1, a guarantee of 26 weeks of work, two additional paid holidays, improved pensions and a retirement settlement of $13,000 to qualifying members at age 65.

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, who hastened final negotiations last weekend with a direct threat of government intervention to end the strike, left for Ottawa upon hearing of the settlement.

He made no statement.

The largest local, in Vancouver, voted 864 to 752 in favor of the contract. New Westminster opposed it by a vote of 286 to 163, as did the small Vancouver checkers' local by a vote of 32 to 29.

Dockers in Victoria, Port Alberni, Chemainus and Prince Rupert approved the offer.

Cultists Not Hippies

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Although I number no hippies among my relatives, friends, or even acquaintances I find it deplorable that the band of vagabonds charged with the killing of the Sharon Tate menage will go down in the records as a "hippie" group.

From what I can gather, Manson and his weird crew of cultists resemble hippies only in the way that anti-matter resembles matter — as a perfect mirror - image. And this is what confuses people, for we tend to judge only by superficial appearance, and not by substance.

Manson's little band wore long hair, dressed unconventionally, and lived in an isolated commune — and these few surface characteristics are enough to brand them, in the public eye, as "hippies." Nothing could be further from the truth, or more of a libel on the hippies.

Whatever their faults or excesses, true hippies are not hurtful people. They try to live by love, not hate, and eschew violence as the most important element in their creed. True, there are many thousands of synthetic hippies running around, who do not practise these virtues, but there is just as much hypocrisy and deception among members of the "straight" society.

Manson's group seems to have been precisely a diabolic inversion of the hippie ideal. If reports are accurate, they lived on hate and violence, tried to promote racial strife, and engaged in dark practices that scarcely fall on this side of sheer lunacy.

They adopted the hippie life-style as an effective "cover" for their nefarious activities, just as villains and swindlers in the straight world adopt the cover of respectability and conventionality. But to the frightened and outraged ordinary citizen, the Manson case only goes to show what the "hippies" are really capable of.

Life in America is tough enough for these social drop-outs without adding the onus of ritual murder and psychopathic sadism. They are already unwelcome in most communities, beaten up by hoodlums (who commit far more depredations than the hippies do), pushed around by cops, and easy prey for bigots, blackmailers, and punitive prigs.

I happen to think that the hippie life - style is self-defeating, unless it is inwardly illuminated by a high religious sense (as it is in too few cases); but they have a right to live as they wish and to look as they wish, so long as they harm nobody but themselves. And, so far, the scoreboard shows, they have the lowest criminal record for violence of any identifiable group of dissidents in the U.S.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Not Every Ulcer Cured by Surgery

It is so easy for doctor and family members to stand by and say, "Now, you know you have an ulcer. You'll have to be patient. It takes time to get better."

But the poor man doesn't know whom to believe. Shall he follow the advice of a well-meaning neighbor who says, "Why don't you have it cut out and get it over with?" Or shall he listen to the "go-slow" advice of his doctor?

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Like many other ulcer patients I am in a quandary. What to do? Although I'm only 26, I've had a duodenal ulcer since I was a sophomore in college.

My wife will agree that I haven't been a very good patient. I've had my share of drinking and smoking — until lately. I quit two weeks ago. But I still have these daily pains and sudden empty feelings in my stomach.

I've been thinking seriously of having some of my stomach removed to get rid of the darn thing. Get it over with once and for all. But my doctor advised me to give medical treatment a chance. I'll be interested in a neutral opinion. Thank you. — Mr. Z.

Comment: Get it over with once and for all? I wish surgery could guarantee that. If it could, I'd gladly say, "Have your operation."

As it happens, most doctors (including most surgeons) prefer that the ulcer patient undergo a trial of the slow and easy method. Proper diet, medication, and a moderate new way of life (less drinking, no cigarettes, less tension, etc.)

Some physicians have been facetious enough to say, "Don't consider surgery until the patient has had seven medical failures (seven courses of medical treatment without improvement)."

• • •

I believe that every impatient ulcer patient should know that surgery is not invariably the complete answer. Too many patients, post-surgery, feel worse than they did before the operation.

Some complain of daily biliousness and stomach fullness. But one of the most serious complications is the "dumping syndrome." Such patients are in extreme daily discomfort. After meals they suffer sudden episodes of sweating, often followed by diarrhea.

Now, I agree that there are some specific indications for surgery in ulcer: when there is history of repeated gastric hemorrhage; when there is perforation of the stomach endangering peritonitis; when the ulcer is so chronic that it has almost completely closed off exit from the stomach so food can't get through into the intestines.

Nevertheless, in the usual case, I believe that conservative medical treatment over a period of months or years is best.

Give unspectacular medical treatment the first chance to help you, Mr. Z. There's time enough for surgery if you ever really need it. I think it is a truism that in most ulcer patients, diet and the pill are a more effective combination than the knife.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a daughter who is 20 months old and eats cigarettes. She has been eating them for a year or more. I would like to know what I can do about it. I quit smoking about two months before she was born. My family says I passed on my craving for tobacco to her. — Mrs. C.

Comment: I believe that the solution is simple. Keep cigarettes out of her reach as you do aspirin, insecticides and other potentia' harmful poisons.

I assure you it is not an inherited craving. Why does she eat cigarettes? Because "they are there" — the reason mountain climbers give for satisfying their urges.

Scouting activities

Veteran scouter Oliver Owen is to receive the order of merit, for distinguished service to scouting, from Governor-General Roland Michener.

At Monday's meeting of the district council, president Jae Rollins presented Mr. Owen with a letter of notification from the Deputy Chief Scout of Canada James B. Harvey.

As a prelude to the observance of Scout-Guide Week, Feb. 15 - 22, local scouters enjoyed a gala dinner-dance Tuesday evening in the Masonic Temple.

John Tomlinson was toastmaster and chief organizer of the event. Alderman Art Keegan brought greetings from the city. Entertainment consisted of a sing-song led by Jim Hopper and magic by Scout Paul Kirby.

Commissioner Arnold Welch spoke of next week's activities. A joint scout-guide hobby show will be held in Christ Church hall Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. Individual groups will hold father-and-son banquets and attend local church parades. On Feb. 28 a scout rally will be held in the Belleville Armory. Five trophies will be competed for by the various patrols in the troops. More than a dozen local pack scouters attended a training course on Feb. 3 in St. Thomas' Church hall. George Fisher conducted the sessions on behalf of the local training team.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

C. N. I. B. Board Meets

NAPANEE — Very bad weather Thursday evening led to a poor attendance at the meeting of the CNIB board meeting in the Memorial building, and to a postponement of some business.

Both field secretaries were present, Gordon Shepherd and Roy Lesperance. They had hoped for a large attendance, they said, in order to get the feeling on board members of the amalgamation of the Boards of Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Gananoque. They asked those present to think over the idea.

Case histories were given of local people whom the secretaries had visited, and the progress they were making.

A new development in teaching braille was outlined. Telebraille enables the blind, in their own homes, to listen to teachers at some central point. Each learner must have the use either of a speaker phone or a headset, in order to have both hands free. The experiment has been tried successfully, and teleclasses are being planned. A memorandum was read giving the progress of several other projects for helping the blind, which are still in the experimental stages.

A report on the proceeds of the CNIB canvass, showed that it brought in only $3,050.08, which is $205 less than the previous year. This was due to the fact that some areas were not canvassed because convenors could not be found for the canvass of those areas. Gratitude was expressed to the Lions Club for carrying through a blitz of the town, and to all those who had assisted with the tag day, and in canvassing in the townships.

A number of contributions were received in memory of the late J. B. Elliott. These will be applied to the E. A. Baker Foundation for the prevention of blindness.

Maple Syrup Output Drops

Maple syrup production in Ontario was down by 28 per cent last year, Quinte district producers were told at Napanee on Friday.

The occasion was the annual meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Ontario Maple producers were told at Napain the four counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Northumberland. The speaker was Walter Humphries, of Barrie, secretary of the provincial body.

John H. Kerr, RR2, Picton, president-elect of the Quinte Branch agreed there would be a keen demand for pure maple products in this area again this year with prices holding at 1969 levels or slightly higher.

The meeting agreed that service clubs bringing maple products into the area for house to house sale had no adverse effect on local sales due to the dubious quality of the product sold.

The meeting was told there was still no answer to the problem of squirrels and rabbits biting into the plastic pipeline to get a taste of the sweet maple sap.

Board members recognized Mrs. Aino Ruuth, RR2, Napanee, who last year won the C. P. Corbett Trophy for the highest number of points at the 1969 Royal Winter Fair.

Quinte area producers are hoping to bring the Ontario Maple Producers convention to this area next year.

New officers elected were: president, John H. Kerr, Picton; vice-president, Cyril Shaw, Eldorado; secretary, Burton Hubble, RR5, Belleville.

Tankers May Use Northwest Passage in 1973

TORONTO (CP) — A veteran Arctic navigator said Thursday year-round operation of oil tankers through the Northwest Passage could begin in 1973.

He suggested that up to 20 tankers of about 320,000 tons each would be needed to move oil through the passage from the North Slope of Alaska to the United States east coast at a cost of $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 each.

Captain Thomas Pullen, the Canadian government representative aboard the U.S. tanker Manhattan during her voyage through the passage last year, was speaking at a meeting of the Empire Club.

He said he expects Humble Oil and Refining Co. to send its tanker Manhattan to the Arctic again in April or May and said he expects to be aboard. The voyage would have to confirm results from last year's experiment to make a 1973 commercial start possible.

He suggested Canada could demonstrate her national interest in the Arctic by building and stationing large, powerful icebreakers in the Arctic to assist ships using the Northwest Passage.

On sovereignty, Captain Pullen said the main deepwater passage through the arctic archipelago is 50 miles wide at one end and 90 miles at the other, "truly a waterway joining one sea to another."

"The only location where foreign ships would truly enter Canadian territorial waters would be if they diverted down Prince of Wales Strait where, in the vicinity of Princess Royal Islands, they must pass within the three-mile limit."

For February 14

Your birthday today: Changes in your home life and vocational efforts take you on a new course during the year ahead. Increased responsibility, closer co-operation are definitely developing. Group efforts are more worthwhile than ever.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): If you got through yesterday's fluster unscathed, today can be a lark. Do the least you can get by with in serious work and have fun with the rest of the time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20—May 20): Get started early putting matters to rights. Make peace where necessary. Gather your family and close friends around for an early, impromptu session; compare notes and set dates for the coming week.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The world should look exceptionally rosy to you today. If it doesn't, decide what is missing and go in search of it. Your family and friends are in good humor, so have fun.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): It's your turn to have your shoulder cried upon. Avoid the temptation to confide intimate matters in return.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Everybody around you seems to insist on doing things that tire or baffle you. For once, disregard the distraction and keep straight ahead on your own course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You get positive answers this morning from nearly everyone. People around you notice details they normally miss. Comments you make this afternoon will be repeated out of context in ways that cause misunderstanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): From an early start to a moderately late evening, this could be a day of high and light adventure. Enjoy the unconventional people and situations. Improvise as you go.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): This weekend has a decided change of pace and mood. Pick up the pieces from yesterday, say nothing about the past and go directly to the point with today's issues and business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Offer encouragement, praise wherever people are moody or unco-operative. Make peace, apologies, if need be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Younger people offer brisk, perhaps rude but well-meant, comments. Your situation is brightened by small but important changes, possibly the ending of a petty annoyance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Reflect this morning on your responsibilities and relationships. Realize and take pleasure in what you have. Retire early to allow for an energetic tomorrow.

New Rules 'to Put Excitement Into Broadcasting'

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission handed down the most momentous policy recommendations in its two-year history Thursday aimed at extensively revising the country's broadcasting patterns.

The proposal by the CRTC—successor regulatory agency to the Board of Broadcast Governors—calls for a marked increase in the numbers of Canadian television programs shown.

Added to this are recommendations for increasing the proportion of Canadian music played by AM radio stations and stringent restrictions on the amount and use of television advertising.

Reaction from broadcasters ranged from shock and anger to disbelief and pleasant surprise. Most refused to comment until they could study the announcement further.

However, Murray C. Chercover, president of the CTV network, said the proposals, if they become law, would force a major disruption throughout the industry.

The first concern would be the cost of producing more—and better—Canadian programs, he 14.

Where would the money come from, he asked. If Canadian programs were not up to the standards of U.S. programming, the Canadian industry would die from the American competition, he said in an interview.

Pierre Juneau, CRTC chairman, told a news conference the proposals will be discussed at a public hearing of the commission in Ottawa starting April ing."

The commission is finishing a four-day hearing here today.

The main CRTC proposals are:

—A substantial increase in Canadian TV programs, particularly in prime time, effective this fall for the CBC and before Sept. 1, 1971, for the private sector.

—Strict limits on the number of times a TV program may be interrupted for ads and a clear separation between ads and programming.

—The inclusion of virtually all material, including a station's own promotional messages, as advertising and a maximum of 12 minutes an hour that can be used for ads.

—Permission to include ads in TV news programs subject to tight controls.

—A requirement that at least 30 per cent of the music played by AM radio stations be Canadian.

Mr. Juneau told the news conference, and repeated on a CBC public affairs program later, that Canadians must "discover new areas in broadcasting."

"For God's sake let's try new things—let's not condemn a new policy just because it goes against the status quo, let's put some excitement into broadcast-

During a live sports event,

The Canadian content proposal could mean an increase of three hours a week this fall on CBC TV, Mr. Juneau said.

"Since private broadcasters would have until September, 1971, to comply with the same standards as the CBC, this would mean for many of them about four additional evening hours of Canadian programs a week by this fall and another 3½ hours by the start of the following September."

CBC vice-president Ron Fraser said in a television interview the publicly-owned corporation welcomes the announcement and believes the regulations could be met.

But many private broadcasters said the CBC naturally welcomed the statement since it meant all stations in Canada would be under much the same obligations as the CBC in the area of Canadian broadcasting.

This makes it easier, said some private operators, for the CBC to compete and still fulfill its role—set out in the Broadcasting Act—of strengthening Canadian unity by producing a large percentage of Canadian programming.

Under existing regulations, Canadian TV broadcasters are required to fill 55 per cent of their daily schedules with Canadian programs.

Under the new proposal, the requirement would be increased to 60 per cent.

Programs from any one foreign country could not exceed 30 per cent of the schedule.

The daily average of 60 per cent for Canadian programs would be enforced between 6 a.m. and midnight as well as in the prime viewing hours between 6:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Averages would be computed over a four-week period instead of the present three-month arrangement.

This ensures that broadcasters will not be able to fill their daytime schedule with Canadian programs to meet the 60-per-cent requirement and leave themselves free to show non-Canadian material in the prime viewing hours.

The proposals also change the definition of what constitutes a Canadian program, eliminating many of those produced in Britain or elsewhere in the Commonwealth which used to be classed as Canadian.

To reduce interruptions of TV programs by commercials, the commission proposed to limit broadcasters to four ads in the body of a one-hour program, two in the body of a half-hour program and one in a 15-minute program.

During a live sports vent, there would be no limit on the number of interruptions for ads but the 12-minute rule would still hold.

The commission also proposes to allow broadcasters to sell advertising during news broadcasts for the first time.

The ads would be restricted to a maximum of two minutes after each 10 minutes of news.

Ads would have to be clearly separated from news and the news announcer could not appear in the ads.

The proposal calling or 30 per cent or more of music played by AM radio stations to be Canadian stipulates that to be Canadian music must meet one of these conditions:

—Be played or sung mainly by a Canadian.

—Have been written by a Canadian, or have lyrics written by a Canadian.

—Be a performance recorded in Canada.

The requirement would have to be met during each four-hour period between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m.

The proposal seemed to be generally well accepted by radio executives at the hearing.

The over-all policy proposal follows a CRTC decision Dec. 3 to ban the use of microwave by cable TV companies for importing U.S. programs to be distributed over great distances in Canada.

At that time, the commission said the microwave ban was intended to give Canadian broadcasters a "breathing spell" from U.S. competition so they could develop a distinctive Canadian system.

French Nationalist Freed In Sedition, Riot Cases

MONTREAL (CP) — All charges laid against unilingualist leader Raymond Lemieux following a demonstration in suburban St. Leonard last fall were thrown out when Lemieux appeared for preliminary hearing Friday.

Lemieux, leader of the Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire which seeks French-only education in Quebec province, was charged after the demonstration with sedition, participating in a riot, inciting to riot, refusing to comply with police orders and disobeying the Riot Act.

The demonstration Sept. 10, in which marchers repeatedly skirted lines of St. Leonard and provincial police, ended with the reading of the Riot Act by Leo Ouellet, mayor of the suburb.

But Sessions Judge Jacques Anctil said Friday the Crown failed to back up its charges with evidence.

"Evidence that there was a riot was not even presented and not a single seditious word was even produced in court," he said.

The Ligue pour l'Integration Scolaire organized the demonstration which attracted about 1,500 persons. Lemieux was charged two days later and appeared voluntarily at the courthouse with his lawyer. He has been free on $10,000 cash bail since last October.

Kierans Fails to Get Mail Deliveries Back on Schedule

MONTREAL (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans' attempt to get mail deliveries in Montreal back to normal by suspending special delivery service and switching attention to regular service was rejected Friday by the union representing truck drivers who deliver the mail.

The union refused to make "scabs of its own members" by switching them to regular service and said the suspension is contrary to international agreements, against the public interest and violates the post office's own rules.

Mr. Kierans' move earlier Friday was intended to shift men from special delivery to parcel post, slowed down by the drivers' rotating strikes.

Pierre Breton, manager of G. Lapalme Inc. which has the exclusive contract to deliver mail in Montreal, said: "We can't move men from one section to another according to the terms of their labor contract."

He said Mr. Kierans has been notified and "we're waiting for a reply."

A post office spokesman estimated Friday deliveries were three to four days behind schedule in most cases but six to seven days behind in parcel post.

He said the backlog included approximately 100,000 parcels although the number was hard to estimate because many bags had not been opened.

Lapalme did not try to get its city-wide contract renewed, claiming it could not meet the low bids of the other companies. The company had it for one year.

Seven Die in Fire

Germans Guard Jewish Centres

MUNICH (Reuters) — The government today placed all Jewish centres in West Germany under guard following the fire in a Jewish old people's home here Friday night which killed seven persons and injured nine others.

Munich police said they suspected arson and speculated that it might be linked to an Arab grenade attack on the passengers of an Israeli airline at Munich airport Tuesday.

The city of Munich has offered a considerable reward for information leading to the capture of anyone connected with the blaze and the state of Bavaria also has said it will pay for information on the cause of the fire.

While local officials expressed shock and anger over the tragedy, federal Interior Minister Hans Genscher, who ordered the protection of all Jewish centres in the country soon after hearing of the fire, arrived here today to confer with local authorities.

The Jewish centre was in a five-storey building in the old part of the city. It also contains a synagogue and administration offices for an Israeli cultural group.

Police said they suspected arson because of the way the fire spread so rapidly after apparently starting in a stairway.

Today, firemen searching the ruins of the home here uncovered an empty metal canister which they believe could back up the arson theory.

The old people had just left a sabbath eve prayer meeting in the ground-floor synagogue when the fire broke out. Some are believed to have been trapped by the flames on upper floors and one died from injuries after trying to jump to safety.

Killed were five men and two women, including one married couple.

After the fire was brought under control, firemen wearing smoke masks started a search for survivors or more possible victims.

Jewish onlookers blamed Arab terrorists for the blaze.

A statement issued today for the Jewish community said the fire was not only directed at Munich Jews but all German Jews and all well-meaning Munich citizens.

Munich Police Chief Manfred Schreiber said measures already had been undertaken to put the other Jewish centres in the city under guard.

Cairo Seems Calm

CAIRO (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Egyptians hailed President Gamal Abdel Nasser at a rally Friday, but the mood in Cairo seemed calm despite the Israeli air raid that killed 70 factory workers.

Although police said 500,000 people participated in the demonstration, much of Cairo resembled a Western city enjoying a Sunday afternoon because Friday in most Moslem countries is the sabbath.

Traffic was light, hundreds strolled along the sunny banks of the Nile while others window-shopped, crowded into cinemas or lolled at sidewalk cafes.

There was talk, of course, of the Israeli attack on the metal factory 17 miles north of the downtown area Thursday. Officials said the attack resulted in the heaviest toll of civilian casualties since the 1967 war.

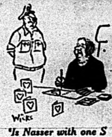
One prominent Egyptian lawyer speculated on the future, then hurried off to a dinner party, demonstrating the streak of fatalism in Egyptians which leads them to accept almost any calamity with equanimity.

The holiday made it different to assess the mood of the people, but one striking exception was the mass outpouring at noon around the 1,000-year-old Azhar Mosque near Cairo's bazaar quarter.

Thousands gathered to cheer Nasser, Libyan revolutionary leader Col. Muammar Kadafi and Sudanese Premier Jaafar Numairi as they arrived waving and smiling in an open car to attend a Moslem prayer service.

The three leaders seem to have been almost constant companions since the Arab summit last December as they continue discussion on the alliance they are forming.

The crowds screaming "Nasser, Nasser" cast doubt on the validity of diplomats predictions that Nasser would lose some of the immense power and prestige he holds in Egypt and the Arab world as a result of the Israeli raids.



'Is Nasser with one S or two?'

Liberals Of Leeds Protest

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The executive of the Leeds Liberal Assoc. decided Friday to appeal directly to Prime Minister Trudeau to reconsider a federal government decision that requires bilingual facilities at two international ports in the area by September.

Association president Tom Cossit said Friday bilingualism in the ports of Prescott and Landsdowne should, in keeping with the Official Languages Act, be deferred to five years from now.

The government's decision to have the ports become bilingual is "premature and ill-advised," he said.

U.S. to Lay Off 350 Canadians

ARGENTIA, Nfld. (CP) — James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said Friday the laying off of employees at the United States naval base here was a "crippling, crushing blow" to the Newfoundland economy.

Richard Straus, U.S. consul general at St. John's, Nfld., and the commanding officer of the naval base, Capt. C. A. McCarthy announced Friday that 350 Canadian civilians working at the base would be laid off by July.

Hard Bargains Are Foreseen

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation and pollution will dominate next week's federal-provincial conference here, and while there will be ready agreement that both should be stopped, federal officials expect some hard bargaining concerning methods.

While the prices and incomes commission—and the federal government—want to see a broad, national approach to the problem of inflation, sources here can foresee difficulties arising before the two-day conference begins.

Ontario, with a relatively low rate of unemployment, faces an entirely different situation than, say, Newfoundland. The slower-growth provinces, such as the Maritimes, have argued that they do not contribute to inflation, yet nationwide measures against it tend to hit them the hardest.

The prices and incomes commission will go before Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers with specific proposals concerning government contributions in the fight on inflation. The commission is expected to seek restraints on rents, consumer credit and professional fees, among other things.

Sources said Friday that efforts will be made to "reconcile the over-all effect of such action."

They said that the need for holding down rents seems to apply to all provinces, with the possible exception of Saskatchewan cities, and consumer credit must also be tackled on a countrywide basis since it is generally in the hands of national institutions which spill over provincial boundaries.

The federal government continues to see the expansion of consumer credit as a serious problem, although the rate of growth has declined in the last six months.

The closed-door meetings will be tackling these economic questions—probably along with other regional issues raised by premiers—when proceedings begin in Ottawa's refurbished Union Station at 10 a.m. EST.

Federal outlines of "our understanding of what the situation is" will be followed by provincial views on regional situations. John Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission will then present his series of proposals—just a week after the commission held a similar session with representatives of business.

Sources say that if there is general acceptance of the suggestions, there may be a delay in implementation since some provinces may have to pass legislation—possibly to establish rent review boards—and other measures might have to await budgets. These sources say that the slower-growth provinces would hardly be expected to budget for surpluses, as should the faster-growing provinces.

The discussion about pollution will centre on the proposed Canada Water Act, and officials here were taken aback somewhat Friday by a report from Quebec that the provincial government considers the act unacceptable.

Plans Revised for Expansion

Work Begins Next Week on Four Seasons Site

Work begins next week on the big Four Seasons hotel project seen as creating a major change in Belleville's waterfront landscape.

And the project eventually will be even bigger than first planned.

Announcing the work start today, Isadore Sharp, president of Four Seasons Hotel Ltd., said the starting date for the $2,300,000 hotel east of Zwick's Island, was delayed so original blueprints could be revised.

The revision provides for additional facilities.

"It takes future expansion into account," Mr. Sharp said.

He indicated the 124 rooms in the original plan would eventually be added to "and we wanted to make sure it could be done as simply as possible, whenever that time comes."

The target date for the opening is still set for early in 1971, Mr. Sharp said.

First guest will be Bell Canada staff, who will use the hotel as a training centre for nine months each year.

During the summer months the Four Seasons Belleville will become a resort, catering to summer travellers and vacationers — particularly those wishing to savor the recreational potential of the Bay of Quinte.

First pieces of heavy equipment should make their appearance on the eight-acre site early next week with drilling for the hotel's foundations being the first major job.

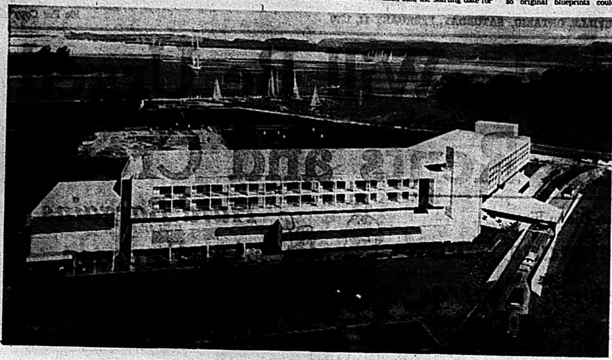
Today's confirmation of a work start has been long-awaited in Belleville since the Four Seasons project was first revealed in June 1969.

At that time, city councillors hailed it as an imaginative concept, stimulating possible waterfront development.

The project was not without some unforeseen developments of its own.

The scheme was protested to the Ontario Municipal Board when the waterfront site came up for rezoning permitting the hotel.

An OMB hearing Nov. 10 granted the zoning application, however, and Four Seasons announced the same day it had called tenders.



Four Seasons Belleville : New, Bigger Plans

Bishop Evans of Ontario Dies at Kingston

KINGSTON — Rt. Rev. Kenneth Evans, bishop of the Anglican diocese of Ontario, and a church leader active in the Quinte area — died here Friday. He was 68.

Bishop Evans was in the 18th year of his appointment as bishop of the diocese — a period during which he made frequent visits to Belleville and other Quinte communities.

His interest and participation in Quinte congregations and popularity — was recalled by city Anglican clergymen this morning.

"Bishop Evans was a very active man in Belleville", recalled Rev. Peter Tett, of St. Thomas' — one of this district's oldest churches.

(In the past year Bishop Evans had attended the 150th celebration of the church's anniversary; returned in March for confirmation services and inducted Rev. Tett as new St. Thomas rector on June 11. Later, the bishop also assisted at the wedding of Sidney Pringle, of Belleville to George Murray, Toronto).

"Bishop Evans was a man who travelled a lot to parishes. He was very well-liked, friendly and outgoing", Rev. Tett said.

Canon R. B. Wright of Christ Church, said of Bishop Evans that "he was a most outstanding Christian leader in the intellectual field. He was a very human man".

"The church has lost a brilliant scholar — one of the best Bishops we ever had", said Rev. Arnold Dunlop of St. Margaret's-On-The Hill Anglican Church.

"We are really going to miss him".

Bishop Evans had been ill with pleurisy during the last month, but had returned to work. He was in his office earlier Friday. Death came early in the evening. ing.

He is survived by his wife, Marjorie Agnes Grace, three sons, Malcolm Charles, David Mowat and Kenneth Ross MacKenzie, and two daughters, Catharine Ann and Mary Gwynneth.

Bishop Evans was born in China in 1903 and obtained his early education at mission schools there. Following employment with a firm of chartered accountants in Shanghai, he attended University College at the University of Toronto, receiving a doctorate in 1932.

He held divinity degrees from Wycliffe and Trinity Colleges at University of Toronto, Bishop's University, Lennoxville, Que., and Queen's University, Kingston.

He was ordained a deacon in 1930 and a priest in 1931. He was lecturer and later professor in Oriental language at Trinity College, becoming dean of divinity there in 1940. In 1944 he was appointed dean of Montreal and rector of Christ Church Cathedral, an appointment he held until becoming bishop of the diocese of Ontario in 1952.

The funeral will be held Tuesday from St. George's Cathedral in Kingston. It will be conducted by Archbishop William Wright of Sault Ste. Marie, metropolitan of the Episcopal Diocese of Ontario.

Archbishop H. H. Clarke, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, will attend.

New Name Is Announced For Trenton RCAF Memorial

The RCAF Memorial has a new name.

It is the Hall of Canadian Aviation History and RCAF Memorial — announced today by the Information Services of the Department of National Defence in Ottawa.

A two-man Air Transport team will visit CFB Trenton Feb. 16, 20 and 22 to acquaint personnel with the latest information on the memorial building. The team will be equipped with a model of the building, which was designed by architect Victor Prus of Montreal, an RAF pilot during the second world war.

A campaign is presently underway across Canada to raise the $3,600,000 that will be required to build the Memorial. It will be erected on a site just north of Highway 2, immediately west of CFB Trenton. The building will cover a surface area of more than 50,000 feet. An adjacent area of 35 acres will be developed into a park.

Target date for completion of the memorial is the fall of 1972.

LARUE — In loving memory of a dear father, Clarence H. LaRue who passed away Feb. 13, 1969.

His life was earnest, his actions kind,
A generous hand and an active mind,
Anxious to please, loath to offend,
A loving father and faithful friend.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by son Larry and daughter-in-law Betty.

KENNEDY — In loving memory of my dear wife Alice Kennedy who passed away February 13, 1967.

Your heart was the dearest in all the wide world,
Your love the best to recall,

You are still the dearest of all.
—Never forgotten by husband Harry, son Floyd and daughter Olive.

PREST — In loving memory of a dear sister-in-law and Aunt, Lil Prest, who passed away February 14, 1969.

We little knew when we woke that morn
The sorrow the day would bring,
The call was sudden, the shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Sometimes it's hard to understand,
Why some things have to be,
In His wisdom God has planned,
Beyond our power to see.
—Sadly missed and dearly remembered by Clayton, Beatrice Prest and family.

CARR — In loving memory of a dear dad and grandpa, William Carr, who passed away Feb. 14, 1967.

More each passing day, we miss him,
Many think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow,
Lying in our hearts concealed.
—Sadly missed and never forgotten by daughter Barbara, son-in-law Carl and children.

CARR — In loving memory of my dear husband William, who passed away, Feb. 14th, 1967.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do—
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk the same,
For some day down that lonely road,
You'll hear me call your name.
—Remembered by wife Verna.

CARR — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather William Carr, who passed away Feb. 14, 1967.

God knew that he was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He closed his weary eyelids,
And whispered, "Peace be thine".
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
By the valley of rest so fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.
—Sadly missed by son Harold, wife Valerie and granddaughters.

CJBQ Manager Comments

New Broadcast Rules Legislate Creativity on A Crash Basis

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

"Can you legislate creativity? I'm inclined to doubt it can be done, particularly on a crash basis."

This was the opinion of Frank Murray, manager of Radio Station CJBQ, commenting on a series of proposals made by the Canadian Radio - Television Commission which handed down its most momentous policy recommendations Thursday in its two - year history.

A proposal by the CRTC— successor regulatory agency to the Board of Broadcast Governors — calls for a marked increase in the numbers of Canadian television programs shown.

Added to this are recommendations for increasing the proportion of Canadian music played by AM radio stations. The CRTC is proposing a requirement that at least 30 per cent of the music played on these stations be Canadian.

In detail, the Canadian music requirement is divided into three categories which would stipulate the music as Canadian.

The music piece must be played or sung mainly by a Canadian; it must have been written or have lyrics by a Canadian; or must be a performance recorded in Canada.

Mr. Murray explained this morning that the recommendations were only proposals so far and that a public hearing was to be held in April which would allow broadcasters to submit briefs concerning the proposals.

He said that at present CJBQ was probably doing about 12 per cent Canadian music as part of its programming.

"We belong to the Canadian Talent Library," Mr. Murray said, explaining that organization offered good Canadian talent. "There's quite a lot of Canadian rock."

Of the three - pronged proposal for Canadian talent, Mr. Murray explained that the recorded performances in Canada would be a good thing.

"The major recording companies could bring groups into Canada to record them," he said. "One could visualize a recording explosion in Canada."

He explained that French Canada had had to develop its own talent pool and he said that it was one of the largest industries in North America.

But the problem concerning Canadian talent is one of money. Canadian talent goes where the revenue is — the United States.

"There is enormous talent in movies and the night club circuit," Mr. Murray said.

He used western music performer, Johnny Cash, as an example, explaining that although he had a television program and made records, he made most of his money with personal appearances.

He added that Canada did not have the large movie industry nor the night club circuit to attract performers financially.

"There isn't the market for Canadian talent where live performances are concerned," he said. "Live performances are where they make their money. In Canada how are you going to make money."

He added that the United States had experienced show business people as well.

As a result radio stations located near the border between Canada and the United States will have trouble competing with stations broadcasting within range from below the border.

"Public taste leans towards popular American stations." Mr. Murray said.

He added that the CRTC was probably moving a little too quickly, giving broadcasters only until early April to submit briefs on the proposals and recommending that the proposals go into effect by Oct. 1.

He spoke of a crash research program that has already started in the CJBQ radio station where employees are researching "our entire music library".

Mr. Murray added that the new proposals also required stations to submit music sheets or play lists outlining the titles of songs on all music programs with the recording artists names and the date and time of its performance on the air — all of which takes a lot of administrative time.

He conceded though "as Canadians we must try to recognize this part of our national identity".

The new proposals by the CRTC would require the playing of Canadian music in four four-hour blocks from seven a.m. until 11 p.m.

The 30 per cent requirement, under estimation, would be completed in three hours per day, seven days a week.

The CRTC has done quite a job in providing programs and personalities next door to a giant," he said.

Mr. Murray explained that in the last decade broadcasting has been frought with royal commissions and inquiries which wasted some of the time broadcasters could be using providing more creative programming.

"I really hope with these proposals we are given a breathing spell without preparing briefs and having to appear before inquiries."

"It's a little much to expect that a small country could hope to come up with a totally distinctive sound in the rock field or the more adult kind of music."

"There are so many people of different ethnic origins making the problem even more complex," he said.

He said that he felt Canadian programming was superior to most of the creative effort made on most United States stations.

Mercury Plunges District Shivers

By LINDA GELDART

The Quinte area is still tightly in the grip of a cold snap that sent the mercury plunging again last night.

Temperatures in Belleville early this morning hovered around the 15 below mark, while readings in other parts of Hastings County were cold enough to set records.

At 7.30 a.m. the Tweed area recorded a low of minus 33 degrees, the coldest it has been in February since 1955 — when the then record low of 28 below was reported.

The duty forecaster at Canadian Forces Base Trenton termed it a "fairly cold night" all across Ontario.

No section of Ontario escaped the wave of freezing temperatures, which, according to the Trenton forecaster should ease slightly by Sunday.

He predicts a slight moderation in temperatures, but no spring-like weather is in sight as yet.

"The next day or two, and on into the beginning of the week will see a very gradual increase in temperatures. However, temperatures will continue to remain below seasonal normals," the forecaster said.

Area temperatures reached record levels set as far back as 1934, when the coldest recorded temperature for February ranged in the region of 22 and 28 below zero.

In Northern Ontario, the mercury dipped down to 40 below at Killaloe, 43 below at White River and minus 32 at Moosonee.

At present, strong northerly winds have pushed a northwesterly circulation of cold air across Ontario and Quebec, while at the same time bringing cold Arctic air down over the province.

Torches, Pancakes, Plenty of Fun, Bustle At Tweed Carnival

TWEED — The Tweed Carnival is off and running again this weekend with a full program action-packed all ready to go.

The three-day event has become as much a part of Quinte winters as hockey and snowmobiling and the response is there to prove it.

Sponsored by the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, the carnival got underway to the music of marching bands and the lights of over 100 torches last night in a parade that proclaimed the carnival's opening despite temperatures hovering at 18 below.

Also part of the program last night was a hockey match in which Tweed All-Stars faced off against the Wellington Bantams in the second of a five-game series for the Eastern Ontario championship.

Organizers have planned plenty of action for Tweed-area residents in the two remaining days of the carnival.

At the Tweed-Hungerford Community Centre this afternoon and tonight, rseidents will have the opportunity to see Ronald Rubens, the 1970 junior men's champion, of Canada and Arlene Hall, junior women's champion participating in a figure-skating extravaganza.

For curling buffs, organizers scheduled an all-weekend bonspiel which began Friday at 6 p.m. and will continue through until 7 p.m. Sunday. An expected 32 rinks will be competing for three trophies and 24 prizes.

Starting at 1 p.m. today there are free snowmobile rides for the children on Stoco Lake as well as a Hovercraft demonstration slated from later in the afternoon.

The final day of the carnival tomorrow will begin with a pancake breakfast in Tweed's community centre.

A four-mile cross-country snowmobile run is scheduled for both Saturday and Sunday, beginning at 2 p.m. and ending at 4 p.m.

The Canadian Funeral

Useless tradition
for the dead... or useful therapy
for the living?

Part II

The funeral service takes them gently by the shoulder and turns them to face it. And having faced it, having viewed it, things are easier.

Things continue to be easier (though it may not seem so at the time) as the arrangements have them talking with sympathetic friends at the visitation.

Unburdening ourselves seems to make room for courage. As surely as sharing joy increases joy, expressing and sharing grief lightens grief.

That's why even those without deep religious convictions adjust more quickly to life when they have observed the funeral rites. To the religious family, of course, the funeral ceremony, presided over by their clergyman, is not only a personal but a public profession of faith. In its sharing with others it is a source of strength that passes understanding. For the family . . . for friends . . . for society.

Mill for Bancroft?

If the Bancroft area should land the hardwood kraft mill that has been mentioned as a possibility by Ontario Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle, it would tie in nicely with the extension of educational facilities there.

We refer to the establishment of the northern council of Loyalist College to serve North Hastings. Educational courses arising from this initiative would be operated by the extension division of Loyalist.

Establishment of a mill would offer the people of north Hastings opportunities in a variety of disciplines, from forestry to mechanics. As yet there is no definite word of the location of the enterprise, but if it should become a reality then, as we have noted, there should be a perfect marriage between the growth of educational facilities and the new mill.

Wolves and Game

Where there are problems with wolves and livestock they should be taken care of . . . but remember, brush wolves which inhabit the area eliminate pests like mice . . . wolves succeed in controlling their own numbers . . . their population density is about one for every ten square miles . . . wild dogs, and not wolves, are sometimes responsible for livestock losses.

These were some of the points made by Dr. D. H. Pimlott of the University of Toronto in an address to Murray township ratepayers recently. The zoology professor's talk seemed to be a plea for a balanced outlook on the threat, real or imagined, from the wolf.

We expressed much the same view in a recent editorial, and it is interesting to note Dr. Pimlott's point that wild dogs kill many farm animals. A report from Meaford in the Owen Sound area supports this contention; a conservation officer there said there was evidence that marauding dogs were killing deer in St. Vincent township.

Wolf or wild dog, the moral then is that where either is seen to be responsible for killing deer or livestock, they should be shot on sight. But to suppose that wolves as a species are entirely to blame would appear to be erroneous.

Out of Luck

Eva Rodriguez is a pleasant looking youngster of 12 years and she lives in Dallas. Last December the Texan lass drew a three-day suspension from her junior high school for wearing a miniskirt which school authorities decided was too short.

It was perhaps six inches above the knee and judging by the picture was longer than some seen around Belleville. Anyway, Eva turned up at school the other day wearing an ankle-length maxiskirt; this earned her a ten-day suspension.

The skirt, said the assistant principal, was a safety hazard.

Miss Rodriguez is clearly out of luck, despite her obvious (to judge again from the pictures) good grooming in both outfits. But if there is anything to be learned from these episodes it is that coming up to spring, 1970, and despite sundry prophets of doom, it is a hands (but not hemlines) down win for the minis.

Or is it just that in Dallas the length of the suspension is in proportion to the length of the skirt?

A Date with Fate

Well there goes Friday The Thirteenth — a bright, sunny day, but cold with the snow deep and crisp and even. When it's winter we like it to be winter — none of that 40 above stuff for us (one record year it staggered up into the fifties), for then it's neither one thing nor the other and one feels half dead; some unhappily, catch the flu and wish they were dead. As for the 13th we have never been able to discover why (being poor with figures, IQ tests and that sort of thing), but March 13 also will turn up on a Friday. Anyway, who cares about superstition? As Thomas Carlyle said, "You should live every day as if it were your last." Speaking of dates, Easter this year is early, Good Friday being March 27.

Setback

Just when government and people are beginning to get behind a real campaign against pollution, that tanker had to run on some rocks off Cape Breton. Pollution by oil off the coastline is reported to be severe — but it is all the more reason why everyone should stick with the efforts being made to combat pollution in general.

Nixon Puts More Teeth Into Anti-Pollution Measures

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP) — Using such words as "total mobilization" and "a cause as fundamental as life itself", President Nixon this week sent an anti-pollution program to Congress in the opening of the administration's campaign to save the environment.

While there are no assurances the initial program will develop into a major campaign, it certainly is a new commitment and is a long way from the cry in Washington earlier this century of "not a cent for scenery."

The president wants billions in federal funds to implement his 37-point program to battle pollution. Along with the money will go tougher enforcement laws.

If Congress is willing, American cities and towns during the next four years will receive $4,000,000,000 from the federal government to build sewage treatment plants. Fines of up to $10,000 a day would be provided for industries breaking the new regulations.

An added incentive is provision for jail terms for mayors and council members in communities that break the pollution laws.

While the proposal must be considered a new commitment, requiring 23 legislative acts and 14 executive actions the president can implement without Congress, it cannot, however, be considered a totally new program. In the last few years Congress has put on its books dozens of anti-pollution regulations.

What was lacking in the previous legislation, observers here say, was strict enforcement. Industries could slip through loop-holes at will. This time tougher regulations are proposed and enforcement would be supported by a pollution-conscious public.

It appears, however, that implementation of many of these program will be slow.

Congress still has to have its say, and it is almost certain there will be a lengthy hassle between Republicans and their supporters in industry who will have to pay many of the bills to clean up the environment.

Who says a policeman's lot is not a happy one? This London bobby for one should have nothing to complain about as he pauses a moment to admire the view. No season in Britain is lovelier than spring. Daffodils and many other flowers bloom in late February and London's parks and window boxes become a maze of color.

Lent—in A Noisy, Brash, World

Ottawa Journal

The idea of Lent seems a little quainter every year. The babble of our times is so loud that the plea for a stretch of the year given over to some reflection on what the noise is all about doesn't stand much of a chance of being heard. In T. S. Eliot's poem called "Ash Wednesday, which it was earlier this week, there are these lines:

> Where shall the word be found > where will the word resound?
> Not here, there is not enough > silence.

Lent is a still small voice pleading for enough silence so that men might from time to time contemplate their own destiny. If one does not believe that man has any destiny beyond piling up money to buy cottages or color TV sets or cars, then Ash Wednesday or Lent is meaningless. But for those who still believe that somehow there is purpose to the 40 days to Easter can be the most precious days of the entire year.

A Quebec View

Walter Redel's Misadventure

Ottawa Le Droit: The misadveture of Mr. Walter Redel, senior civil servant of British Columbia, at the hands of Quebec Provincial Police proves that the accusations of brutality made by prisoners against police are not always unfounded. All prisoners are not angels. It even happens that some are criminals, but until the courts have decided on their fate they should be treated as though they were innocent and not as though they were guilty.

Many stories of police brutality have tarnished the reputations of peace officers in the last few years. It may be that some of the stories were pure fantasy, but Mr. Redel's misadventure proves beyond any doubt that all of them were not the fruit of the imagination. To treat a suspect as Mr. Redel was treated is to take after the practices of the Gestapo or of American gangsterism, where the slogan is: "Shoot first and ask questions afterwards." . . .

How are we to account for the treatment inflicted on him at the police station? Was it necessary to undress him to lock him up? Did security require that he be refused the normal right to a telephone call? All this is highly doubtful.

The Quebec justice minister, Remi Paul, has promised an investigation of this incident. Fine, but this is not enough. What is needed is an investigation of all brutality cases of the last few years, and the establishment of training courses in deportment for all policemen who need them.

Fortunately, all policemen do not conduct themselves as Mr. Redel's torturers did, but cases of mistreatment are too numerous for justice to be satisfied with investigating one isolated case.

• • •

The Sherbrooke La Tribune: On the hypothesis that the police did not identify themselves (the men were not in uniform), the man was certainly justified in resisting.

Citizens of this country have the right to move about freely, without identity cards or passports. No one is obliged to reply to a policeman who does not identify himself suitably.

And in such a case, police are certainly not justifieed in resorting to violence.

Rifle Association Holds Out Against Stronger Gun Laws

St. Catharines Standard

Voicing his organization's opposition to stiffer gun laws, the executive vice-president of the National Rifle Association in the U.S. recently argued that "millions of respectable, law-abiding Americans classify their handguns with their golf clubs, outboard motors and the like as a means of recreation." It's a new argument in an old controversy and is undoubtedly meant to strengthen the position of those millions of Americans who have armed themselves, against the real or imagined menace of crime.

For these people, some of the findings of President Nixon's National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence ought to be required reading.

In exceedingly few burglary the commission, does a householder have any chance to use his gun to kill, injure or scare off an intruder. In Detroit, for example, there were 18,000 home burglaries in 1967, but only one burglar was killed by a householder. In New York, where there are more than 150,000 burglaries a year, only 20 burglars were killed by householders over a 10-year period.

Against the argument that the widespread ownership of weapons may at least deter criminals the commission found that "the trend in crimes against the home during recent years has been sharply upward in spite of the fact that the number of home self-defence firearms has also been rapidly increasing." About one in every two U.S. homes now boasts a handgun.

Not only, then, has ownership of a gun proved to be fairly useless in the war on crime, but— as the commission pointedly noted — a substantial number of the 23,000 annual firearms accidents in the U.S. occur in the home. "From the standpoint of the individual householder, the self-defence firearm appears to be a dangrous investment."

Besides, a gun in the house is of no use to a family that is not at home, and that's when any smart criminal works his mischief.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 14, 1970 . . .

Capt. James Cook, British explorer, was killed 191 years ago today—in 1779— by natives of the Sandwich Islands (now Hawaii). Famous for explorations in the Pacific Ocean, Cook first sailed there on a scientific expedition in 1769, after attracting attention by astronomical observations made in Canada. Present at Wolfe's capture of Quebec, Cook had been put in charge of charting the St. Lawrence and Newfoundland coasts.

1663 — Canada became a royal province of France.

1915 — The first telephone conversation between Montreal and Vancouver took place.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—2,250 United States bombers and fighters raided Germany, with Dresden the main target; the Canadian 1st Army occupied Griethausen, less than one mile from the Rhine; Jauer, 34 miles west of Breslau, was captured by the Red Army; counter-attacking Chinese captured Pingshek, 165 miles north of Canton.

Feb. 15, 1970 . . .

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the Americans took Bataan; Superfortresses attacked the Japanese home island of Honshu; Sommerfeld, 67 miles from Berlin, fell to the Russian army; the Canadians reached the Rhine across from Emmerich; 1,300 RAF bombers blasted Chemnitz, Germany; Stalin announced the capture of Chojnice in former Polish corridor.

Quebec Seeks $200 Million from Ottawa

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand doesn't want to let go. And for good reason, since $200,000,000 is at stake. This is the amount the Quebec government has been trying for several months to get from the central government.

Readers will recall that this amount represents what Quebec citizens have paid to the federal government under the so-called social development tax. The federal finance minister, Edgar Benson, and the prime minister of Canada, Mr. Trudeau, have replied that Quebec will not get it. . . .

It is time for the federal government to come down from its ivory tower and listen to Quebec's claims in this field. . . .

Quebecers are over-taxed already. And, because of Ottawa's arrogance, the Quebec premier has raised the possibility of double taxation if the federal government persists in its attitude. The situation is far from being rosy. And yet, the governments of Ottawa and Quebec will be coming along again to dip into Quebecers' pockets to balance their budgets.

We cannot insist too strongly on the role Quebec should play in making claims on the federal government. Mr. Bertrand and his finance minister, Mario Beaulieu, must take up the gauntlet and make Messrs. Benson and Trudeau understand that Quebec has an urgent need for this $200,000,000.

The Ottawa government seems to want to push the Quebec government into resorting to extreme measures. This is certainly not the way to start people talking about the friendly relations between Ottawa and Quebec.

Celibacy Just One Issue

Catholic Church Bending Under Winds of Change

Montreal La Presse: Among the phenomena which most trouble the conscience of contemporary Roman Catholic society, two have proven to be significant. One is the increasing number of priests challenging the validity of the law of ecclesiastical celibacy and leaving the orders. The other is the incalculable number of Catholics abandoning the practice of religion.

It is said that on a worldwide basis, one priest in every five has left holy orders in recent years to get married. It is further specified that Canada has lost 10 per cent of the 16,000 priests it had in 1967, and that in Montreal the Jesuits lost 75 members between 1961 and 1966.

To what do we attribute this phenomenon? When they were ordained, the priests renounced marriage freely. How does it happen that certain of them now are questioning this vow, so freely taken? . . .

Some people believe that, in the circumstances, it is mainly a question of sex. But the problem seems much wider than that.

People may not have noticed the extent to which mass communications have dethroned the power elite of yesterday. In our own time, the priests, the nobility and the military have lost nearly all their authority. Even here in Quebec, it took only 10 years for an all-powerful clerical structure to crumble. Everything is breaking up in the old Catholic societies, and the Pope is making desperate efforts to prevent the worst. . . .

Formerly, the priests and the faithful obeyed the Pope and the bishops without protest, but also often without believing. Today they discuss, but it is because they believe, and the protesting believer of today probably has more moral value than the believing lap dog of the era of conformity.

Clergymen May Get Discounts But They Don't Like System

NEW YORK (AP) — By long-time custom, clergymen sometimes get special favors, but they don't always like the idea.

Because of their generally low pay and their service to the community, they often can get special discounts on purchases and travel fares But the practice is questioned by some clergymen today, although others defend it.

"It's a sort of peripheral payoff," says Dr. William R. Rogers, associate professor of religion and psychology at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind. "People kid themselves by it into thinking they don't have to pay ministers salaries commensurate with other professions."

He calls the system "theologically hypocritical and psychologically delusional," and says it tends to "perpetuate an image of the ministry as a second-class profession," and causes "unhealthy feelings of inferiority" in ministers.

His attack on the system in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, stirred a flurry of reactions, both pro and con.

Rev. James Allen Kestle, a Lansdowne, Pa., Methodist pastor, said that although he himself does not depend on discounts, the criticism of them does not consider the financial "harsh realities many clergy face even in this day of affluence."

Disputing claims that it makes clergymen feel inferior, he said many "of limited income can and do hold up their heads as they—along with the more affluent—shop for discounts."

On the other hand, Rev. Michael Baldwin, a Columbus, Ohio, Methodist pastor, said "frustration is on the rise" among clergymen, and they "no longer want to feel like kept men and second-class professionals."

"We want salary and benefits commensurate with those accorded men similarly trained and skilled in other professions," he said.

Under the widespread practice, American clergymen often get discounts in retail stores, usually about 10 per cent, if they identify themselves and ask for it, and up to 50 per cent on train fares and on major airlines.

"A great many ministers use the system as a way of supplementing their income," Dr. Rogers said in an interview. "They justify it on grounds that it's part of the business world's contribution to the life of the church."

The clergy discount practice is a carry-over from times when church members sometimes took food baskets or groceries to the pastor to help support him, especially in rural areas, where it sometimes still happens.

On the average in the U.S., Protestant clergymen earn about $6,000 yearly, plus housing, and they usually have families to support. Roman Catholic priests get about half that, or less, but also food and housing.

THE QUIET LIFE

"And all must ende that ever was begonne." — Geffrey Whitney, (1586.)

* * *

How do you feel about a quiet life?

Is it a way to strive for — or shun?

Rebecca West once wrote that as people get older they care "not so much that their lives should have been happy or sad, but that they should have had a story. A life in which nothing of interest has happened seems increasingly pointless."

Need a life so described set in a small village, where one was born, lived and died, as did Gilbert White, necessarily be uninteresting though quiet? Evidently he found it not so, for he loved every minute in his village where he found world enough and time and content to want no more. All by keeping a journal which became the natural history of his life. For as a miscellaneous observer, he had found his calling.

He began in 1768 and mastered the art: he saw and recorded. He took pleasure simply in the nature of a day. He lived 73 years (1720-1793 and during the last 25 of those years, kept ten thousand daily records "of the serenest life I've ever envied," confesses Mrs. Helen Bevington, of Duke University.

In London recently, she went to the British Museum to glance through his diaries for an hour. She stayed a month. Each day she sat in a room forbidden to lay "my hands across its fragile pages": nor might she leave the journal unattended for a moment. A whole century went by after Mr. White's death before the museum finally acquired the manuscript. It is labeled "select". "That means precious" says Mrs. Bevington.

A batchelor, he was a rejoicer, a thriving, easy-minded man and "he lived during the reigns of the three Georges "in a changing world nearly as violent as my own", says Mrs. Bevington. Yet as the American Revolution, the French Revolution and the Industrial Revolution erupted lives of men, he turned his mind "to the harvest mouse and wrote the life history of the field cricket" and rose with grace to the defence of earthworms "though in appearance a small and despicable link in the chain of nature, yet, if lost, would make a lamentable chasm."

Or often made terse, limited entries: "Green gooseberries." "Blue stinking mist." "Large broods of long-tailed titmice." "Larks frolic." "Thistledown flies."

"Feb. 28, 1769: Raven sits."

In March the woodpecker laughed. Beetles buzzed. In April bird song everywhere. In hyacinth weather, Timothy the tortoise emerged from the hedge and Mr. White took his pulse. While 1793 marked the reign of terror in Paris, the day Louis XVI was beheaded, the song thrush sang. While France declared war against England and Holland, March brought the dog-toothed violet . . .

"Mr. White of Selborne, Hampshire was my peace. I could not get enough of the man or his company in this noisy world," says Mrs. Bevington." "Mr. A. E. Newton says Mr. White discovered the formula for happiness: being very busy with the unimportant."

He missed the point, Mrs. Bevington feels, saying:

"Gilbert White was a busy man but it was with the miraculous. To read him is to find one's own world mended."

Ontario's Nurses Demand Pay Increases

TORONTO (CP) — Five Ontario hospitals have recently signed contracts with their nurses without a long battle or compulsory arbitration.

They are among the first to do so since nurses began trade union activities about five years ago.

The contracts have involved raises of $10 to $45 a month, bringing starting salaries to $525 to $535 in Belleville, St. Catharines, Fort William, Hamilton and Ottawa. In two more cases, in Guelph and Kitchener, agreement has been reached subject to ratification.

As there are almost 300 public hospitals in Ontario, this may not seem like many undisputed contracts. But Anne Gribben says nurses hope they are portents of easier times to come.

Miss Gribben is director of employment relations for the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario. The RNAO has been leader and adviser in the effort to get nurses organized under the Labor Relations Act as collective bargaining units. There are 5 such units now, scattered across the province.

The situation has been complicated and difficult. Hospital nurses may not strike. Many people — including some nurses — believe they should not even organize. Until now both employer and employee have been unyielding and usually have wound up in compulsory arbitration.

Miss Gribben says she does not know what has started the apparent change, and thinks it was probably a mixture of factors. She hopes one has been the nurses' determination.

"We aren't as strong in numbers as we have been, but we are no longer those nice little girls you pat on the head and they go away. We don't go away."

She says a coincidental change may have removed a major roadblock. For years the Ontario Hospital Services Commission had set guidelines for starting salaries for nurses. Now, Miss Gribben says, the financial arrangement between hospitals and the OHSC is being handled differently and the commission is not stipulating in detail how hospitals should use their money.

In addition, the most recent arbitration award set a precedent by substantially exceeding OHSC salary recommendations.

"Last year there was no flexibility," Miss Gribben said. "Our negotiations for 1970 have been honest-to-goodness negotiations. We are not being told by the employer, 'Here you are, take it or leave it.'

"The OHSC isn't being mentioned. . . . This gives us the chance to do some bargaining.

"And the last four arbitration awards have been good. They have said we're 'not bound by OHSC.

"Now the hospitals seem to be following one another."

But even if all employers of nurses show an increased willingness to negotiate, the RNAO may not feel the job is done.

The organization would like to be designated the bargaining agent for all nurses, and would like to have more nurses eligible for membership in bargaining units.

Either would require change in Ontario's labor legislation, under which nurses may not have an over-all "union." Organizing and bargaining must be done piecemeal in individual hospitals, schools and public health units.

The act also says in effect that nurses above the rank of assistant head nurse are management and ineligible.

Miss Gribben says these conditions vary from province to province even though provincial labor relations acts are similar. But an over-all organization would give nurses more strength, even though many problems would still have to be negotiated on a local basis.

WHITE'S DISTRICT —On Friday evening 12 Bayside Brownies and three leaders left for a weekend winter camp at Waupoos, Prince Edward County, returning on Sunday afternoon.

Outdoor activities consisted of tobogganing and hikes. Indoor activities consisted of games, crafts and a pow-wow in the evenings.

Brownies attending the camp from 1st Bayside Brownie Pack were Sandra Christian, Debbie Phillips, Sheila Broughm, Rosalind Croft, Joanne Cole and Tammy Loader. Brownies in 2nd Bayside Brownie Pack were Johanne Morn, Delani Chypycha, Rhonda Robertson, Brenda Porter, Lee Doherty and Kelly Doherty.

The leaders were Maxine Thibault, Joyce Doherty and Madam Commissioner Millie Broughm.

Chief Crosbie Speaks at Meet

"The Child in our Society" was the topic of the winter gathering of the Child Evangelism Fellowship held on Monday at the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Greetings were extended by Earl Naismith, member of the local committee, who chaired the meeting. A special solo was rendered by Constable Raye Harrington, OPP Napanee Detachment.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie of the Belleville Detachment spoke on the theme "The Child in our Society." He related the problems society has in relation to young children, mostly damage to property, run aways, and minor thefts. This of course reverted back to the break down of the family unit — which is the biggest problem of present time. These problems are on the increase, and Belleville has hired a full time constable to work among the children and young people. Flint, Michigan has a community program that has been set up with the idea of family life education which has helped considerably and Belleville is beginning a similar program. In research in Toronto it was indicated that children who enjoyed strong family and reliigious ties were less easily enticed into the experimenting with drugs.

After the first presentation the audience gathered into six discussion groups to consider questions of the following nature: "What can we do as Christian workers to combat the problem of social evils?;" "Should information on drugs, alcohol, etc. be part of the Sunday School and Good News Bible Club teaching materials?"

This was a lively time and much information gleaned from the same. Second speaker was Rev. Fred Sutherst, probation officer from Peterborough, with the theme "Christ and our Children." He contrasted children he knew who attended Good News Bible Clubs and Sunday School and some who did not attend. Reverend Sutherst was well qualified for his subject as for many years his home has been opened for a Good News Bible Club and Mrs. Sutherst also was a teacher.

A Good News Bible Club is a group of neighborhood children gathered together where a hostess opens her home and a qualified teacher conducts the club program of singing, missionary program, a Bible verse and Bible story told by flannelgraph. These clubs are usually held right after school for one hour a week. These clubs are interdenominational.

They do not take the place of Sunday School but are extra Bible teaching to reach primarily the child who has no regular church attendance. A Teacher Training Class is held the first and third Monday evenings at 8 p.m. at 64 Lewis Street.

New visualized songs and flash card stories were demonstrated by Miss Marjorie Laing, the Area Director for East Central Ontario Child Evangelism Fellowship.

A literature table with available helps and aids in teaching boys and girls was set up at the side of the church.

Refreshments were served.

Foods Low in Cholesterol

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: My husband had a severe heart attack two months ago. When he got out of hospital, the doctor told me he should eat foods that are low in cholesterol. I know that means he should not have much pork or other fat meat, but I wonder what other foods he can have on his diet. Could you give me a list of foods that are low in cholesterol? — Mrs. L. C.

ANSWER: It is a coincidence that your question regarding heart trouble falls on Valentine's Day.

Each branch of the Canadian Heart Foundation in each province, can supply you with complete and reliable information on low cholesterol diets and with tested and medically-approved recipes for low cholesterol foods. Two that I would suggest you should ask them for are entitled:

Daughter's Immaturity Postpones Dating

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We promised our daughter she could date on her 14th birthday. Her birthday is in eight weeks and she is far from ready. Betsy is immature. Her room looks like a disaster area and she must be told to wash her neck. I've had her hearing tested twice because she doesn't respond when spoken to. Her grades are barely passing. She behaves childishly, cries when things don't go her way, kicks the dog when she loses her temper, and to put it frankly, she acts like a 10-year-old.

We've been allowing Betsy to attend boy-girl parties for a year and now I feel even this was premature, but it's too late to back out. I hate to break my word, but this girl is not ready to date and I know it. What should be done? — SHAKING IN SHAKER HEIGHTS.

DEAR HEIGHTS: Stop shaking and tell Betsy you are sorry but she hasn't shaped up and can't date until she is ready. Dating is a privilege, not a right. When your daughter proves she has earned the privilege of being dependable, responsible, trustworthy, and willing to live up to her obligations in school and at home — O.K. Give her every break, but explain she'll have to grow up or no dice.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My dear friend reads your column every day. If she sees this she'll recognize herself — I hope.

Mrs. N. is civic minded, charming and has a heart-of-gold — but she is a pack rat. I exaggerate not when I say the newspapers in her living room date back to 1964. They line the walls in stacks five feet high. One can't find a place to sit down because newspapers are on every chair. Her bedroom is so cluttered I don't know how she finds the bed at night.

She keeps saying, "One day I must go through these papers and clip items for special friends." I just hope the place doesn't go up in flames before she gets around to it. Please, Ann, print this letter. Mrs. N's good friends worry about her. — OXNARD, CALIF.

DEAR OX: Here's the letter and don't take a chance on Mrs. N. seeing it. Mail it to her. She might pile today's paper with the others. In the meantime, why don't you call the fire chief: He might order her to get rid of the papers — and save her life.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My fiance has a habit of hitting an object with his fist when he loses his temper. Donald is 23 — old enough to know better.

Last week Don dented the car door and sprained his wrist when he punched the dashboard. Last night we had an argument and he hit the living room wall with his fist. I'm betting he'll have a sore hand tomorrow.

Why would a person intentionally inflict physical damage on himself? What can I do about it? — MODESTO, CALIF.

DEAR MODE: Don's need to punish himself physically, suggests a little self-hate as well as immaturity. Let's hope he outgrows it. Until he does, stay out of his way, Doll and be grateful he takes out his anger on things, not people.

Be patient, little will happen in the first four days. But you will suddenly drop five pounds on the fifth day. The mystery of the Original New Zealand Grapefruit diet is simple . . FAT DOES NOT FORM FAT . . . FAT FIGHTS FAT and the grapefruit in this wonder diet acts as a blast furnace to start the fat burning process.

The unpermitted foods are now permitted, completely listed in the original diet plan, and you will still lose unsightly fat and bloat and body fluids, when all the excess fat and bloat are gone you will cease to lose weight and your weight will then remain constant . . .

YOUR ANTIQUES

Candelabra Still Popular In Canadian Homes

Candelabra such as the one illustrated turn up with some frequency in Canada. They are usually cast brass or ormolu candle sockets and bases with stems and leaves of gilded iron.

Some candelabra of this type have milk glass flowers, ormolu wire stamens and pistils and crystal swags.

Both types seem to be related to the Roman Catholic Church, not as Church fittings but furnishings for rectories and convent parlors. They are distinctly French in derivation and can be traced to the period of Louis XV in style.

In the mid-eighteenth century Sevres vases were used as candelabrum bases supporting a three-light branch of stylized flowers. The vases were large and out of proportion to the flowers they supported. As the vases were made smaller and cast in ormolu, branches were added for more candles until only a vestigial vase remained.

A three-branch foot of Italian inspiration has been grafted on to the base illustrated to give a more "church-like" connotation. This type of foot is still perpetuated in Easter candlesticks in Canada. Casting and design differ from French imports and it is reasonable to assume candelabra of this type were made in Quebec.

English designs for girandoles, (which these are sometimes called), of the period after 1850 may also be found in Canada. These are loosely based on gothic revival designs.

Although it is possible and probable that they were made at the same place, English and French designs differ radically.

Early Gothic designs were copied for secular and religious use. They are much more angular than French designs and could be stamped and rivetted out of sheet metal. French designs were cast and of better quality.

Most of these candelabara were intended for use on a mantel in front of a mirror or against a wall, rather than for a table. The great revival of interest in Gothic design and church fittings flourished in mid-19th century so these probably date about that period. The demand for candelabra was supplanted by oil lamps in the 1860's to a certain extent by gas and later electricity. Demand would have disappeared by the turn of the century.

Ormolu and gilt is always expensive. Candelabra of the style shown sell for $100 to $200 a pair, depending on size, style and number of lights.

Preparing A Child for Hospital

By DORIS CLARK

Don't press the panic button when little Susie or Johnny has to get tonsils out or some repairs done which can only take place in a hospital. The whole situation is strange, but mothers can be saved a few blunders in preparing a little one for his enforced leave of absence:

Don't bribe him. He may decide the reward isn't worth it and he'll just stay home, thank you.

Don't lie about his destination. The circus was never like this.

Don't tell him it won't hurt a bit — if you want him to believe you again.

Don't let him see your own concern and anxiety.

Don't expect hospital rules to be suspended for you.

These are some of the common sense ideas to be found in the federal health department pamphlet, Preparing Your Child for Hospital. This is a free pamphlet, available from your provincial or local health department.

Dear Doris: I am 25, and find myself hopelessly in love with a guy I have known as a casual friend for a long time. Recently he came with friends to our home, and the moment he got out of his car his eyes met mine and were glued to them for the rest of the day. Now he has moved away to a better job.

Doris, I'm sure he's the right guy because I have practically been sick with love. He's on my mind and heart continually, even after three long silent months. I have missed him so very much I even prayed that he would be taken off my mind.

How can I get him back? I know it's not right for a girl to call a guy back by way of a letter. Maybe he's afraid to get in touch because he does not know my feelings towards him.

I was tempted to send him a Christmas card to his old address, but didn't do it. I have refused other dates because of my love sickness. — Hoping Against Hope.

Dear Hoping: If the dream is for real, he'll be dreaming too. I can't see that a Christmas card would have done any harm.

Perhaps your mutual friends would know when he is in your area and you could plan an impromptu party. But to throw a party, you'll have to keep some friends. There might even be another one-and-only among them.

Dear Doris: I found the poem, Little Rosewood Casket, in an old newspaper called The Free Press, London, Ontario, dated February 2, 1935.

This poem came under the title of Everybody's Department of Old Songs and Poems and people could ask for requests and the newspaper would publish so many of them each Saturday night. Also, the readers would send in ones the paper would mention they needed. — Down Memory Lane

Dear Memory Lane: The reader, Fond Memories, will be glad of the copy you sent. More than one poetry lover has asked me why there aren't such things as poetry exchange columns.

Glad to hear there was one once.

Mortgage Interest Rates and Rents Force Up Cost of Living

OTTAWA (CP) — Mortgage interest rates and rents, two items expected to be at the forefront of federal-provincial anti-inflation talks next week, were the main contributors to a further rise in the cost of living last month.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Friday that its consumer price index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, rose to 128.2 in January from 127.9 in December and 122.6 in January last year.

The biggest gain was in the sub-index covering housing, up to 128.1 in January from 127.6 in December and 121.9 in January, 1969.

Mortgage interest rates and the prices for new houses and house repairs pushed the home-ownership index by one per cent. Rents rose two-tenths of one per cent.

Higher mortgage costs are a direct reflection of the high interest rates now prevailing with the government's efforts to dampen inflationary pressures by reining in the money supply.

Higher new house prices, repair costs, and rents also flow from the high cost of money and materials used in housing.

The federal government's prices and incomes commission is expected to ask the provinces at Monday's meeting to join the federal government in trying to moderate the rate of increase in rents. Some provinces now have rent control legislation but apply controls in only limited fields.

While the over-all index rose two-tenths of one per cent last month, the increase over a year earlier was unchanged from December's index, up 4.6 per cent. Some officials see this as arresting the rate of increase, though the increase remains high.

The government would like to have the annual rate of increase brought back to its long-term average of between two and three per cent.

If the January increase of two-tenths of one per cent were carried through the next 11 months, the annual rate for 1970 would be about 2.5 per cent.

Markets Ready to Jump When Tight Money Ends

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets advanced moderately this week, their second weekly gain of 1970, interrupting a three-week slump.

Canadian markets again followed the whims of Wall Street.

Canadian markets followed New York moderately higher Monday when Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the United States federal reserve board, pledged to resist inflation.

However, after a closer look at Burns' statement, investors became discouraged and markets declined slightly.

It appeared for most of the session Wednesday that stock prices would continue to fall.

But in the final hour of trading Wednesday, sudden rallies on Canadian and American exchanges sent prices climbing to some of their best daily gains this year.

The sharp upswing was apparently touched off by rumors on Wall Street that a major bank planned to reduce its prime interest rate, and that the U.S. federal reserve board might act to ease credit restraints in the U.S.

But major New York banks quickly denied a prime rate reduction was being considered, and once more investors pulled back, depressing markets Thursday.

Observers said that more market patterns similar to this week's can be expected in the near future unless there is a major break on the inflation wars in Canada and the U.S.

Since last June, Canadian and American markets have been under the shadow of government monetary controls and markets, reacting to money restraints, have been dull and depressed.

Any rumors of relaxation of this restraint have usually resulted in a quick market rally followed by just as fast a drop when the rumors were proved unfounded.

However, there appears to be hope lingering in Canadian and American investors as proven by this week's sudden one-hour rally Wednesday.

Apparently investors are just waiting in a crouch position for the shot that marks the beginning of the end of tight money. When that shot comes, most observers expect a rapid recovery from the present seven-month bear market.

Statistically, on index at the Toronto Stock Exchange this week, industrials were up 1.91 to 178.43 and golds .83 to 151.99. Western oils lost 5.48 to 199.21 and base metals 1.06 to 112.11.

Volume was 10,082,000 shares compared with 11,039,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 514 to 242 with 247 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up 1.77 to 175.72. Volume was 8,204,000 shares compared with 6,654,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 204 to 134 with 99 issues unchanged.

Pearson Urges All to Fight Poverty

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Lester Pearson appealed to Canadians Friday to take an active part in the war against poverty, "a time bomb as dangerous as any inter-continental ballistic missile."

Mr. Pearson, chairman of the Commission on International Development, made the appeal at a special ecumenical service to launch a campaign by the Coalition for Development to raise $3,000,000 during Lent for church projects to combat poverty.

The Coalition for Development is a co-operative alliance of the Canadian Catholic Conference and the Canadian Council of Churches established two years ago to pool resources for a war on poverty at home and abroad.

Mr. Pearson said the question Canadians face is "not whether the burden of aiding the poor is bearable, but whether they are willing to bear it."

"Last year the gross national products of the advanced industrial countries increased by about $140,000,000,000, but only $6,000,000,000 — $7,000,000,000 needed to redress the plight of the poor."

Mr. Pearson stressed that governments in the advanced lus of public opinion" before corrective action is taken.

Rt. Rev. Edward H. Johnson, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, suggested the problem of poverty poses "not one, but two time bombs" for Canadians.

"In addition to the time bomb of unrest in poorer countries, Canadians face a time bomb of moral decay if they continue to ignore poverty at home and abroad," said Dr. Johnson, who headed Canairelief, the organization that flew relief supplies into Biafra.

Archbishop J. Aurele Plourde, president of the Canadian Catholic Conference, stressed that "charity cannot exist in the abstract." The church must take concrete measures to help nations will require "the stimu- "liberate oppressed peoples."

Similar views were expressed by Archbishop Howard H. Clark, Anglican primate, who said the church must regard the poverty of three of every 10 Canadians as "absolutely unacceptable."

Dr. Robert B. McClure, moderator of the United Church of Canada, said the idealism of youth is the most effective weapon in the war on poverty.

Engineers Victimize Small Municipalities

TORONTO (CP) — Fly-by-night consulting engineers are victimizing some small Ontario municipalities, an official of the provincial highways department said Friday.

H. W. Adcock, assistant deputy minister, said some consulting engineers, including small firms, perform valuable services for small municipalities.

But, he said, about three years ago the department began auditing some of the engineering projects undertaken by municipalities through consultants. The results left officials "so alarmed you wouldn't believe it."

Mr. Adcock was speaking at a seminar on consultants in public administration.

Some consulting firms, he said, seek assignments outside their field of competence, accept larger projects than they can handle, and want maximum pay for minimum work.

U.S. Army Will Burn Deadly Gas

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Thousands of gallons of deadly poison gas will be destroyed in huge ovens in Colorado starting this fall under a project announced Friday by the United States Army.

The gas will be burned instead of being shipped to the East Coast and dumped in the Atlantic, a proposal which drew strong protests when originally put forward last year.

Lieut.-Col. Sampson H. Bass, who will head the project, told a Pentagon news conference that elaborate safety precautions have been taken to dispose of the mustard gas and GB nerve gas.

The project, called Task Force Eagle, will involve the army in building huge ovens at a cost of $14,600,000 at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, near Denver.

Bass said disposal is safe "from anything man has control over."

Personal Grudge Behind Bombings

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Bernard Cramer, president of Dutch Laundry and Dry Cleaners whose two London plants were damaged by home-made bombs Thursday, said Friday that the bomber is someone holding a grudge against him personally.

No one was injured in the blasts.

Last December 10 a Molotov cocktail was thrown into each of the two plants. At one plant about $400 damage was caused, but at the other the bomb burned itself out on a concrete floor.

Police said Friday they are questioning several persons in connection with Thursday's bombings which caused damage estimated between $1,000 and $3,000 at one plant and minor damage at the other.

They said a "sophisticated" home-made device encased in a pipe was tossed in a laundry chute at one plant and a similar bomb was thrown through a window of the other plant.

Chrysler, GM Alter Car Prices

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. and General Motors, fighting for bigger shares of sagging U.S. new car market, announced price changes for 1970 models Friday.

In a step that caught observers by surprise, Chrysler announced it was slashing the prices of its compact Dodge Dart line by from $155 to $190 depending on the model.

Chevrolet Division of GM presented its new 1970-model Camaros to the press Friday—and announced that the four-passenger sports car's basic price tag had gone up by about $22.

Pontiac Division, also previewing its 1970 Firebirds several months after the introduction of most 1970 models, announced the basic price was up by $21.

In announcing the price cuts, Dodge said it was hoping to increase its share of the compact-car market, the hottest sellers in the otherwise slow new car business.

The U.S. automakers have reported that sales for the first 10 days of February were down 10 per cent. Chrysler reported sales were up four per cent in the period, but the firm's sales have been down sharply in recent months.

Black Man Now White Finds Life Is Difficult

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — For almost six years James W. Finley, 33, has been trying to adjust to being a black man with a white skin.

"I thought maybe I could probably learn to live with myself and meet people but it just didn't work out that way," he says.

Finley is that rare case—a man whose color changed completely within a matter of weeks.

He was sitting at his desk one day and he started scratching his arm.

"That's all," he recalls. "I would have let it go but it was just a different type of itch."

Finley said he went to see a doctor at the hospital and was told that he probably had a heat rash which would go away in a day or two.

"About a day or so later it was all over the body," Finley added.

"I started breaking out in bumps, they were everywhere."

When the irritation increased Finley was admitted to the hospital.

After three weeks of treatment he was discharged and said: "At that time my skin was still black and my hair still black." But shortly after leaving the hospital, he said, his hair came out in patches until he was completely bald.

"My eyelashes, my eyebrows, my moustache, the hair on my chest, all fell out," Finley said. "And when it grew back it grew back white.

"While my hair was growing my skin gradually changed from dark brown to what it is now," he added.

After his skin color changed Finley left his job at the hospital and became an investigator with a Cleveland insurance company.

"I couldn't get myself together," he says. "My appearance affected me . . . that is one of the reasons I quit my job at the hospital.

"I have problems that I probably should be able to cope with but I just cannot at this particular time. People looking, people laughing, some laugh some don't."

Finley has filed a $500,000 damage suit in U.S. District Court here against the federal government charging hospital officials were negligent in treating Finley with a drug called doriden which allegedly caused the pigmentation in his skin to disappear.

Teachers to Get Bargaining Rights

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's community college teachers will be able to bargain collectively in the 1970-71 academic year, Education Minister William Davis said Friday.

Mr. Davis made the announcement in a memorandum issued after meetings with two rival organizations—the Ontario Federation of Community College Faculty Associations and the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

Federation President Hal Morgan, who organized a walkout Monday at three of the backed colleges, called the minister's announcement "a significant step forward."

But Mr. Davis said in his memorandum it has always been the intention of the government to permit collective bargaining.

The government will go ahead with plans to introduce legislation this spring to allow teachers to choose their bargaining agent.

Mr. Morgan said the minister did not respond to the federation's demand that it be consulted about the content of the legislation.

Representatives of the CSAO said the government's position remains unchanged and the association has supported the government's plans for legislation since they were announced last fall.

U.S. Anti-war Leaders Hold Cleveland Parley

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The U.S. anti-war movement, mostly silent and unspectacular since mounting peace demonstrations Nov. 15, gathers here today for a national conference to discuss strategy for the future.

Conference leaders are talking of plans for a new wave of large-scale actions in mid-April designed to increase the pressure on President Nixon for immediate withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Vietnam.

Spokesmen for the Student Mobilization Committee predicted that the two-day conference would be attended by at least 2,000 delegates from virtually every branch of the movement—socialists, communists, Trotskyites, liberals, the assorted factions of Students for a Democratic Society, and pacifists.

It is a conference, says the SMC newspaper, The Student Moblizer, "in which differing political views and perspectives for building an effective anti-war movement can be expressed and decided upon in an atmosphere of democracy and openness."

But before the conference closes Sunday night, sharp debate is expected as the various factions seek consensus at a price short of their own ideological purity.

The Trotskyite Young Socialist Alliance already has criticized the positions of the Vietnam Moratorium and the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam. These two groups teamed to bring out hundreds of thousands of marchers in Washington and San Francisco Nov. 15.

Both the New Mobe and the Moratorium will have representatives at the conference.

Susan Lamont, YSA national secretary, accused the New Mobe in a pre-conference position paper of a departure in tactics from November and said it now was putting forward a "hodge-podge of essentially reformist demands" while weakening the movement focused on the issue of immediate withdrawal.

She also scorned the Moratorium for its decision to back peace candidates in the 1970 congressional elections.

"However, you look at it, the candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties . . . are committed 100 per cent to defence of American imperialism," she said.

Carol Lipman, SMC national secretary and a former YSA national secretary, wrote in a pre-conference position paper that the need is great for "a day of mass anti-war action which can involve the largest number of people nationally in the most visible way."

She issued a call for "massive unified demonstrations . . . in as many cities as can mount them effectively."

A similar call has come from the New Mobe, which is calling for mass demonstrations April 15.

Rockets to Probe Sky During Eclipse of Sun

OTTAWA (CP) — Bang! Bang! Bang! Bang! And the sun goes dark March 7.

The expensive noises will be scientists firing four rockets on the Nova Scotia seashore. The darkening sun visible to most people in Eastern Canada marks the moon's passage between earth and sun.

Its shadow, nearly 75 miles wide, will pass the length of Nova Scotia, moving northeastward from Mexico and along the Atlantic seaboard of the United States.

The eclipse is providing communications scientists with a rare opportunity through rocket-borne equipment to learn more about a belt of radiation in the atmosphere which weakens radio signals.

For the public, it will be a Sunday spectacle visible in varying degrees of intensity from total at Halifax to slight at Victoria, provided skies are clear.

But eclipse viewing poses real hazards to the eyesight, especially of children. Unless special precautions are taken, permanent eye damage can result.

In fact, the Canadian Association of Optometrists has issued a public warning that "there is no safe way to watch the eclipse directly and retain full use of your eyesight."

The eye doctors recommend watching it on television or building yourself a reflecting viewer with cardboard and white paper for which they offer free plans from their association here.

It All Happened for Mo-Hawks Friday 13th!

Eyes Right!

Belleville Mo-Hawks' goalie Steve Rexe, Kingston Aces' Hugh Harvey, and Mo-Hawk defenceman Bill Armour follow the flight of Harvey's shot in first-period action last night in Kingston. Rexe was outstanding, stopping 40 Kingston shots as the Mo-Hawks recorded a 4-2 OHA Senior A win.

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

KINGSTON — It was a "nothing game", but somebody forgot to tell Belleville Mo-Hawks.

With slim chances of budging from the OHA Senior A's sixth and last playoff spot, the Mo-Hawks came into Kingston last night lacking both players and confidence in the wake of a 9-out-of-11 game losing streak.

The Mo-Hawks could even their season's record at 5-5 with the Aces with a win in Sunday afternoon's 2 o'clock return match in Belleville in a game that should be a show-stopper.

Last night's game not only proved the Mo-Hawks CAN win, something they were beginning to wonder about after enduring a month-long slump.

It proved they can win on the road and against the team they stand a good chance of meeting when playoffs open a week from Tuesday.

It also proved they can win without the valuable services of defencemen Lou Kazowski, Wayne Brown, and Bob Wilson and the best two-way player on the club, Lorne O'Donnell, all of whom missed last night's action.

Brown did attend, handling behind - the - bench coaching chores for Davey Jones.

The Mo-Hawks won last night because they did what a lot of good poker players do — they played their Aces close to the vest.

Jones threw three makeshift forward combinations at the Aces that stuck to their checks like glue for much of the night.

George Godson centred Al and Lorne Ferguson; Gary Dalliday centred Ray Johnston and Wayne McConnell, and Ralph Plane pivoted Ray Summers and John "Shaker" Baker.

It was Baker who gave the Mo-Hawks the lead for the first time with less than a minute remaining in the game.

Baker's sixth goal — and second game-winner — came off a faceoff in the Kingston zone to the left of goalie Neil Perry.

Billy Armour got the draw back to Jones who fired one into Perry's pads. Baker swooped in and flipped the rebound over Perry at 19.12 and 2,200 Kingston fans let loose with a deafening round of silence.

Thirty seconds later, with Perry out of Kingston's net for a sixth attacker, George Godson took Greg Marchen's pass-up and lobbed the insurance marker halfway the distance of the ice.

That prompted Steve Rexe to jump at least three feet in the air in justifiable jubilation.

Rexe had stopped 40 Kingston shots in giving as good an exhibition of stand-up goaltending as is ever seen in senior hockey circles.

The Aces outshot Belleville 19-4 in the second period, but Rexe held the hometowners scoreless.

Kingston's first goal, by Hugh Harvey midway through the first period, deflected in off defenceman Lionel Botly, after Rexe had stymied the Aces' usual explosive start.

Ray Johnston's goal from linemates Gary Dalliday and Wayne McConnell sent the Mo-Hawks into the second period on a 1-1 footing, somewhat different than the lop-sided results of the teams' previous three meetings in which the Aces had outscored Belleville 26-7.

Davey Jones, who played a cautious but effective game on defence, engineered the Mo-Hawks' second goal after Jim Gebhardt's point blast gave the Aces a 2-1 edge after only 58 seconds of the final period.

With the clubs playing three men aside after a pair of preliminaries involving Billy Armour and Charlie Convery and Wayne McConnell and Fred O'Donnell, Jones gave Greg Marchen a perfect chance in the slot to beat Perry with a 40-foot drive.

The goal, at the 11-minute mark, proved to be a big one, as the Aces enjoyed a manpower advantage when the major penalty muddle cleared half a minute later.

Sunday's 2 p.m. Memorial Arena game will be the Mo-Hawks' second-last home appearance of the regular schedule. Orillia Terriers finish off the schedule here a week from Sunday.

Banner Day for Belleville

Belleville Collegiate basketball teams rang up victories in bantam and senior contests against Picton in Bay of Quinte action last night while the Prince Edward juniors pulled off a mild upset winning a high-scoring 85-73 game.

The Belleville seniors appear to be clearly the class of the league taking their eleventh victory against no losses. Final score of the game was 79-38, with BCI pouring in 25 points in the final quarter. Dave Wright continued to burn up the league counting 20 points in the win. Brent Gallupe and Jim Wright were close behind with 19, while Dave Depu was high man for Picton with nine points.

High-scoring centre Bill Barrett led the charge for the rapidly improving Picton juniors, as he scored 36 points in their 85-73 win. Doug Dersnah hooped 22 points and Jon Samuel 12 to fill out Picton's top scorers. The win raises their record to 5-6. Bob Woodley scored 20 points and Jeff Morton 15 in a losing BCI effort.

Picton juniors hit on 27 of 45 free throws, while BCI only made good on eight.

The bantam Collegians avenged an earlier loss to Centennial by clobbering Picton 61-20. Peter LeBaron (12), Mark Gallupe (10) and Keith Watson (8) were top Belleville point getters. Seymour Dance scored 12 points for Picton.

In all, Belleville teams took eight of nine Bay of Quinte games scheduled Friday.

Some outstanding reboundwork by Al Bender and Dave Thompson's 18-point effort led Moira seniors to a 59-42 win over Napanee.

The junior Trojans got 11-point contributions from Dave Pulver and Don Hazleton in recording a 48-31 decision. Coathup paced the Napanee juniors with 10 points.

Moira's bantams outdistanced Napanee 47-21, thanks to Dave Dent's 16 points and another 12 hooped by Dave Rutherford. Markovich's 13 was best for Napanee.

Centennial seniors held Trenton to a single point in the fourth quarter as they romped to a 65-36 win. Neron's 17 points, and 13 by Koch showed the way for the Chargers, while Kanellos was top man for Trenton with 10.

Randy Derry picked Friday the 13th to score 13 points and lead the junior Chargers to a 53-39 win over Trenton. Semark and Henderson each hit for 11 Centennial points, with Dan Dow's 10 topping Trenton replies.

Centennial bantams completed the Charger sweep with a 45-28 win, getting 17 points from Parmaksezian.

Quinte Secondary School history students continued their "Hockeython" today in search of the world's record of 57 hours, and 19 minutes of continuous play. With $800 in pledges towards an Easter tour of New York hinging on the outcome, the students started play at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon and hope to continue until 2 a.m. Monday - - - unless, of course overtime is required.

Quinte 'Hockeython' One Massive Overtime

Nobody, but nobody wants overtime.

At least not if they're one of the 36 Quinte Secondary School history students engaged in this weekend's "hockeython".

Quinte history teacher Grant Collett put the idea of a marathon hockey game into the heads of a group of his students as a means of raising funds for a tour of New York planned over the Easter break.

As Hastings MP Lee Grills and Mayor Russell Scott dropped the puck for Quinte's hockeython at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, some $800 in pledges had been obtained by the students on the condition that they break the existing world record hockey game of 57 hours, 19 minutes.

"It's all or nothing", said perpetrator Collett. "The boys are aiming to play until around 2 a.m. Monday.

That's assuming, of course, that overtime will not be required to determine the game's outcome.

In a Montreal hockeython last week, for example, the Sleepwalkers edged the Zombies 260-259 after a 55-hour game.

The longest hockey game in Belleville history is being staged on an outdoor pond on College St., just east of Quinte which is being floodlit with the co-operation of the city public utilities department.

A nearby apartment building is serving as fatigue headquarters as the students play in six - hour shifts in temperatures that dipped to 10 degrees below zero Friday night.

Public support in the form of heated cars and hot drinks would be appreciated.

Edged 6-5 by Byes

Slow Start Costs Juniors String

Seven minutes "more or less" would have given the Belleville Ellis Printers a landslide win in their Eastern Ontario Junior B League game against Peterborough last night. Unfortunately for the home team hockey games last a full 60 minutes, as Belleville dropped a 6-5 decision that clipped their unbeaten string at seven games.

The opening seven minutes of play saw the Don Byes rap in three goals within the space of a minute and seventeen seconds as the Belleville defence momentarily collapsed.

Trailing 6-2 in the match's final seven minutes, the Printers came up with three goals and threatened to tie the game on numerous chances. The Ellis attack fell just short, however, despite lifting goalie Ron Jury for a six attacker in the game's final minute.

Almost obscured by Belleville's gangbuster finish, was the fact that the Ellis Juniors played a sub-par game for most of the contest.

Goalie Ron Jury gave his first bad performance within recent memory as two of the visitors' goals beat him on the short side. He also appeared shaky on a few clearing efforts, but was often a victim of his defencemen's errors.

The Ellis performance must be taken in context, however, with the fact that the club had just clinched a playoff spot and suffered a natural let-down. Also, they were missing the services of centre John McConnell, whose nose fracture was more serious than anticipated and may keep him out of the remaining regular season games.

Despite an adequate fill-in job by Ron Fuller, who has been a valuable late season addition, linemates Terry Meagher and Reid Mallory couldn't seem to click with their new pivot on a number of passes.

Meagher, who played what is probably his poorest game to date, tallied the line's only goal, backhanding a shot past goalie Dave White at the 18-minute mark of the third period. The new league scoring leader was shadowed all night by John Paterson and Phil Grady and just couldn't seem to get untracked.

The Printers' second line of Ted Waite-Danny Lupenette and Dennis MacCormack turned in a strong performance, with Waite scoring twice and his linemates adding one apiece. They were particularly outstanding in the final period pressuring White, who managed to come up with a number of unbelievable stops. Belleville held a 34-25 shots on goal advantage.

John Mulvihill gave the only consistent Ellis performance throughout the night and was the mainstay of the defensive corps.

Belleville's fire-engine finish, in which the team completely reversed its form of the first two periods, could very well carry over into Sunday's afternoon contest in Peterborough. Despite being unable to catch the Don Byes for third place a win would help maintain momentum for the upcoming playoffs.

A bus will leave the Memorial Arena at 12 noon Sunday with space available for interested spectators.

Hawks Claw Cougars 6-3

TRENTON (Special) — Cobourg Cougars were only on an even footing for 30 seconds last night, as they absorbed a 6-3 "nothing game" loss at the hands of the Trenton Golden Hawks.

The Hawks, who along with the Cougars are out of the Eastern Ontario Junior B League playoff running, led 2-0 after the first period, and 3-2 after the second before the Cougars tied the game early in the final frame.

But Jim Steenburg's second goal of the night 30 seconds later put Trenton ahead to stay.

Al Fenton, Mike Kelly and Gary Hart replied for the Cougars.

Each team drew ten penalties.

Loosening Up

Frazier Fight Odds No News-- Ellis Used to Being Underdog

NEW YORK (CP) — Fight managers are famous for such phrases as "Kill the body and the head dies," or "You're not a fighter until you get off the floor."

But if you were looking for one to cover Jimmy Ellis, it would be the one that says: "With heavyweights, anyone has a chance."

When Ellis climbs into the ring in Madison Square Garden Monday night to face Joe Frazier of Philadelphia for the undisputed heavyweight boxing championship of the world, he will be a decided 6-to-1 underdog. And few, except Ellis himself and his manager, Angelo Dundee, give the Louisville, Ky., boxer-puncher much of a chance.

"Odds mean nothing to me," said Ellis. "I'm a fighter, not a gambler.

"The odds were against me against Martin, Bonavena and Quarry and I won them all and I expect to win this one."

Ellis won the World Boxing Association version of the world title by knocking out Leotis Martin and scoring decisions over Oscar Bonavena and Jerry Quarry in an eight-man elimination tournament.

Frazier turned down an offer to compete in the WBA tournament and won his six-state, Mexico and Argentina version of the championship by knocking out Buster Mathis in the Garden.

The title was ruled vacant in most parts of the boxing world when champion Cassius Clay was defrocked for refusing induction into the U.S. armed services.

Clay, who prefers to be called Muhammad Ali, is still recognized as champion by some, including Ring magazine, pending his appeal of a five-year sentence on the charge. But he says he will not fight again and will hand over his championship belt to the winner of Monday night's fight.

Ellis's main complaint is that he is not getting the acclamation he deserves from New York sportswriters.

"I'm going to beat Frazier to make you guys know who I am," he told them.

The fiery little Dundee has no doubt about the outcome of the fight.

"Frazier has never fought a rough and tough guy like Ellis—the complete fighter," Dundee said. "Ellis knows Joe will come barrelling out and he will base his own style on that."

Frazier has replied acidly to suggestions Ellis will outbox him.

"Maybe he'll louse you up," one writer suggested to Frazier.

"Louse me up?" said Joe. I don't think so. Not even for a few rounds."

The suggestion was also put to Yank Durham, Frazier's manager.

"Suppose," a writer asked, "he boxes Joe."

"Let's not kid each other. Joe can fight only one way."

"Joe can box and if he has to box, he will," Durham said. "But what's the point. He goes after a guy and destroys him, so why make him box."

"I have no idea what he plans to do," Frazier said. "But he'll have to do something to keep me away from him.

"I'll be so close to him that after they pick him up they'll have to start picking the hairs from my beard out of his chest."

Dundee promises that if Frazier does not come out fighting, in his customary style, Ellis will take the offensive.

"If it goes 15 rounds—an unexpected happening—Ellis will win the decision. If it ends in a knockout, it will be by Ellis."

"He has the punch all right," continued Dundee. "You want to remember he floored Clay during a workout when Cassius was training in Toronto for Chuvalo.

Betsy Keeps Slalom Canadian

VAL GARDENA, Italy (AP) — Betsy Clifford of Ottawa kept the giant slalom a Canadian specialty today by winning at the event and the gold medal at the world Alpine ski championships.

Betsy, 16-year-old student, rebounded from a next-to-last place in the downhill event because of a fall.

She skied nimbly through 48 gates along a 1,200-metre course today to give Canada its only gold medal of the championships with a time of one minute 20.46 seconds.

Michele Jacot of France finished fourth today to win the combined standings for women.

By winning today's event, Miss Clifford joined the ranks of fellow-Canadian greats Nancy Greene and Anne Heggtveit, who won Olympic and world championships in the slalom.

French skiers dominated the standings behind Betsy.

Francoise Macchi, also of France, was third in 1:20.60 and Miss Jacot fourth in 1:20.62.

Francoise Steurer of France, although clocking only 1:21.30 in the race, finished strongly enough to hold on to second place in the combined standings.

Sport Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — Frank Clair and Red O'Quinn, who now are Eastern Football Conference rivals after working together to build Ottawa Rough Riders into a Canadian Football League powerhouse, Friday exchanged verbal pot shots. After the Rough Riders rolled to their second straight Grey Cup triumph last November, O'Quinn left his general manager's post to take a similar position with Montreal Alouettes and Clair switched from coach to manager at Ottawa. A feud between Clair and O'Quinn developed as the CFL Friday closed out its annual meeting. Clair, who won five Grey Cup titles as a coach, said he was tired of remarks originating from the Montreal camp that O'Quinn was the brains behind Ottawa's success. "O'Quinn might take credit for signing boys like Margene Adkins, Vic Washington and Bo Scott," Clair said, "but I found them." "That stuff is pure stuff," O'Quinn snapped. "Clair has never found anybody. Kelley Mote found Washington. I dug up Adkins with Ken Shipp's help and Bill Smyth came up with Scott."

Horses he saddled in more than 40 years in the sports earned more than $15,000,000. Once he claimed a non-winner named Stymie for $1,500. Stymie went on to win $914,485.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Morrisburg Combines, representing Canada, blanked a weary Swiss team 4-0 Friday night in the first round of the Kennedy International Memorial Hockey Tournament here. A flight delay in Zurich, which forced the Swiss team to arrive a day late minus many hours of sleep, took its toll. Although they outshot the Canadians 40-35, defenders foiled every attempt.

Seals Upset Rangers

Flyers Play Better For TV Crowd: Stasiuk

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Television improves the fortunes of hockey and at the same time the ratings of hockey on television are going up, according to two National Hockey League sources.

Coach Vic Stasiuk says his Philadelphia Flyers play better when they know they are being watched by a nationwide television audience and league vice-president Don Ruck says ratings for the NHL Game of the Week Sunday afternoons are up almost 50 per cent over last year.

Stasiuk and the Flyers are in Toronto to meet the Maple Leafs tonight in one of five scheduled games. Elsewhere, Detroit Red Wings visit Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins are in Pittsburgh against the Penguins, Chicago Black Hawks visit Minnesota North Stars and Los Angeles Kings meet the Blues in St. Louis.

In Friday night's only game, Oakland Seals upset the East Division - leading New York Rangers 4-2.

Stasiuk said he came to his conclusion on the effect of television coverage when his team compiled a 2-0 win over St. Louis Blues and a 5-2 victory over Detroit Red Wings in recent Sunday afternoon televised games.

"And the first time we were in Toronto, I conned the guys into thinking it was coast-to-coast," Stasiuk said.

"I thought it was too, but it turned out it wasn't. I'd been telling Joe Watson that the kind of letter he'd be getting from his wife out in Kamloops would depend on the way he looked on television.

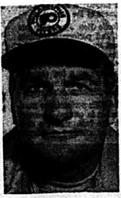
"Anyway, we won 4-3."

Stasiuk's theory won't help him this weekend however. The Saturday night Toronto game will be on the CBC's eastern network only with the Montreal game going to the rest of the country.

The Canadiens get further exposure Sunday when the Game of the Week features Montreal at New York.

In New York, Ruck said that the first three nationally-televised Sunday games of 1970 had an average Neilson rating of 6.8 compared to 4.8 in 1969.

"We had an 8.9 rating, the highest we've ever had, on January 11th when the Rangers were at Montreal. And we have another natural coming up this Sunday."



VIC STASIUK

The Rangers, idle tonight, face the prospect of having to give up a share of the lead to Boston if the Bruins beat Pittsburgh. And if the hard-charging Canadiens react to television audiences like Stasiuk's Flyers, the New Yorkers could lose their lead completely Sunday.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead Friday night at Oakland on a second-period goal by Dave Balon, but Dick Mattiussi came back to tie it with his fourth of the season early in the final session.

Orland Kurtenbach's second of the season put the Rangers back into a brief lead a minute later but Oakland stormed back with goals by Harry Howell, Mike Laughton and Earl Ingarfield for only the Seals second victory over New York in nearly three seasons of play.

Goalie Gary Smith had a big night, stopping 33 Ranger shots, while Ed Giacomin suffered the loss despite facing only 18 Oakland drives.

A crowd of 8,395 turned out to see the Seals earn their 16th season win to move to within two points of third-place Pittsburgh in the West Division.

"WE'RE LOOKING FOR PEOPLE WHO WANT TO BREAK INTO RADIO & TV!"
says LARRY HENDERSON

"If you've ever thought about a career in radio or TV, here's exciting news!"

The Broadcasting industry urgently needs trained men and women. To meet this growing demand, 11 of North America's most famous broadcasters, including Larry Henderson and Danny Gallivan, are searching for people who can be trained to be Disc Jockeys, Announcers, Newsmen, Sportscasters and other key radio-TV personalities!

"If you have the basic potential," says Mr. Henderson, "you'll learn quickly, easily and enjoyably — in as little as 4 months — in our modern, fully-equipped broadcast studio or at home, in your spare time."

Find out if the life of a Broadcaster is for you! Write or call today for your free copy of our colourful 36-page brochure, record and voice analysis details.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

LITTER INDEX DOWN

NEW YORK (AP) — For the first time since it was established, the National Litter Index issued annually by Keep America Beautiful, Inc. has dropped below 100. The national anti-litter organization reported that its 1969 index stands at 98.26, far below last year's 101.82. The index is based on cost of litter removal from along the country's highways relative to miles travelled by motor vehicles.

Administrator Outlines Work Done At Mentally Retarded Assoc. Meeting

NAPANEE — A new film obtained from the National Film Board was shown at the February meeting of the Lennox and Addington Association for the Mentally Retarded held in the workshop last week. It contrasted the lives of two mongoloid boys, Danny and Nick, of approximately the same age, one brought up in an institution, and the other living at home and going to a school for the mentally retarded. The film will be shown on television in March, president Frits Jukiussen had been informed.

Bill Pollard, administrator of the local Adult Rehabilitation Centre Industries where those over 18 are employed, showed slides illustrating work being done by the trainees now. Some of them are becoming expert at finishing and upholstering furniture, a project which was resumed after Christmas.

Mrs. Martin, principal of the Morven School for the Retarded, also gave some idea of the work being done in her school.

While the program had been planned with young people in mind, to show various ways in which the retarded are being trained, the meeting had some disappointing features, chiefly because it had failed to bring out many young people. The local association is trying hard to form a youth group here, such as the one which is doing good work in Picton. So far it has had little or no success. Members of the present association are all adults, and the feeling is that young people, nearer the age of those in the school and the workshop, could accomplish things which the adults cannot accomplish. The association feels that if it can interest even half a dozen 'teenagers, they will find the work so interesting that they will attract others.

Weather may have been a factor in keeping some at home. A group of students from Loyalist College also attended.

Deseronto Men Sponsor Annual 'Shrove Tuesday' Pancake Supper

DESERONTO — Stormy though it was, people flocked to the United Church Tuesday night to eat their fill at the 'third annual "Shrove Tuesday" men's pancake supper. Under the chairmanship of George Lyons, the men have grown more proficient each year, and this year's event was voted the best ever.

The men did the planning, set up the tables, did the cooking, serving, and most of the cleaning up. They did allow the women to put on the last touches in the kitchen, and allowed them to bring scalloped potatoes, jellied salads and pie for the few who could not eat pancakes.

Other churches were well represented. Rev. Cyril Netts from the Tyendinaga Reservation, brought his wife and family, and brother Theodore Talboom was there with others from St. Vincent de Paul Roman Catholic Church. Perhaps the sausage and pancakes were exceptionally good because the Rev. "Bill" Hendry, minister of the church, fried the one and the Rev. John Neal of St. Mark's Anglican Church fried the other.

Among others who pitched in as they saw they could help, were Mike Powell and Mr. Hartley, both of Toronto, representing the wholesale grocery company which had supplied the materials.

Trudeau's Attitude on Arctic Denounced as Mealy-mouthed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's attitude on Arctic sovereignty was called "mealy-mouthed" Friday as the Commons opposition held up an oil and gas bill, saying its provisions throw ownership of the Arctic into doubt.

The bill would amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act of last June 27 to extend it not only to the Yukon and Northwest Territories but to lands offshore other Canadian coasts.

Bud Orange (L—Northwest Territories), parliamentary secretary to Resources Minister J. J. Greene, said 500,000,000 acres offshore now are under exploration permits.

Mr. Orange said the amendment will allow the federal government to set up pollution and other controls.

However, the bill failed to get second reading as Conservatives argued that it throws into question Arctic sovereignty by setting a 200-metre depth limit.

It was Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin (Peace River) who used the term "mealy-mouthed" in assaulting the government.

The Conservatives battled for:

—A clear statement of sovereignty over the Arctic before debate continues on the bill.

—A clear statement on the state of federal-provincial negotiations on offshore oil rights.

A motion by Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) to have second reading delayed until a sovereignty statement is made was ruled out of order.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Perry Sound-Muskoka) then moved that the bill get second reading in six months—a parliamentary way of killing it.

"Surely our sovereignty doesn't depend on how deep the water goes," Mr. Aiken said, unfurling a marine charts of Arctic waters.

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said it was the opposition that was throwing doubt on Arctic sovereignty.

The government had never done this.

New Democrats opposed the Conservative position and said it is important the bill be passed.

Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said the oil industry anxiously awaits clarification of jurisdiction and regulation.

Mr. Mahoney said a revision of regulations is desirable but conservation of oil and gas resources mightn't be the best aim.

"The momentum of exploration and development must be maintained," Mr. Mahoney said. "Oil demand could very well slacken in 10 or 20 years. It has happened to other industries — coal is an example—and it could happen to petroleum.

"The automobile is a prime target in the campaign against pollution. With this impetus there is every likelihood of a breakthrough in automobile power source that will level off the demand for petroleum in the foreseeable future."

House Defence Committee Abandons Washington Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — An all-party group of MPs has called off a planned visit to Washington designed to smoke out more information about the U.S. position on arctic sovereignty.

One informed source said Friday that word came "from on high" that the government would like to see the visit by the naval affairs subcommittee of the Commons defence committee cancelled.

The subcommittee was to call at Washington on the way back from a trip to Norfolk, Va., that begins Sunday and ends Tuesday.

At Norfolk the group is to be brief by the supreme Allied commander, Atlantic, and other high-ranking NATO officers.

Under its terms of reference, the subcommittee, under chairman Keith Penner (L—Thunder Bay), is studying all matters affecting Canadian maritime defence. Its responsibility includes the Arctic as well as the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

Hence the interest in the U.S. position on arctic sovereignty, particularly as it affects the Northwest Passage. Though it hasn't issued any official statements, the U.S. holds that the passage is an international waterway; most Canadian believe it to be a Canadian waterway.

Canada has not stated a firm, unequivocal position on the subject.

One report is that External Affairs Undersecretary A. E. Ritchie, former Canadian ambassador in Washington, was opposed to the subcommittee's idea of a side trip to the U.S. capital.

One committee source insisted that the turnabout had nothing to do with outside pressure, but resulted purely from a "consensus" within the committee.

Government objections to the visit were reported based on two major points: That the MPs might succumb to a "snow job" from state department officials who had been lined up to brief them; and that they might make public statements afterward that would have the effect of further complicating an already delicate issue in Canada-U.S. relations.

Another factor that could have had a bearing on the decision was a reported suspicion on the part of a special Commons committee on arctic sovereignty that the defence subcommittee was invading its jurisdiction.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Life Can Be Fun Even If Over 40

There is a generation gap in individuals as well as between individuals. For example, Mr. J., whom I mentioned here recently, revealed that at the age of 40 he'd rather die than have to live to be 60.

He couldn't envision overcoming that gap of 20 years. I have received many letters of disagreement with Mr. J.'s philosophy. For example:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I would like to share with Mr. J., who doesn't want to grow old, a saying I once heard: "Enjoy your old age — it is a privilege denied many." My dad, the father of five children, died last month. He was 39. Thank you. — Miss H.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Your recent column signed by Mr. J. made me smile. He is afraid of aging and is only 40 years old. I am 71, work every day eight full hours — play 18 holes of golf twice a week — dance, play bridge, swim, operate a typewriter at a speed equal to any efficient stenographer. Once a week I take a steam bath and massage and enjoy it all as much as when I was 40. I think that with Mr. J., it is all in the mind. — Mr. B.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: The letter from the 40-year-old who wants "to die" before 60 prompts me to write a reply.

Eight years ago, at 71, my mother was widowed. She lived in a subdivision far from stores. So against everyone's advice, she learned to drive, and she drives well in her snappy little compact car.

At 72, she bought a typewriter and from a manual taught herself to type.

At 75 she started on a book which has been published recently.

At 77 she re-entered college and enrolled in an art course. Her professor says she is one of his most talented students.

She entertains constantly, and her little luncheons, which she cooks herself, are celebrated, as are her flower arrangements. In her late 60s she earned credits to be a flower judge.

At 79 her life is dedicated to good works, calling on the lonely, elderly and those confined to their homes. She enters with a gift nearly always made with her own hands.

She says no day is long enough for her to complete all her plans. Soon to be 80, this charmer plans a six-week tour of Eruopean capitals this summer. Life can be rewarding at 70, 80 or 90! — Mrs. M.

Comment: After a while people are not impressed by the aged "greats": Michelangelo, Paderewski, George Bernard Shaw, etc. — all having produced and lived to the full. I think that these letters about "little" people will have greater impact upon our Mr. J., and others who fear old age. If old age is a disease, then all of us should strive to catch it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a friend in need, who is too frightened to write and believes no one else's opinion. For this poor soul's peace of mind will you reply if it is possible for a woman in her mid-50s to become pregnant? She has never had any hint of a menstrual cycle in almost five years. — Mrs. E.

Comment: I suspect that other readers tire of repeated questions similar to yours, Mrs. E., but I shall continue to answer at intervals because this is so much on the minds of so many women.

As I have said in the past (and as I shall keep repeating at times) the chances are nil. If you ask me to say "positively not" I shall have to hedge by saying "probably not" — simply because, in medicine, two and two do not always add up to four. But I think it's time your friend regained her peace of mind.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 15

Your birthday today: Your main asset in the scattered conditions is your gift for organization, putting actions and people together for effective operation. Your earnings should improve, but there'll be no windfall money. Be prepared to move into newly opening jobs requiring higher skills.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be present and prominent in your community's Sunday. Get acquainted with newcomers. Old friends will pick your plans and comments to pieces, for lack of any greater sport. Patience!

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Wishful thinking comes in strong and could be mistaken for intuition. You attract people who have no particular plans and much time to kill. Check on your insurance coverage, budgets.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Tact and personal charm are your strongest assets today. Some friends make extreme comments on the issues of your community, perhaps surprising you with their vehemence. Close out a sociable evening somewhat early.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Without deliberately trying, you naturally appeal to those around you today.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Take along agreeable companions and enjoy making the rounds of your community. Ceremonial observances tend to be significant beyond the usual now. Plan for a light sociable evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): If your schemes run counter to political or economic realities, you meet resistance or limitations today. Rechannel your restless mood into serious thought rather than reckless behavior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): If there is something around the home that needs doing and is beyond your own strenth, draft visiting friends to help you get it done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Choose the positive course; take everything that comes to you as something of constructive possibilities. Keep your social and community connections alive. Find a small party this evening, or give one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Give some thought to what you are asking of other people, and be more intelligent about making requests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This Sunday you are more sensitive than usual to how sharp the sights and smells of your environment can be. Be modest; any showing off on your part is deeply resented today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your original ideas should begin taking hold. Keep working at them; make use of the weekend to get at people you do not see during the week. A good explanation may gain you a real backer.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Subconscious perception leads you well today. Dress your best. Avoid being out of step with the surroundings where you have chosen to be.

For February 16

Your birthday today: Tact and good judgment must be further developed to make the best use of the coming year's many expansive opportunities. Material interests demand more attention. If you are not primarily a materialist, this could be a time in which you achieve enough to make other years much less burdensome.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Move for improved working conditions, fringe benefits, or a raise if you've earned one. Give special attention to contracts, agreements, leases, and other legal details. Your mail should bring good news.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Collect items that are owing or due to be paid to you. Purchasing activity is quite lucky. Ask a favor where you are sure you need it.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Strike a happy medium today, being neither very cautious nor reckless. Bring your work or business situation into balance.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Start bright and early, make financial changes, rearrange and reschedule your work load to take into account new information. A quiet evening with a few old friends can bring some inspiring ideas.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): It is imperative now to clear up current and incomplete tasks, close lagging deals. Strengthen or renew a long-standing business connection. New agents, employees are favored. If you are between jobs, this is a good time to seek one.

Friday the Thirteenth Budget

Alberta Abandons Its Pay-as-you-go Policy

EDMONTON (CP) — Superstitution and a crying baby didn't faze Alberta Provincial Treasurer A. O. Aalborg as he introduced the first billion-dollar budget in the province's history on Friday the 13th.

Mr. Aalborg called for record spending of $1,146,012,185 during 1970-71 and estimated revenues at $1,033,168,276.

While no new or increased taxes were announced, Alberta abandoned its long-standing pay-as-you-go policy. He said the province would borrow about $100,000,000 to cover the estimated $112,844,009 deficit with the balance being withdrawn from the $550,000,000 reserve fund.

While Mr. Aalborg spoke—it took 68 minutes—a baby started to cry in the legislature's public gallery. He stopped to comment the noise did not come from the members' gallery.

"No, it's just a taxpayer," interjected an opposition member.

The province will increase expenditures on education by $81,734,000 over the current fiscal year. Total education spending next year will be $404,650,366, or 35 per cent of the total budget.

There will be some relief for property taxpayers through elimination of the province-wide, four-mill levy for hospital insurance. But on the other side of the coin, the province intends to combine hospital and medical care insurance under one increased premium.

Details of the new premium rate have not been announced. Premiums under the current plan are $60 a year for a single person and $120 a year for families.

Mr. Aalborg was enthusiastic about the province's buoyant economy, estimating that revenue from provincial income tax during 1970-71 will be $222,500,000, an increase of $50,000,000.

There will also be large increases in financial assistance to municipalities and an additional $42,000,000 will be pumped into the school foundation program.

The province intends to spend more on housing with $40,000,000 allocated the Alberta Housing Corp., including $21,000,000 for land assembly.

Friday the Thirteenth Was His Lucky Day

NEW YORK (AP) — Friday the 13th was William Lowden's lucky day — he cashed a $13,500 cheque given him by eccentric heir Michael J. Brody.

"With amounts of this size, we always do a routine verification," said Robert W. Schultz, bank manager.

"The cheque was good."

Lowden had been trying to cash the cheque since Brody gave it to him Jan. 30. Brody drew widespread attention with promises to give away millions. Lowden, a health inspector and part-time waiter, said he told Brody he needed the money to pay off a mortgage.

Smoke Rolls Over Chedibucto

Boats and Helicopters Join In Coastal Oil-burning Hunt

ARICHAT, N.S. (CP) — Crews of men in boats and helicopters were to traverse Chedibucto Bay on the east coast of Nova Scotia today burning up patches of bunker oil which leaked from the wrecked Liberian tanker Arrow.

They will burn oil when possible or use a chemical dispersant to break up the patches, some of which were caught in coves and tidal pools along the rocky shoreline.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson, who visited the area Friday, said controlled leakage and burning was the best way to get rid of th. oil.

"It's a slow process but clearly, in my opinion, the most prudent course to follow."

The burning started Friday and clouds of thick black smoke rolled out over the bay.

About 1,500,000 gallons of oil has leaked from the 11,379-ton Arrow since she ran aground on Cerberus rock 11 days ago with 3,800,000 gallons aboard.

The tanker, owned by Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis through Sunstone Marine Ltd. in Panama, split in two. The stern section slipped from the rock Thursday, plunging into 70-feet of water.

The bow section, only its mast showing above water, has settled onto the rock. Oil in both sections is being held in the tops of the tanks by water entering through holes in the hull.

Patches of oil, turned viscous by the cold water, now covers sections of the north shore from Janvrin Island to Petit-de-Grat; about 15 miles along the Nova Scotia mainland near the entrance to Canso strait and 11 miles on the south shore west of Canso.

Mr. Jamieson told a news conference that Canada will impose tougher standards on the condition of ships entering its ports. He said changes would be embodied in the Canada Shipping Act or in a separate bill to make it difficult for vessels not meeting the standards to enter port.

The minister said a formal inquiry into the accident would be held later, and he would not be surprised if it showed there was an "inadequacy" in the Arrow's navigational aids.

The tanker drove on the rock during a storm packing high seas and 70 mile-an-hour winds. A pilot was unable to get to the ship because of the weather.

Navigational aids in the bay were sufficient at the moment but additional equipment would be installed before super tankers start using a Gulf Canada Ltd. refinery at nearby Point Tupper in August.

Mr. Jamieson said under current regulations a ship can call for a pilot if it wants or proceed without one. Changes would be made so that a ship would have to "stand off until we tell them it is okay to come in."

He said the government feels the responsibility for damage in the bay belongs to the ship's owners and Imperial Oil Ltd., the owners of her cargo. However there were legalities involved.

The minister made a helicopter tour of the bay before leaving for St. John's, Nfld.

Tanker's Captain Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — The captain of a Liberian tanker was fined $5,000 in provincial court in suburban Port Noody Thursday for polluting the waters of Upper Burrard inlet with oil.

Prosecutor Brian Corbould said the fine is the largest levied in this area in a pollution case and he believed it to be the largest levied in Canada.

The fine, which carried a default of six months in jail, was levied by Judge J. K. Shaw against Captain F. A. Loukatos of the 15,000-ton tanker Sincerity.

The charge was laid Jan. 27 by the department of transport after the ship spilled oil from bilges while unloading a cargo at a Gulf Oil Co. Refinery.

Belgians Facing Showdown

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The Belgian cabinet meets today in what may be its last chance to settle the country's long-standing language quarrel.

Premier Gaston Eyskens, who heads a coalition of his Social Christian party and Socialists, successfully avoided direct involvement in the problem for several months.

But a special working group set up to decide on future relations between the Dutch-speaking Flemings and French-speaking Walloons was unable to settle two basic issues.

These are the status of Brussels, the bilingual capital city, and the means of safeguarding the Walloons, who are a minority, from being outvoted in the legislature.

These are the issues the government must tackle at its special meeting today—its third session devoted to the linguistic problem in 10 days.

The Eyskens government came to office amid pledges that it would finally settle the Fleming - versus - Walloons — squabble which has dominated Belgian political life for 15 years. But like many of its predecessors, the government could be brought down by what the Belgians call "the community problem."

The working group agreed on the broad lines of economic, cultural and administrative decentralization to be granted to the two communities, but left unsettled the key issues—Brussels and constitutional safeguards for the Walloons.

Dairy farms seem to be slowly disappearing in Sidney Township. This cow, in the barn of Douglas Harry, seems to be ruminating about her future.

Sidney Now Faces Rapid Loss of Rural Image

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

Editor's note: Predominantly agricultural, Sidney township is about to shed its rural coat as it quickly takes on the appearance of an urban area. In a five - part series, staff reporter Ted Forder looks at what the future holds in store for Ontario's oldest township.

The corporation of the township of Sidney in the county of Hastings, the oldest organized township in the province of Ontario, covers an area of 120 square miles—about 9½ miles wide from east to west and 12½ miles long from south to north.

It fronts the Bay of Quinte on the south; is bounded on the west by Trenton and the township of Murray; on the north by the township of Rawdon and Stirling; and on the east by Thurlow and Belleville.

Named after the colonial secretary under George III, Sidney was surveyed in 1787 and numbered eight among the first townships laid out upon the Bay of Quinte.

Reference to Sidney Township as the oldest organized township is made in the minute book of 1919. A letter was received from the secretary of the publications board in Ottawa asking the Council to lend its first minute book of "the oldest organized Township in Ontario" to the public archives.

The affairs of the township are governed by a council of five elected members. Entering their second year in office are Reeve Jack M. Bush; Deputy Reeve Gordon P. Wilman; Councillors Arthur J. Carleton, Reginald A. McCurdy, and F. Glenn Meyers.

Reeve Bush was first elected to council in 1959. He served six years as a councillor, four years as deputy reeve and was elected to the office of reeve in 1969.

Clerk is J. B. Harder who served as a councillor from 1949 until 1953 when he was elected deputy reeve. Mr. Harder served for three years in that office until he became reeve for a term of three years beginning in 1958. After a year's absence from council, he was appointed the clerk of Sidney in 1960.

Meetings of the council are held once a month in the Sidney Township Centennial Hall.

The Township offices were first used for meetings of the Council Sept. 23, 1966. The building was officially opened June 17, 1967.

Much of the area is still agricultural as it has been since its beginning 183 years ago although the effects of urban, industrial and commercial growth can be seen throughout the township.

Reeve Jack Bush speaks with pride when talking about the state of the township today. He says it is in a sound financial position due to long range planning which began as early as 1962. "We have always prepaid enough county rate to keep the rate down by about one - half mill for each taxpayer. This has been due, in large part, to the prepayment program which the township offers to its taxpayers," he said.

Mr. Bush added "for many years we have levied for a working capital surplus which has enabled us to purchase equipment without going into debt. This has saved large amounts of interest payments which, of course, have been passed on to the taxpayers."

For the future Reeve Bush said: "Because we are located between Belleville on the east and Trenton on the west, growth is bound to come, particularly in the area south of Highway 401 to the frontage on the Bay of Quinte. Sidney, probably more than any other surrounding township, will be affected by this

Robarts to Propose Tighter Credit Curbs

Inflation Said Ottawa's Fault

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal policies on inflation, pollution and taxation were denounced today by Quebec's premier, attacking Ottawa as general elections approach in Quebec province.

In a bristly brief tabled at the federal-provincial conference, Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said the federal government must accept the major part of the blame for inflation.

He rejected as unacceptable proposed federal legislation that would launch a national anti-pollution program, saying the provinces have exclusive jurisdiction over conservation of water.

And Mr. Bertrand repeated Quebec's request for $200,000,000 collected in Quebec province by the federal government since Jan. 1, 1969, under what he described as "the notorious social development tax."

The premier said Ottawa must shoulder blame for inflation because of bad monetary and budgetary policy and because of "the costly projects to which it has committed itself and forced the provinces to enter."

He argued that Ottawa's anti-inflation policy is slowing down Quebec's economy, increasing unemployment and "Quebec cannot accept to fight against inflation at the cost of increased unemployment."

Proposed by Quebec is a new transfer payment linked to the anti-inflation campaign so as to compensate unemployment - prone eastern provinces for negative effects of the fight against inflation.

Mr. Bertrand attacked the social development tax as "an unjust and ill-timed fiscal measure," which he said had "drained" $200,000,000 out of Quebec to finance medical care insurance in other provinces.

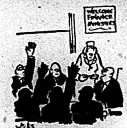
The premier said that since medical care insurance will not be applied by the province until July 1, Quebecers have had their purchasing power cut by $200,000,000 with "no compensation whatever."

"Either we obtain from the federal government the money it has colleted improperly since 1969 or we levy new taxes which the federal government could rebate from its reserves."

He said the federal government is forecasting big surpluses "at our expense," saying the surplus "will include an amount of $200,000,000 which ought not to be there."

Mr. Bertrand added:

"This $200,000,000 portion . . . must come back to us, in one way or another. The federal government must render unto Quebec the things that are Quebec's and ought never to have left Quebec."



'Okay. That's 7-8-9... One coffee and nine straws!'

Rasminsky To Outline Bank View

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's anti-inflation drive faces a major test today when Prime Minister Trudeau asks the 10 provincial premiers for their explicit support.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, is to join the closed conference, along with Dr. John Young, head of the prices and incomes commission which last week won the support of industry leaders for price restraint.

Mr. Rasminsky will give the conference the bank's latest assessment of the economic situation, probably noting as well the efforts being made by the United States to control inflation there.

Some provincial premiers said in pre-conference statements they believe local problems of rising unemployment are more urgent than the national problem of stemming inflation. The Atlantic provinces, Eastern Quebec, and most of the Prairies are already feeling the pinch.

Ottawa is asking the provinces to restrain their own government spending and that of the municipalities, and put a damper on rent increases, higher professional fees, and other prices and costs coming within their jurisdiction.

With private industry and all governments committed to such restraints, Dr. Young's prices commission could then re-open its plea to the central labor bodies for wage restraint.

Denies Ontario Fires Inflation

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier John Robarts said today the Ontario government will propose tighter controls on consumer credit, including restrictions on credit cards, to the federal-provincial conference on inflation.

"If we could slow down these buy-now, pay-next-April plans we would be doing a lot," he told reporters. "There has been little real effort in that area."

Mr. Robarts said he rejected the views of the federal government and some other premiers that Ontario's over-heated economy is responsible for inflation in Canada.

He said he hears "a lot of jazz about Ontario's budget" and pressure to force the province to balance it in 1970-71.

"We balanced our budget last year," he said. "Wouldn't that indicate that we probably will try to do the same this year in any event?"

He said he hopes the government leaders can reach agreement "on some things we can do to contain and restrain inflation."

But he believes Ontario can demonstrate it does not bear the major responsibility for inflation.

"The federal government takes out of Ontario $1,500,000,000 more each year than it puts in," he said. "I would suggest that has inflationary tendencies."

Mr. Robarts, as chillingly cold as the ice figures that decorate the front of the Chateau Laurier Hotel, swept through the hotel lobby Sunday evening without a word after his arrival by provincial government plane.

An aide said he had gone into immediate conference with the top-flight fiscal and economic experts who will accompany him to the conference room today.

Ottawa reports Friday said federal officials see Ontario as the main problem in inflation, and one was quoted as saying unemployment in the province still has not reached a high enough level.

The Ottawa reports said the federal government will ask the 10 premiers to agree to tight curbs on federal, provincial and municipal government spending; a tougher attitude in wage negotiations; support of price restraints accepted by business and professional leaders; stiffer controls on health and education spending; an appeal to labor to support anti-inflation measures; and possibly restrictions on rents, mortgage interest and consumer credit.

Mr. Robarts already has indicated his government's position on most of the points.

He told a news conference last week that Ontario is ready to co-operate even to the point of wartime controls "if inflation is a national emergency," but he wondered if such an emergency exists now.

In any case, he asked, how can rents and mortgage rates be restricted if there are no controls on wages.

The creation of unemployment to fight inflation is "1930s economic theory," neither practical nor acceptable in 1970.

Ontario will support voluntary price restraints but the premier warned Ottawa against "tinkering" with the provincial economy which he described as the backbone of Canadian prosperity.

He indicated that the province will agree to apply pressure to businessmen who depart from voluntary price restraints, and would consider withholding government contracts from recalcitrants.

The provincial government already has begun to control health and education spending and has sought federal co-operation in limiting spending under shared-cost programs in these fields.

Nigerian Police Refuse To Release Missionaries

LAGOS (AP) — Police in Port Harcourt are reported holding 29 Roman Catholic missionaries who worked in Biafra. They have paid their fines, and the army wants to deport them, but the police won't let them go, informed sources say.

Twenty Irish priests, including Bishop Joseph Whelan of Owerri, eight Irish nuns and an American nun were convicted Thursday of illegal entry and working without permits. They paid $6,500 in fines with funds gathered by Catholic authorities in Lagos.

However, they were not released. Two priests who had gone to their aid were detained with them.

Thirty-two other Catholic missionaries were convicted on the same charges in Port Harcourt last month but were quickly deported after paying fines.

TV Financed Haiti Invasion Is Claim

LONDON (Reuters) — The Daily Telegraph says a United States television network financed a commando invasion of Haiti.

The report was contained in a Washington dispatch that says a secret congressional report on deceptive news-gathering is to be published next month.

The report also quotes sources which The Telegraph does not name as saying magazine groups obtained exclusive right to James Earl Ray's story by paying him to plead guilty in court to the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. so he did not have to give evidence.

Another allegation is that magazines gave considerable support to District Attorney Jim Garrison, of New Orleans who campaigned vigorously to disprove the Warren commission report on President Kennedy's assassination.

The Telegraph does not say its allegations were taken from the congressional report, which it says contains accounts of events news organizations allegedly staged or financed themselves to obtain an early or exclusive account.

The Telegraph quotes James Kelly, a congressional investigator, as saying that the Columbia Broadcasting System television network allegedly paid $200,000 to Haitian exiles whose invasion plan included an attempt on the life of President Francois Duvalier.

The Washington dispatch says Kelly apparently found evidence that the network paid gun-runners supplying the exile army for exclusive film footage of illegal arms traffic.

There were reports, the paper says, that a perversion of justice may have resulted from an organization's anxiety to preserve its exclusive material in the case of Ray.

The paper reports that news media, chiefly a large magazine group, underwrote Ray's defence costs in return for his story.

Quoting Washington sources, the paper says a magazine which helped Garrison—including supplying him with trained investigators—got in return exclusive access to his files and the use of a two-way mirror through which the magazine photographed and eavesdropped on witnesses.

(In Rome, the daily newspaper Il Messaggero also carries allegations similar to those in The Daily Telegraph. Il Messaggero says its New York office has a copy of the congressional report, but does not quote from it.)

Area Growth Recognized

Industrial Commissioner Urged to Assist Townships

By HARRY MULHALL
(Staff Reporter)

Efforts to attract industry to the Belleville area have received a significant boost — to the benefit of the city's municipal neighbors.

Townships in the city's orbit may now take advantage of Belleville Industrial Commission services.

BIC directors have approved a resolution that Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown devote any required effort to encourage industrial settlement in the immediate Belleville area.

The resolution directs Mr. Brown to "expend time and effort as required — and if he sees fit — to aid and encourage industry to locate not only in Belleville but also in the immediate surrounding area."

The sanction officially spells out the propriety of such aid for the first time.

The voluntary move broadens the scope of BIC activities, removing any formal restrictions on its role in area growth.

It also has political significance. The gesture recognizes the need for co-operation among Quinte local governments at a time when expansion is not respecting traditional municipal boundaries.

Such factors already have been stressed by BIC chairman Ald. Gerald Joyce.

His speech to the Feb. 5 CIC annual meeting was a prelude to the formal resolution.

At that time Ald. Joyce stressed that the city and its neighbors must make common cause in promoting economic opportunities.

Prime reason for such a philosophy, the alderman said, was the danger of losing potential industries because of shortage of suitable sites within the city.

Recent industrialization has consumed much prime location acreage in Belleville and there's always the danger a prospect's ideal may not be satisfied with what's available.

(For instance, some industrialists have a preference for locating on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway with its showplace potential).

"I personally feel, and I know, there's not going to be industrial land within the city to satisfy some prospects," said Ald. Joyce today.

Instead of losing an industry to other Ontario centres, the Belleville - area would benefit by extension of BIC activities, making them available, if needed, to municipal neighbors.

"At the same time, Mr. Brown's terms of reference are firstly to locate commerce and industry in the city. But rather than lose such prospects, say to a metropolitan area, he may not be limited to the city limits," said Ald. Joyce.

Meantime, the directors have appointed a committe to act as liaison between city hall and local service industries. The committee will be composed of technical personnel from both sectors.

BIC directors heading the committee are two city businessmen — James Driscoll, chairman and James Marker, vice - chairman.

City Unions Asking for Conciliation

Application for a conciliation officer has been made to the Ontario Department of Labor by Belleville City employees, it was learned this morning.

Local 140 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees representing the inside workers at City Hall, and Local 907, the outside workers branch of the Union, made the application after talks between the city and the unions broke down recently.

Three meetings with the inside workers have resulted in the resolving of most issues except wages. The two sides still remain deadlocked over this issue.

There has not been as much progress with the outside workers however, with most issues still to be resolved.

Demands by the outside workers for an increase from the basic rate of $2.50 per hour to $3.50 per hour are based on a one-year contract while the city is negotiating on a two-year contract basis.

The union is also asking for a full payment of hospital and medical insurance premiums. Currently the city pays two-thirds of this cost and has offered to increase this to three quarters.

At the current wage rate, employees would receive $100 for a 40-hour week. Union demands would increase this to $140.

Negotiations with Local 497 of the Professional Fire Fighters Association are still under way with another meeting scheduled, probably for next week.

All conciliation procedures required by the Ontario Municipal Act must be exhausted by all parties before any strike action can be considered.

Corps Rallies Youth

Folk singers Paul Muldoon and Lynn Shannon lead a sing-song as part of a rally sponsored by the Youth Corps of Nicholson Catholic College. The rally, held Sunday at St. Joseph's Parish Hall, signalled the end of the college's school spirit week.

Nicholson Youth Corps Rally Outlines Role to Student Body

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

There is nothing like a youth rally to bring communication and involvement to the surface.

The students of Nicholson Catholic College found that out Sunday when they held an all-day rally to mark the end of School Spirit week.

More than 150 young people crowded into St. Joseph's Parish Hall for the better part of the afternoon and evening to experience a closer rapport with their peers.

An additional purpose of the venture was to show the students what their Youth Corps is all about.

The corps, which was formed at the College early last fall, is directed towards creating an awareness of social problems and providing an impetus for the students to "get out there and help."

Moderator of the Youth Corps, Sister Anna Moran, termed Sunday's rally as a "real attempt to let the students see first hand the meaning behind this young people's organization.

Beginning Sunday's program was a period of synchronized slides and music, after which discussion groups were formed to articulate what they had seen, while at the same time making collages of their interpretations.

Later in the afternoon, two Lifeline councillors spoke to the group about the importance of communication in every facet of life, particularly in their role of helping others.

The two councillors gave a detailed account of how Lifeline operates in its efforts to listen to the individual who has a problem impossible for him to solve.

As part of the day's program, a folk mass was celebrated, with guitar accompaniment provided by the students.

After a potluck supper, the students participated in a sing - song, led by folk-singer Paul Muldoon and Lynn Shannon.

Sister Anna Moran called the venture a "fantastic success", and a 'most fitting way to end school spirit week at Nicholson."

"Despite all the hard work that went into this effort the students feel it is only the beginning of what the Corps can accomplish, and the young people it can benefit".

Ticket Sales Good For Guild's Lark

With two days left before the opening performance of the Belleville Theatre Guild's latest production, The Lark, 51 per cent of tickets have already been sold, it was announced this morning.

The Lark, the guild's entry in the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival to be held in Ottawa in March, has already been successful in being picked for competition in the festival. It's successful adjudication was announced a week ago.

By Jean Anouilh, the play is a story of Joan of Arc characterized by a plain set constructed from a series of platforms enabling the actors to participate in freedom of movement between the past, the present and the future.

The Lark has no format of time and consists only of flashbacks and futuristic happenings.

This freedom of control enables the play to show its audience Joan's story from two separate angles — as seen through the eyes of history and through the eyes of Joan herself.

Starring as Joan in the play is Wendy Foster. Also in the play are Peter Kitcher, Lee Jourard, Peter Hicks, Flo Yanover and Ernst Kneisel, president of the guild. The cast also features many others.

The Lark will run in Belleville at the Pinnacle Playhouse for 10 performances beginning Wednesday before it adjourns to Ottawa to take its chances with four other plays slated for this year's festival.

Man Breaks Both Legs In Crash

A two-car collision one-half mile west of Ameliasburg Fire Hall on County Road 3 sent three people to Belleville General Hospital Saturday about 7:45 p.m.

Murray Corneal, 39, of RR1, Belleville, remains in the intensive care unit of BGH this morning with fractures of both legs suffered in the accident. Driver of the second car involved, Donald Anderson, 60, of RR1, Carrying Place, was treated at the hospital and released. His wife, Kathleen Anderson, a passenger in the car was released from the hospital Sunday.

The Ameliasburg Fire Department was called to the scene to extinguish a small fire under the hood of the Anderson car. The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police estimated total damage to both cars at $700.

IN MEMORIAM

GREEN — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Margaret Eleanor Green who passed way February 16, 1966

If Mom could have spoken before she died,
These are the words she would have replied,
This life for me has truly past,
I've loved you all to the very last,
Weep not for me, but courage take,
Love each other for my sake,
For all she did her very best,
Till God gave her Eternal Rest.

SMART — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Jean Joyce (Smart) who passed away February 1 1968.

God looked around His garden,
And found an empty place,
He then looked down upon His earth
And saw her tired face,
He put his arms around her
And lifted her to rest,
God's garden must be beautiful,
For He only takes the best.

Sidney Township Facing Changes

The area of the Township of Sidney from the Macdonald-Cartier freeway south to the shores of the Bay of Quinte is faced with major planning decisions over the next few years as the effects of urbanization are being felt.

Finals Wednesday

Student Safety Quiz Continues

Something new in inter-school competition is under way in Hastings and Prince Edward county secondary schools.

Teams of technical students from six schools have been sharpening their wits and their knowledge of industry safety for quizes run off by the Belleville - Trenton section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

Semi-final playoffs will be held tonight at 8 p.m. at Moira Secondary school, with the final section competition scheduled Wednesday at Moira to determine the county winners. The team winning the section competition will go to Toronto to meet teams from across the province and compete for the Ontario championship.

The purpose of the contest is to engender interest in safety for the technical high school students, by involving them in team competition.

During the fall, all students tried a series of written safety tests conducted by their teachers in their schools. From the highest scorers, a team of four students was chosen for each school, with a teacher as coach.

For the last two weeks, the school teams have competed against each other in oral quizzes moderated by Mrs. Kenneth Kerr, general secretary of the Belleville district IAPA.

The quiz sheets and questions for the inter-school team matches were prepared by the Ontario head office of IAPA and are standard throughout the province.

Facing off tonight in the panel quiz at Moira are Moira versus Centre Hastings and Quinte versus Prince Edward Collegiate. The two winners will meet again Wednesday to decide which team will represent Hastings and Prince Edward counties in Toronto.

The accident prevention association has put up cash prizes for competitors to make the contest attractive to participants. The school champions have already won $10 for each team member and coach. Riding on tonight's competition are prizes of $15 each for the winning team and coach.

Wednesday night's winning team will gather in $25 for each of the four participants and their coach.

Members and coach of the Ontario champion team will take $100 each home from the Toronto competition.

A unique feature of the panel quizzes is "practical demonstration" questions, in which the teams are faced with mock - ups of industrial situations and equipment and asked to discuss and demonstrate the safest course of action in each simulated event.

Planning and Services Combine To Produce Prime Problem

growth because it will spread from both sides into the centre."

Expressing his personal opinion, Jack Bush said it was because of this imminent growth that co - operative regional and area planning is so essential today. "Recent recommendations by the planning boards of both Belleville and Trenton to create new planning organizations covering larger areas, are steps in the right direction," he said.

Mr. Bush pointed out that the essential need which must be considered in equal importance to regional planning, is the need for services. The availability of water and sewage services has to be considered and supplied before any growth can take place. He added that recent proposals by the Ontario Water Resources Commission to lay the main lines for sewers and water, and later assess costs on a user basis, "a sound proposal and one which I personally favor very much."

Typical of the farms in Sidney is that of Douglas Harry on the third concession, two miles east of Glen Miller, just north of the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton.

Mr. Harry, a milk farmer, works about 225 acres of land to maintain his herd of 35 milk cows and 35 other cattle. His farm, which has been in the family for over 100 years, was formerly owned and worked by his grandfather. The home farm on which he was raised is just down the road and is still worked by his 73-year-old father.

Hay, barley and corn for grinding into feed are his main crops. He usually devotes from 10 to 12 acres to raising canning factory peas.

To feed his large herd — about 50 per cent grade and 50 per cent purebred holsteins — Doug estimates that it takes about 100 tons of grain, 4,000 bales of hay (about 120 tons), and 30 tons of corn ensilage each year.

Three milking machines are used to produce about 1,200 pounds or 480 quarts of milk each day.

Mr. Harry says the number of milk farms are now comparitively few in number. "Most farmers are getting just plain tired of being tied down to milking cows twice a day, 365 days of the year and, the return on a man's investment is so low it is hardly worthwhile," he said.

He says that, while the price of a quart of milk to the consumer has risen about nine to 10 cents in the last 10 years, farmers have realized an increase of only 2½ cents a quart. He feels the farmer is not receiving his fair share of the Canadian economy.

The amount of land remaining idle each year is on the increase as farmers sell out to move to the urban areas. Some of the homes on these farms are occupied by people who commute to urban centers while others remain unused.

Population in the Township of Sidney in 1969 was 7,290. If you add 310 from nursing homes and Hastings Manor and 3,500 for CFB Trenton, all of which are within the township boundaries, there are 11,100 residents. Earliest recorded figures show a combined population for Sidney and Rawdon townships of 1,506 in the year 1820.

Seven industrial firms employ about 1,315 workers. These firms are engaged in the manufacture of a wide range of products and cover such things as shoes; heavy and light machine shop, shoe and industrial machinery; silo blocks and concrete products; furniture finishing and refinishing; hot asphalt products; concrete mixes; and paper and paper products.

There are 51 retail establishments in Sidney employing 380 people and six motels with a total of 107 rooms.

Federal Government employees including post office, CFB Trenton and Trent Canal System, number 941.

Two transport companies and one moving company are located in Sidney Township.

Recreational facilities include two, 18-hole and one, 9-hole golf course; three ski tows, inumerable snowmobile trails, and swimming, boating and fishing in the Bay of Quinte, Trent Canal and Oak Lake.

Four highways, Nos. 401, 2, 14 and 33 with a combined mileage of 33 miles, run through the township as do both the CNR and CPR railways.

There are 171 miles of township roads. A work force of from five to eight people are employed under the direction of road superintendant Charles Fair to maintain the township roads. Road maintenance equipment has increased from one grader and a bulldozer in 1943 to include three trucks, five snow plowing units, three sanding units ,one overhead loader, a portable rock crushing system, a pickup truck and an equipment maintenance shop.

There are two complete firefighting units, one stationed in Batawa, the other at Lafferty-Smith Transport Company. They are manned by 41 persons of the voluntary fire brigade under the direction of Fire Chief John Aquino.

Sidney Township has its own complete primary and secondary sewage treatment plant located in Batawa. It was built in 1962 and in operation since the fall of that year. The plant services the hamlet of Batawa including the Bata Shoe Co. of Canada and several commercial enterprises. A $10,000 budget was recently approved by the council for operation of the plant in 1970.

Churches in the Township of Sidney have felt the effects of centralization. In the last 2½ years, seven have been closed while seven still remain.

The reeve foresees the need for a recreation complex in the township located in the central southern portion. "This might include a large arena, parks, and outdoor facilities," he said.

In conclusion, Reeve Jack Bush said that many changes will inevitably come to Sidney Township in the next decade. 'It is our responsibility as the elected representatives of the people of the Township to ensure these changes are for the betterment of all concerned."

(Succeeding articles on Sidney Township will deal with, planning and development, education, the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, and the Trent Canal System as they apply to the Township).

YOU'LL BE RICHER IN '71

If you're an average Canadian you will be richer in 1971 than you are now. And there will be about one-third fewer poor people in Canada next year. Are these idle fantasies? No. They are the findings of statistical experts based on the past decade and projected to the upcoming Canadian census in June '71. Cane Cutters!

That was a rare bunch of skiers . . . er sugar cane harvesters . . . er new leftists which assembled in Saint John last week. One group had arrived from Havana in a converted cattle boat (wonder what were conditions like aboard?), while another was en route to Cuba.

Numbering more than 700 in all, they were American nationals calling themselves members of the venceremos brigade — Spanish for "we shall win" — which was organized in the U.S. last year to recruit volunteers to help harvest Cuba's sugar cane crop.

You don't have to be a Communist to want to visit Cuba or even help harvest a bit of sugar, but a leader of the group said it supported the Communist government of Fidel Castro.

"Venceremos," incidentally, is the title of a current book of the writings of Ernesto (Che) Guevara, Fidel Castro's right-hand man during the Cuban revolution and, Communist or not, one of the true heroes of our day. Later, in efforts to spread the ideals of the revolution beyond Cuba's shores, he was to die at the head of a guerrilla group in Bolivia.

It is interesting to observe the CBC's report of this little jaunt. Whether by accident or design one of two members of the group interviewed — a bespectacled and obviously radical young woman — was permitted a longish statement (which she read) emphasizing the group's solidarity with Cuba and with the National Liberation Front (Communist side) in Vietnam, and its admiration for the late Che Guevara.

Now relate this to the Canadian Radio and Television Commission's study leading up to proposals for greater Canadian content (announced last week). The one glaring omission in their report was any reference to the leftist ideological bent of CBC news and documentary programs. Perhaps this was not part of the CRTC's mandate, but it is something which ought to concern the public.

Nor was any concern expressed on the subject of political slant by officials or commentators in the Thursday Night program which substituted discussion on the CRTC proposals in place of a scheduled program on West Germany. Incidentally the news item about the cane cutters came immediately after this program.

As for more Canadian content in entertainment and general programming, in the long run that should be an excellent thing, providing opportunities for creative people and performers at home.

But looking at the efforts of the CBC as a whole, it is time to rid itself of the dangerous ideological bias with which it is trying to brainwash the Canadian public.

County Home

Whatever the altercation between Picton's Dr. Lionel Dockrill and Deputy Reeve Donald Thompson that led to Dr. Dockrill's severance of his link with the Prince Edward County Home, the latter's opinions on the state of the home should be taken seriously.

Dr. Dockrill, physician at the county home since 1962, has described the building as "archaic and a virtual death trap in the event of fire." If anyone should know the state of the county home it is Dr. Dockrill, and his words are all the more significant in view of recent conflagrations in Quebec.

The building, being as old as it is, the very least that must be done is to ensure there is adequate means of escape in the event of fire. Even allowing for that, is it sufficient in view of the age and state of health of the senior citizens living there?

Perhaps it is time to give consideration to a more adequate structure. If none of the required size and suitability is available then Prince Edward must consider the need of a new building. This is 1970 and we cannot forever attempt to fulfill the needs of the elderly in structures that were built for an earlier time.

Israeli Raid

The undeclared war between the Arab countries and Israel has taken another tragic turn with the killing of some 70 Egyptian civilians in an air raid on a steel plant. Officially at least, Israeli policy hitherto has been to attack military targets only, and its protestations that it was an accident will do little to allay the damaging implications of the raid. But then, Egypt and its allies have much to answer for too. It is just another in an ugly series of incidents which if they continue at this level of intensity could push the two sides once again into full-scale war.

Perry Ryan Fears Party Split

PM A 'Pacifist-Socialist' Says Liberal Independent

OTTAWA (CP) — With two months to think things over, one might wonder whether Perry Ryan is really happy sitting there as an independent MP. After nine years of Liberal party fellowship, it can't be easy.

"It's certainly not easy," he says, but as for regretting his decision, "there's just no way."

With the same blunt, straight-forward statements by which he announced his departure from the Liberals, the 52-year-old Toronto Spadina MP now was explaining why he had no intention of returning to the fold.

"I feel the prime minister is a pacifist-socialist," he said, "and I just have a fundamental difference with the way things are being done."

Would a change in leadership be required to bring him back to caucus. "Well, certainly a change in party philosophy, and I'm afraid we won't get that."

When Mr. Ryan quit the Liberals in early December—and it took most people by surprise—he cited the government's foreign affairs policies, and its approach to immigration as the chief reasons. He said the sudden cutback in Canada's NATO forces was unwarranted and unfair to other alliance members, and that efforts to recognize the Chinese Communist regime at the expense of relations with Taiwan represented a sudden change in policy which he could not accept.

There were other reasons too, "such as the pittance we spend on urban problems while millions go into rural development programs."

Far from changing his views in the last two months, the Toronto lawyer says the gap between the government's philosophy and his own has become even more pronounced. And he doesn't think he is the only one to feel this way.

"The Liberal party is in danger of splitting, and splitting badly. I don't think I am the only one by any means."

Is he still a Liberal? "I think so, really. Perhaps I am a right wing Liberal."

But let's assume that Independent MPs were not allowed to sit in the Commons and you had to either resign or join another party. What would you do right now?

The only Independent MP in the Commons pondered for a moment. "I think that if I had to make such a move that I would go to Mr. Stanfield's (the Progressive Conservative) party."

But he quickly added that he had no intention of going anywhere.

And he also said he has no intention of launching any anti-government tirades in the House. "I am not interested in being a one-man band."

So far he has not voted against any government measure, "although I am examining every piece of legislation on its merits.

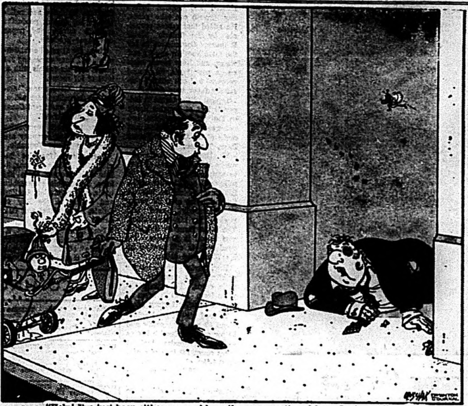
"That's the advantage of being Independent, you can conscientiously assess every bill and support it or oppose it as you see fit. On the other hand, it requires a good deal of time to do this on your own."

"I had felt for some time that the role of the private member on the government side was pathetic—and I feel that more than ever now."

The mail that poured into Mr. Ryan's office after he quit the party ran 30-1 in favor of his decision, he says. "But I think many saw me as a symbol of protest, because many of the subjects mentioned, such as hate-literature and bilingualism, were not involved in my decision."

Mr. Ryan resigned from his committee work when he left the party, but he hopes to get back on the external affairs committee as an Independent.

"I want to continue to play a full role as an MP—it's just the present management I am unhappy about."



"Help! I've just been either mugged by a thug or questioned by a Quebec policeman!"

Unions, Wages, Inflation and Living Costs

Montreal Le Devoir: More and more, unions are taking into account that action limited strictly to negotiation is extremely fragile. This action can be negated, to an extent, by a multitude of other factors to which wage-earners are subjected as members of society, and, in particular, as consumers.

A substantial salary increase can be welcome, but what good does it do if it is quickly followed by a greater increase in the cost of living and increased activity on the part of exploiters of the small wage-earner.

We can therefore only subscribe, generally, to the initiative taken recently by our three main labor groupings—Confederation of National Trade Unions, Quebec Federation of Labor and Quebec Teachers Corporation—in forming an inter-union common front to increase the political interest of workers and to encourage them to play a more influential role in government at all levels. . . .

Faced with the powerful lobbies of big business, wage-earners must be able to make themselves heard with a united and powerful voice. They must obtain the power to participate in both economic and political decisions.

The day the workers learn that it is in their interest to forget petty personal advantage in favor of walking hand-in-hand, they will constitute a pressure group which will be difficult to resist. They will be able to obtain better protection for their savings, for their co-operative action, in the organization of their recreation and for their right of association.

Thus the whole of society can be transformed. The whole of society can . . . be made more humane and more just. . . .

In any case, workers and persons on small incomes are not all wage-earners and there are, among wage-earners, people who are really neither workers nor in low-income groups. Various professionals today are unionized and thus assure themselves of incomes to be envied by the most hidebound "capitalists."

Beside them, on the other hand, are other unionized persons whose earnings are scarcely above the minimum wage and an ever-increasing number of retired persons for whom each increase in salaries of active workers represents a corresponding abasement of purchasing power. . . .

We can speak of a single class, but those who make it up do not necessarily have converging interests. So it requires a conciliation of interests extending from class to class.

Marcel Trudel Changes His Tune

Single History Book for Canada?

Quebec L'Action: One might have believed that the old, very old—and worn-out—notion of drafting a single "Canadian" history book was dead and buried. But no. At the request of the B-B commission, an inquiry into the history books of Canada was conducted and the results have just come out. . . .

One of the best ways to correct the situation, as historians Marcel Trudel and Mrs. Genevieve Jain saw it from the top of their observation tower, was to draft one book on Canadian history for all the young people of the country. . . .

As a diagnosis and as medication, it was pretty simplistic. . . .

Twenty years ago, in August, 1950, one of our historians lashed out at the proponents of the single history text. "First," he said, "the province of Quebec is the only province of Canada, along with French-speaking Acadia, to possess three centuries of history as an organized country. The history of all the other provinces, as organized countries, was much more recent." . . .

"Finally," he concluded, "when our fathers, in drafting the Act of Confederation, gave the provinces their autonomy in the field of education, it was not done so that Canadians . . . could come along some day and make converts to centralization in one of the most delicate branches of education. . . ."

There was no reason why "Quebecers, British Columbians and Newfoundlanders should have the delicious pleasure of studying, all from the same book, a subject without color or flavor, suitable for all but useful to no one."

Who was this learned teacher, this keen observer, this wise counsellor? None other than Marcel Trudel, who today, along with Mrs. Jain, recommends a single history textbook to save the country.

Which man should we believe: Trudel the historian, arguing vigorously in one direction in 1950; or Trudel, the historian, conducting an inquiry for the B-B commission and concluding that we need a single textbook?

Reassessment Hits Golf Courses

Ottawa Journal

Provincial government reassessment has put such a heavy new tax bite on some Ontario golf courses that directors and owners are complaining they'll never get out of the economic rough.

Part of a general reassessment program throughout the province, the new regulations will not have any effect on courses in the Ottawa area until the 1975 tax year. But 50 courses in the Town of Mississauga and York County, near Toronto, have already been reassessed.

Eight had taxes lowered by amounts ranging from four to 44 per cent. But for the remaining 42 taxes went up — more than 100 per cent for nine courses, and 200 per cent or better for another nine. One course that paid $2,009 in taxes in 1969 will face a tax bill of $12,542 this year, an increase of 524 per cent.

The Ontario government finds itself worried about the effect this reassessment will have on the future of the courses, and has formed a study committee. Municipal Affairs Minister McKeough agrees that golf is a popular sport, the courses "confer social benefits on the areas in which they are located," and that they provide valuable green space in urban settings.

In reassessing the reassessment, the government and its committee should remember that golf is no longer the private preserve of the idle rich. Membership in many courses, specially a high percentage of those in the Ottawa area, is within the recreation budget of modern medium incomes.

To increase taxation to the extent that existing courses which accept casual players for a day were forced to fold would be sheer folly. Governments might then find themselves paying grants to municipalities to build public courses demanded by residents with more and more leisure time.

Just Imagine—A Jet Running Out of Gas!

Watertown Times

Air force planes have been running out of gas and crashing.

National Guard generals are becoming alarmed over inability to protect weapons stored in armories.

What's going, anyway? Have we become so bogged down with details and distribution of authority or responsibility that the system is falling apart?

According to the Air Force, ten jets crashed last year because they ran out of gas. That represents a loss of about $25,000,000 for the planes.

And do you know how the top brass in the Air Force refers to these crashes caused by running out of gas? A fancy term: "Fuel depletion."

And guard the insecure armories?

The gun rooms in 2,774 guard armories around the country contain 400,000 rifles and pistols, plus an undisclosed number of machine guns, bazookas and artillery pieces.

The Pentagon wants congress to institute a multi-million-dollar project to install burglar alarms.

So why doesn't the Pentagon pay civilian guards for these armories?

Because the Defense Department says these armories are state buildings and must be maintained by the states.

Why Can't Canadians Buy Canadian Goods?

Milwaukee Journal

Canadians often complain about the influence of outside capital — usually American — on their autonomy and economy. But the Calgary Chamber of Commerce, according to Canadian Press, thinks that the average Canadian doesn't do much about seeing to it that home products are favored in the interest of home production. The chamber defines a Canadian this way to make its point:

"One who drives home from a French movie in his German automobile, slips out of his Hong Kong suit and Italian shoes, puts on his Japanese robe and Mexican slippers and sips Brazilian coffee from English china at his Danish desk while he takes his American pen to write his member of parliament to demand that Ottawa do something about the imbalance of payments."

Former Councillor Amelia Bosley Rejoins Tweed Council

Mrs. Christina Sinclair and Mrs. Jeanette Whitfield, having declined to accept the position of councillor caused by the resignation of Kenneth Thompson at the end of 1969, the following resolution was passed.

It was moved and seconded that Mrs. Amelia Bosley be appointed to the council for the remainder of the term vacated by Kenneth Thompson. Adopted —

The minutes of the last mid - January regular meeting were read and approved on the motion of Mrs. Courneyea and E. Champagne.

John Shalla of the Department of Lands and Forests addressed the council to ascertain if it would be possible to make sanitary sewer connection from the Ranger's office on Hungerford Road to the village sewer now installed part way up Hungerford Road.

It was moved and seconded that the village council is in agreement for this service to be made providing that the cost will be borne by the department and necessary permit order be secured from Ontario Water Resources Commission. Adopted . . .

A letter was received from Franklin Healey, in respect to him taking on additional work as caretaker at the Municipal Building.

They advised that it is frequently the combination of the following: a foot frontage rate; connection charge; a surcharge on the water bill of those connected to the system; and a general mill rate or area levy.

The council decided to investigate plans that are now being used by other municipalities.

The matter of the municipalities now being compelled to pay the school requisitions in four payments during the year with the first payment being March 31. The council members decided that they had no alternative but to make the village tax payment date at least twice a year and decided the dates for the first payment be June 1, and the other October 1st. The clerk was requested to advertise these dates of payments and that prepayment of 1970 taxes would be allowed with the rate of interest at 7½ per cent per annum and based on the number of paid before June 1, 1970.

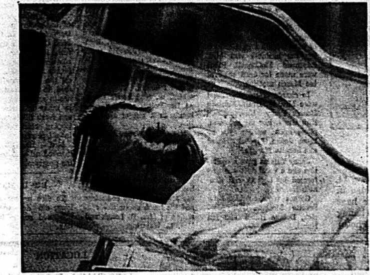
It was also moved and seconded that Mrs. Bosley assume the same offices on the standing committees as had been held by councillor Thompson.

Moved and seconded that a grant og $250 be made to the Tweed Library Board and an amount of $150 be made to the Land O'Lakes Tourist Association.

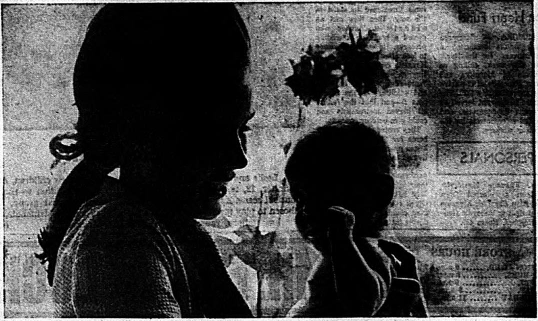
*The reeve brought to the attention of the council members that when the County Safety Commission officer had given his report for the year 1969 it appeared that the village building inspector had not been reporting the building permits issued by him to the County Office. The clerk was requested that the building inspector be notified to send those reports in the future.

New parents

Here's how you can build a flexible insurance program and an "opportunity fund" for your children at low cost—with London Life

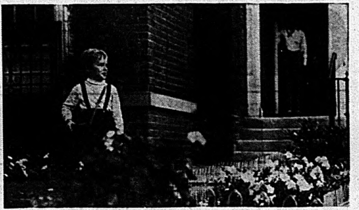


1. A new child brings a new world of love to a family—it also brings new responsibilities. These are discussed below.



2. You should choose a policy that gives you the flexibility of being able to add extra protection when you have more children.

3. If you now have a Jubilee policy you can add a special option that provides the extra protection your family may need—one of the advantages of flexible insurance with London Life.



4. Setting up an insurance program for your child gives him a headstart on his own program with premiums that will remain low for the rest of his life.

5. London Life's unique Opportunity Program is one way you can give your child an "opportunity fund" of his own. More details below.

Becoming a mother or father is a wonderful experience. It opens up a new world of love.

It also brings new responsibilities. That's why new parents should review their family's financial security. And a father should ask himself these questions.

"If I should die unexpectedly, will my insurance provide enough money to bring up a family decently? Is it sufficient to give my children the opportunity I'd like them to have as they grow up?"

If the answer is "no", there are various ways London Life can provide that additional protection.

These are explained below—together with a discussion on the value of setting up a life insurance program for a child.

Cash value insurance

A London Life Jubilee policy not only provides the extra protection required, it also builds guaranteed savings and collateral for future needs.

It is a profit-sharing policy. You receive dividends every year which can be used to purchase additional insurance, taken out in cash, or left to accumulate at interest.

A Jubilee policy builds a surprisingly large cash fund which can help you retire early—or provide a guaranteed income to supplement other retirement funds.

Convertible term insurance

This type of policy provides a specific sum of money should you die within a certain period of time—usually ten, fifteen or twenty years.

Convertible term insurance usually does not provide any savings so you cannot borrow against it.

However, it does allow you to change to a cash value policy—without a medical examination. This can be important later on, when you may need the continuing protection of a Jubilee policy.

Income replacement option

If you now have a London Life Jubilee policy you can add this option. In the event of your death, it provides a guaranteed income for your wife for a stated number of years—usually until the children are grown up.

Those are three examples of the flexibility of London Life insurance in providing additional protection for a family with young children.

Now let's discuss the value of giving your child a life insurance program of his own.

Insurance on the lives of children

Obviously, there's no price you can put on a child's life. The reason you take out insurance on a child is to give him a headstart on his own program—and provide him with an "opportunity fund" of his own.

Naturally, the sooner you set up a program, the lower the cost—and the larger the savings fund will become.

Many fathers expect their children to pay part of the cost when they grow up. This encourages good savings habits and allows a young man to arrange his finances with definite goals in sight.

Here are three ideas you should consider:

Jubilee life policy

Over the years a Jubilee life policy builds considerable savings in guaranteed cash value and annual dividends.

Note: If dividends are left to accumulate they can be used to pay part of college expenses without affecting the cash value or the protection offered by the policy.

Remember, when a young man takes over the premiums (at age 18, perhaps?) they remain at the same low rate you obtained by purchasing the policy when he was a child. He has a headstart on his insurance program for the rest of his life!

Jubilee endowment policy

This type of policy places greater emphasis on savings. An endowment policy guarantees that a certain sum of money will build up in a specified time.

For example, you could buy your new born child a $5,000 20-year endowment policy. When he's age 20, premiums cease, and he has a $5,000 fund he may withdraw at any time.

An endowment fund is often set up as an education fund to see a young man or woman through university.

Opportunity program

This is a special policy designed by London Life to meet the needs of children in today's changing world.

An Opportunity Program gives your child the choice of several valuable advantages.

For example, at age 25, your child receives a fully paid for life insurance policy—plus an automatic cash payment.

Or, the Opportunity Program will release cash for education at an earlier age and still provide a lifetime program of insurance. The Opportunity Program can also make cash available when your child marries.

London Life's Opportunity Program offers cash flexibility not available with any other policy. For complete details, write to London Life at the address below.

Flexible insurance

As you can see, London Life has a variety of policies to suit every need and circumstance.

The important thing for parents to remember, is to ensure there's sufficient insurance on the "breadwinner" to take care of the additional responsibilities of a new baby.

When that has been arranged, a father can then decide whether he wants to set up an insurance program for his son or daughter.

We suggest you discuss the matter with one of our representatives. And remember, with London Life you get more than you expect from life insurance.

FREE: A booklet called "Plain talk about life insurance" describes the many ways a London Life program can be tailored to suit your individual needs. Write to Dept. 300D, London Life Insurance Company, 255 Dufferin Ave., London 12, Ontario.

Huggett Family Players Prefer Medieval Music

OTTAWA (CP) — The milkman making his early morning call at one Ottawa house usually is greeted by the sound of music wafting from every room.

It's the Huggett Family Players doing their own thing.

Leslie and Margaret Huggett and their children, Andrew, 14, Jennifer, 12, Ian, 10 and Fiona, 8, are a unique addition to the Canadian musical scene.

As well as being a self-contained musical group, they have chosen to play medieval music on a number of rare and little-used instruments, including the krummhorn, rauschfeiffer, ranket and baroque oboe.

It began when Mr. and Mrs. Huggett, graduates of London's Royal College of Music and Royal Academy of Music respectively, decided they wanted to make good chamber music within the family. They found the best instruments for the children to reach a "decent standard" on were the ancient ones.

So they started with a variety of recorders.

At this time, Mr. Huggett, who came to Canada with his wife in 1954, had "been through the institutions" in Ottawa, including teaching posts at Carleton University, the collegiate board and public and separate schools. In 1966 he accepted an offer to teach in Westchester, N.Y.

The family looked forward to the move, but exorbitant rents threatened to stand in the way. Then they met an elderly stockbroker who owned a home on a wildlife preserve. He wanted someone to look after the estate, so the Huggetts convinced him Mrs. Huggett was a botanist—she's "sort of interested in birds and wildlife," as the family puts it—and that the family all played instruments and could give outdoor concerts.

They rented the three-storey home for $100 a month, and began practising vigorously to live up to their promise.

A year of practising and performing together whetted their appetite for more, and they left New York for the Greek island of Crete, where they could live frugally and devote their time to music.

For $4,200, including fares, they spent 10 months at Ayios Nikolaos, about 50 miles from Iraklion. Home was a rented stucco house, with one bed. The children slept in sleeping bags on air mattresses on the floor. There were four orange crates, two chairs, and a minimum of household appliances.

It was the worst winter in Greece in 40 years, and the Huggetts spent many an evening huddled around their one luxury, an electric fire, listening to wild cats howling in the back yard.

They rose at 7 a.m. and spent the mornings practising and doing schoolwork supplied by the Ontario department of education's correspondence course. Afternoons were free for visiting other villages and other islands or for swimming in warm weather.

They gave a concert for the villagers before they left, and came home via Europe, stopping to play in Hannover, West Germany, and London. Then they were back in Ottawa, and faced with the problem of recognition.

"To make it in your own home town is no mean feat," Leslie Huggett says. "To make it in the classical field is quite something else. But we've gone at it 100 per cent, and it has paid results."

They started with a concert in aid of the Unitarian Service Committee, which they promoted themselves. Mrs. Huggett made robes for herself and her daughters, tunics for her husband and sons, and cases to carry the odd-shaped instruments in.

Mr. Huggett took publicity photographs and made arrangements for tickets and advertising. Since then, every performance has brought a full house. But they're not stopping now.

"At the moment, we have to teach to live. Gradually we want to be able to play to live."

After a 45-concert tour in Saskatchewan later this year, they plan to give a concert at the Royal Festival Hall in London, and hope to go on to Basle, Switzerland, to study.

Until then, they're up at 6:15 every morning, each one practising in his or her own room. And they have the most contented milkman in town.

Reader Has Some Happy Memories of Depression Days

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I keep a little notebook in which I write down all those cheery little items guaranteed to lift my spirits when they're low. Here is one I came across a little while ago:

"The dark hours before dawn seem never ending to those who feel depressed, and only experience can convince them that no night is so dark that it will not be dispelled by sunrise at the appointed hour." — Shirley May

Dear Shirley: Sometimes it takes a heap of experience, too.

• • •

Dear Doris: You had my name a year ago for used Christmas cards. I have a voluntary arts and crafts class for some 50 children every Saturday. My card supply is completely depleted.

I would deeply appreciate it if you could have my name on your mailing list again for used cards of any kind. We found dozens of uses for them. — Mrs. Anne Thompson, 27 Birchwynd, Ioco, BC.

Dear Anne: Be ready for an avalanche.

• • •

Dear Doris: I also went through the Depression Era and have often wished that I had saved some of the recipes and hints to make things stretch. But those days were not so grim when you look back on them because everybody helped everybody else.

I can remember washing and carding sheep's wool, then sewing patches. All the neighbors worked on a huge frame, quilting, and this was done in an old house provided by the village for people on relief. It had two old sewing machines and a hot plate to make tea and I for one have more pleasant memories than unpleasant of the days when a quarter was a fortune.

On Saturday nights somebody played a fiddle and everybody danced or played cards with no money involved. — Nostalgia

Dear Nostalgia: Believe it or not, there are still places where these gracious, relaxing things happen.

Confidential to Disappointed For Him: Don't for a minute let your son feel he has let you down. He is so deep in despair already for failing his year and letting himself down that he needs guidance, not blame.

From the sound of things he needs a good talk with a career counsellor more than a trip abroad. This is no time for him to run away from his hang - up. Obviously he has the brains to get through; give him the hope and the gumption to get on with it.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

The Housewife's Solution to Leftover Roast

By MARY MOORE

Indecision nagged me. Was I going to mutilate the beautiful leftover cold roast of beef by grinding it for croquettes or cutting it up for stew? Or should I serve it cold in luscious big slices with two beautiful vegetables? We took a vote here and sliced cold with pretty vegetables won.

SHAPELY COAT — From Barberini's Spring '70 collection, this navy coat has gold buttons and gilt chain that trims a watch pocket.

(CP Photo)

One big count in favor of slicing roast beef instead of making it up into a mixture of something is that it is easier. The vegetables I have chosen to accompany it were especially enjoyed by us — glazed turnip and crumbed cauliflower. Except for potatoes the turnips were the cheapest root vegetable on the produce counter.

GLAZED TURNIP

(Serves 4 or 5)

- 1 med.-large turnip
- 3 tbsps. butter or margarine
- ¼ cup dark brown sugar
- ¼ tsp. salt

Wash turnip and cut up into ¾" thick slices and pare them. Cut slices into 1 x 2" strips. Cook in boiling water, covered until tender but not mushy. Drain. In large shallow frypan melt butter or margarine and add the dark brown sugar and salt and stir to blend. Add turnip. (I had four cups measured in a four-cup measure to serve four people. Arrange turnip in a single layer in pan and when bottom is rich gold turn over and brown other side over medium heat. Watch this carefully as it might brown too much if you do not.

CRUMBED CAULIFLOWER

Separate cauliflower into flowerets and cook until barely tender in boiling salted water. Do not overcook. Cauliflower should retain a little of its crispness. Drain and turn into shallow baking dish. Cover with a mixture of ½ cup fine bread crumbs and ½ cup grated or shredded old Cheddar cheese. Pass under preheated broiler burner until golden brown.

These vegetables made an attractive and delicious accompaniment to cold roast beef with horseradish.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH ACW GUILD

In spite of rain and difficult walking conditions, members of Christ Church ACW Guild turned out in goodly numbers for the February meeting on Tuesday.

President, Mrs. Fred Lazier was absent due to illness but the business portion of the meeting was conducted by Mrs. F. A. Beeby.

The prayer of St. Francis of Assisi was adopted as the Guild prayer for the coming year and was used at the meeting. An inspiring poem was presented by Mrs. L. Adams in the devotional.

Reports were heard from all conveners and volunteers obtained to clear kitchen cupboards in preparation for the repainting which will be done this weekend.

Members were reminded of the Holy Communion services on Ash Wednesday and on February 25. This latter service will be a corporate one for Guild members.

A number of members volunteered to visit shut - ins and ill members of the congregation. The Guild will provide material for mattress covers for Camp Hyanto. Members of the Contact Club will make these items.

The annual "Blossom Tea and Sale" is being planned, to take place in June and members were urged to begin work on saleable items for this project.

Mrs. D. G. Livingston and Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge were congratulated on being elected members of the Vestry Council of the church.

A lively auction sale, with Mrs. A. Jordan as the genial auctioneer and Mrs. M. B. Button as treasurer, netted a tidy sum and provided an hour of entertainment.

Tea was served by the hostesses for the afternoon, Mrs. W. Wills and Mrs. W. J. Hinchey.

Ann Landers

Minister Caters To Homosexuals

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The way the homosexuals are taking over the country, a straight person is considered an oddity. One must look hard and long these days to find a movie or a play that deals with hetersexual love. Love between a man and a woman suddenly seems old-fashioned, out of style, or just plain dull.

And now, I see there's a church out in Hollywood (natch) that has a fairy pastor and a congregation composed of nearly 300 fags and lesbians. (When the word gets around, you won't be able to get into the place.)

The pastor was formerly associated with a church in Tennessee. He was married, divorced and has a son. This pastor was excommunicated because his church does not aprove of dancing, movies or wearing jewelry. You can imagine the reaction when they learned he was gay!

This clergyman recently announced he will "marry" homosexual couples who have lived together for at least six months. He made it clear that these marriages are not legal. "But they are spiritual," he said emphatically and, "emotionally binding."

What do you think of this, Ann. Dare you speak out? — — RESIDENT OF THE WORLD'S LARGEST OPEN-AIR LUNATIC ASYLUM — LOS ANGELES.

DEAR RESIDENT: If homosexuals want to pray as a group, it's all right with me. I'm more concerned about the violent people in our society than those who meet in peaceful assembly to worship.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been reading your column for years hoping someone would write in with my problem. No one has. Please help me — I'm getting desperate.

My husband is 36 years old. He cannot read or write. He can sign his name and address — and that's all.

When he was a child his parents moved a great deal. They were very poor and he missed a lot of school. Nobody noticed. I wasn't aware of his illiteracy until after we were married. He used to pretend he left his glasses somewhere and I read things to him before I realized he couldn't read.

We have three lovely children and we live in a nice neighborhood. This wonderful man works seven days a week and is considered a fine employee. Unfortunately, he has had to pass up many promotions because of his illiteracy. He is ashamed of it and I cannot let anyone know.

I've seen him try to learn while pretending to help the children with their homework, but it is beyond him. It breaks my heart. Finally he agreed to let me teach him but I don't know where to begin. I am not a teacher and he won't go to a school because he is too embarrassed. If you can help me to help this wonderful man, I will be ever grateful. — HIS WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: It could be that your husband has dislexia — a brain disorder not uncommon in people who have reading problems. This can be corrected. Suggest that he get himself tested. (The school principal can direct you.) If he does not have dislexia, go to the first grade teacher and ask her to recommend books and a manual to help you teach him. She need not know the material is for your husband. Good luck and God bless.

Florida Gulf Beaches Threatened

Oil-fighters Surrender Tampa Bay to Slick from Tanker

ST. PETERSBURGH, Fla. (AP) — Pollution experts fighting to keep a 100-square-mile oil slick from spread have thrown in the towel in their uneven battle against wind and tied.

They now are concentrating on keeping the oil bottled up in Tampa Bay and away from tourist-packed Gulf Coast beaches.

"There's nothing we can do to stop the spread of the oil," Capt. Anthony Fugaro of the U.S. Coast Guard said Sunday. "It's just got too big for us to handle."

The oil was released when the Greek tanker Delian Apollo ran aground Friday.

Boat owners lined up to haul their oil-coated craft away as the slick poked into public and private marinas.

By Sunday night, oil was beginning to dot the waters of Boca Ciega Bay between the mainland and the hotel-spotted island of St. Petersburg beach.

The slick was concentrated originally in a mass about five miles in diameter, but now laps stickily at 20 miles of shoreline along the eastern side of the Pinellas Peninsula.

The blanket of bunker-C fuel oil ranged in thickness from a coating-like grease on top of soup to ugly blotches six inches thick.

The tanker at first was believed to have lost 5,000 gallons, but Fugaro said Sunday he believed more than 10,000 gallons burst into the bay through several holes in the tanker's hull.

The Delian Apollon, registered in Greece, is owned by J. C. Carris and Sons, Ltd., of London, England, and was chartered to Humble Oil Co.

Hundreds of Pinellas County residents turned out to help the local Audubon Society's frantic effort to save as many water birds as possible. Boy scouts combed the waterline and plucked half-dead grebes, pelicans, ducks and other birds from the muck.

The exhausted birds were taken to Lake Maggiore, where a bird-washing assembly line was set up to clean the animals with salad oil and corn meal.

The Audubon Society estimated more than 1,000 birds died along a 10-mile stretch of shore.

Tampa Bay is roughly 45 miles north to south and 20 miles east to west. The famed Sunshine Skyway Bridge arches over the bay where it opens to the Gulf of Mexico.

Crews spread thousands of feet of slick boom, a kind of floating upside down fence, along the north end of the Skyway to keep the oil inside the bay.

They feared the oil would be carried offshore by outgoing tides, then pushed back in to smother white sand beaches along the Gulf Coast islands.

Owners of waterfront property were dropping polyurethane foam, straw, old rags and anything else that would soak up oil into water that had turned black.

Continued Economic Growth Sure to Ruin Environment

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Naturalist Gavin Henderson says the continuing high rate of economic growth can "only lead to complete environmental breakdown."

Mr. Henderson, executive director of the National and Provincial Parks Association, spoke Saturday at a conference on the environment.

The one-day conference was called to organize Pollution Probe, London, a citizen's group aimed at fighting the dangers of pollution through education and social action.

Mr. Henderson said the Science Council of Canada, in its 1968 report listing national goals, gave first priority to "national prosperity," with no mention of environmental control.

"When this prestigious government agency doesn't even acknowledge the maintenance of environmental quality as a key element of our No. 1 national goal, is it any wonder that air and water pollution are rampant and getting worse?"

Dr. Bruce Falls, of the University of Toronto's zoology department, warned that rapidly growing world population aggravates every human problem, including pollution. He said even Canada must consider population control measures, despite its unpopulated areas.

Chlordane for Termites Kills Philadelphia Man

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A "hard" pesticide, chlordane, caused the death of a 69-year-old man who used it to control termites, Dr. I. Selig Epstein said Sunday.

Dr. Epstein said the cause of Fred Hilton's death last month, as listed on a medical certificate, was severe bone marrow failure due to chlordane.

Chlordane is among eight so-called "hard" pesticides, including DDT, which do not break down chemically after use.

Dr. Epstein, Hilton's personal physician, said his patient began using the chemical in his home two or three years ago to control termites. It also was used in Hilton's garden, the man's wife said.

Dr. Epstein had Hilton admitted to hospital last fall. The physician said intensive tests showed the insecticide had attacked bone marrow, in which the body manufactures red blood cells.

Hilton improved through massive transfusions and went home in November, only to be admitted to hospital again in January. He died Jan. 30.

Play to 1-1 Deadlock

Aces Can't Figure Mo-Hawk Change

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

There's a difference between being a hockey team and playing like one, a lesson Belleville's Senior A Mo-Hawks taught old enemies from Kingston this weekend.

A 1-1 Sunday afternoon saw-off in the Memorial Arena, hot on the heels of a 4-2 Mo-Hawk win in Kingston Friday, has the Aces reconsidering the merits of their first - round playoff opposition.

The third-place Aces — who open playoffs at home against the sixth-place Mo-Hawks a week from Tuesday — could not be faulted for feeling confused.

The Mo-Hawks won the teams' first three meetings this season, lost the next five, then took three of four possible points from the Aces to end a month-long slump.

Ralph Plane's third goal in four games launched the scoring in Sunday's exciting stalemate, missed by all but 1,300 spectators.

The Mo-Hawk scoring occurred just past the 14-minute mark of the opening period. Plane stepped out of the penalty box, outskated Kingston defenceman John Ford for the puck, and held off Garfield Ball with one arm while he jammed the puck between goalie Neil Perry's skate and the near post with the other.

That was all the ammuniton goalie Steve Rexe needed to again be the big Mo-Hawk gun.

Rexe robbed the Aces blind as they outshot the Mo-Hawks 41-35 having the edge in every period except the 10-minute overtime session

Rexe kicked out 40 shots in Kingston Friday night to keep the Mo-Hawks on the heavy end of a 4-2 score.

The only shot that eluded the red-head Sunday was a 40-foot blast by Bob Clayton early in the second period on a two-on-one play.

Rexe's first - period performance set the Kingston attack back a month.

With the Mo-Hawks playing two men short near the end of the opening period. Rexe made picture kickouts of successive point shots by Jim Gebhardt and John Ford.

He preserved a point for the Mo-Hawks by beating Hugh Harvey in alone early in the 10-minute overtime session.

LOU KAZOWSKI
Returning Friday

Godson, playing his best hockey in weeks, missed another goal on a first - period Mo - Hawk power - play when he backhanded Davey Jones' pass wide of the open corner.

"I was just too anxious," Godson said, "I started to shoot it before it got to me."

A minute earlier, Jones proved that Perry was relying on horseshoes. His hard point drive caught the Aces' goalie moving the wrong way but the puck hit his stick HANDLE dead centre.

Bob Wilson continued to sharpen up his timing after half a dozen games on the Mo-Hawk defence. He broke his stick over Tom Carty's to thwart a two-on-one threat by the Aces in the first period, then later flattened Clayton who was perched beside Rexe's crease about to bat in a rebound.

Other Mo-Hawk standouts include winger Ray Johnston, who played his best game of the season, skating well, and dishing out the kind of treatment that the Aces respect, and Greg Marchen, who has drawn raves from Kingston coach Danny McLeod for his play against the Aces.

Marchen was paired with Davey Jones, who played his second steady game on defence, taking a "good" hooking penalty in the overtime period to prevent a breakaway by Bobby Rawson.

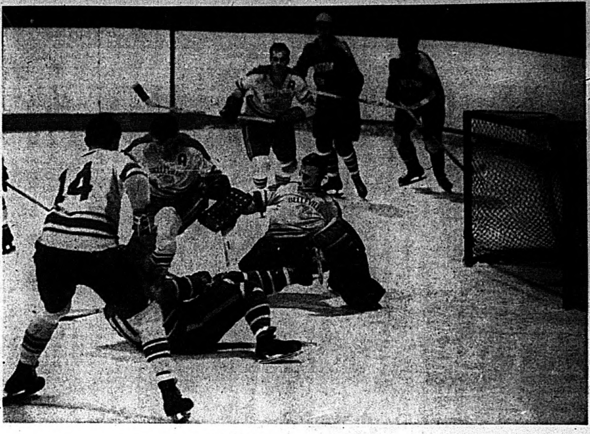
With only a home-and-home series against first-place Orillia Terriers next weekend remaining in the regular schedule, Jones finds himself in a rare position.

For the first time since Christmas, he expects to have a full roster to choose from.

Defenceman Lou Kazowski absent with a cracked ankle for the past 10 games, went for a skate in Sunday's pre game warm-up and is a definite starter in Friday night's road game with the Terriers.

And for the first time all season, Jones will have the opportunity to play Wayne "Weiner" Brown up front to bolster the club's "third" line.

Final home game of the regular season is a Sunday afternoon fixture against the front-running Terriers. Advance playoff tickets, priced at $1.75 will be made available to season's ticket-holders later this week.



Holding the Fort

Belleville Mo-Hawk goalie Steve Rexe was the man of the hour Sunday, coming up with 40 stops to earn the Mo-Hawks their share of a 1-1 OHA Senior A deadlock with visiting Kingston Aces. Here Rexe looks after the puck while teammates Ralph Plane (14), Greg Marchen, and Lionel Botly keep Charlie Convery, Rod Graham, and Hugh Harvey at a safe distance.

Big Line Missing

Short-staffed Printers Blotted by Byes

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — It appears that the Belleville Ellis Printers don't believe in doing things by halves. After running up a seven - game undefeated streak, the Printers have absorbed consecutive losses to the Peterborough Don Byes, including a 9-1 pasting by the Don Byes Sunday afternoon in Peterborough.

Much of the reason for the runaway score can be attributed to the fact that all three members of Belleville's highest scoring line missed the game, as John McConnell, Terry Meagher and Read Mallory were all absent. McConnell was recuperating from a broken nose and Mallory was nursing an eye injury.

Coach Floyd Crawford was pleased with the play of the players that did show up. "The boys played pretty well," says Crawford, "they got a few bad breaks in the first period. When that many players are missing it makes it pretty tough on the rest of the team."

Trailing 3-0 at the end of the first period, Belleville saw the home team pump in five goals in the second frame. The Ellis Juniors got their only tally at 1.07 of the period when Dalton Lambert's low drive from the point beat goalie Dave White. Otherwise the Don Bye netminder was unbeatable as he twice stopped Ellis breakaways in the first period.

Ron Fuller centred Al Tarbeau and John Hill on Belleville's second line but they were unable to generate the scoring power of the missing players. Juveniles Steven Sharpe, Randy Lambert and Steven Moore were called up as replacements.

Goalie Ron Jury for Belleville got a good workout for the upcoming playoffs, as the Ellis defence was lax on a number of occasions. Kevin Dockrill and John Mulvihill turned in strong performances.

Centres Ron Fuller and Danny Lupenette were the best of the Ellis forwards with Lupenette picking up an assist on the only Belleville goal.

Doug Murray scored two goals for Peterborough with singles going to John Rutherford, Gary Brewer, Rick Kemp, Doug Gibson, Terry Horrigan, John Paterson and Paul Fendley.

Brewer added an assist to his marker to move past absent Ellis right winger Terry Meagher into first place for the league scoring championship. Meagher had taken over the top spot with a goal in Friday night's 6-5 loss to Peterborough.

Each team picked up a dozen penalties in a rough game that saw several fights, as Belleville's Ron Fuller took a couple of decisions from heavyweight defenceman John Bostock.

Coach Crawford was understandably not in a happy state of mind. "A loss like this certainly doesn't do anything to keep up momentum for the playoffs," says the Ellis mentor, "It makes a win in Friday's game with Trenton that much more important."

Meagher Opts for Marathon

Quinte Secondary School student Steve Nash may make the Guiness' Book of World Records — but perhaps not in the way he would have liked to.

Nash was officially credited as the winning goalie in this weekend's 58 - hour Quinte "Hockeython" won by Nash's "B" squad 923-910.

The leading scorer?

"It wouldn't be safe to say," chuckled Quinte history teacher Grant Collett, whose marathon brainchild raised upwards of $800 in pledges toward an Easter tour of New York by 88 Quinte Grades 11 and 13 history students.

TERRY MEAGHER
Played at Risk

The 36 participating students launched their marathon game at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon with an official puck - dropping ceremony performed by Hastings M.P. Lee Grills and Belleville Mayor Russell Scott.

"And they were skating just as strongly this morning," said instigator Collett after the students called it a game at 1.07 a.m. today.

The 58 - hour, two - minute long game is the longest on record, exceeding by 43 minutes the previous mark set by a group of Chicago hockeython devotees.

Quinte's 36 players skated in six-hour shifts, and included some students other than those involved in the New York project. Girls made their contribution in the form of providing hot drinks in temperatures that dipped as low as a minus 15 degrees over the weekend. They also handled some ice - scraping chores on the hockeython pond just west of Quinte on the north side of College St.

Some participants made their contribution "above and beyond the call of duty," as Mr. Collett put it.

Ellis Junior "B" forward and Quinte student Terry Meagher risked a shot at a scoring championship by playing in the hockeython Sunday.

Meagher missed a chance to add to his league - leading total by missing Sunday's 9-1 Ellis loss in Peterborough. Peterborough forward Gary Brewer picked up enough points in the game to pass Meagher's 56 - point total.

Ellis teammate Danny Lupenette did play in Peterborough Sunday, then returned to join the record-breaking final hockeython shift this morning.

"We had to drag him off the ice," said Collett.

The estimated $800 pledged by parents and other school supporters on the hockeython is not nearly enough to cover the $50-per-student New York excursion for the group of 88.

"We got a lot of widespread publicity for Belleville over the weekend from this activity," Collett noted. "If any of the general public cares to donate to the cause, it would be welcome."

Trenton Loses By the Dozen

TRENTON (Special) — A shorthanded Trenton Golden Hawk team were victims of a 7-2 loss to the Kingston Frontenacs in Trenton yesterday. The home team was forced to go with only 12 players and after trailing by a 2-1 count at the end of one period, were unable to keep up with a full - strength Kingston squad.

The Trenton defence was particularily weakened with the absence of Randy Castellarin, out with a leg injury, and an assessment of 20 penalty minutes to rearguard Carey Webb for a second-period fracas.

Brooks had two goals for the visitors with singles going to Rivoire, Higgins, Sands, Fowler and Loudon. Jim Steenburg and Carey Webb scored for Trenton.

Next home game for the Golden Hawks is Friday night when they meet the Belleville Ellis Printers in the final contest of the regular season for both teams.

Ellis and Frazier Take Over from Armchair Experts

NEW YORK (CP) — The pundits, armchair experts and bellicose fight managers have had their say. Now, it's up to Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis to prove who was right and who was wrong about tonight's battle in Madison Square Garden for the undisputed heavyweight boxing championship of the world.

"We're going out there and do our thing and prove who's the best," said Frazier, the champion of six states, Mexico and Argentina. "All the lip-lip and yap-yap is over."

The heavyweight division hasn't had an undisputed champion since 1967 when Cassius Clay, or Muhammed Ali, was stripped of his crown for refusing induction into the U.S. armed forces.

Frazier, 26, of Philadelphia, won his share of the title March 4, 1968, by knocking out Buster Mathis in 11 rounds in Madison Square Garden.

Ellis, 29, of Louisville, Ky., won World Boxing Association recognition with a 15-round decision over Jerry Quarry of Bellflower, Calif., on April 27, 1968.

Tonight's battle will clear up the confusion that has reigned in the heavyweight division since then.

Clay has announced he has no plans for a comeback and has called on his followers to recognize tonight's victor as world champion. He had planned to be at ringside to present his championship belt to the winner but said last week he does not plan to come to the fight because neither fighter has expressed an interest in the belt. As a suspended fighter, he would not be allowed in the ring by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Frazier is a heavy favorite to beat Ellis. The Las Vegas oddsmakers have it 6 to 1 in Frazier's favor while the odds in New York are 4 to 1.

The pre-fight publicity, the "lip-lip and yap-yap" referred to by Frazier, has centred around Frazier's aggression and punching power and Ellis's speed, boxing ability and sneak right hand.

"To me, the jab is the most important punch in boxing," said Dundee, who also was Clay's strategist. "The guy without a jab isn't a good fighter; he's a onehanded fighter.

"The jab is the setter-upper, it's your ruler, your measuring stick. It makes the guy you're fighting do what you want him to do."

"Frazier doesn't have much of a jab," Dundee said.

Miss Clifford Led Parade

Betsy Leads Women Skiers To Alpine Title Limelight

VAL GARDENA, Italy (CP) — Keith Shepherd summed up Canada's performance in the world Alpine skiing championships during the weekend in one sentence:

"The girls did far better than we men."

Shepherd, of Lake Louise, Alta., said: "In general we did fairly well in these world events. But the balance of the Canadian men's team certainly is in deficit if compared to one of the girls who grabbed a gold medal."

Canada's newest athletic heroine is pert 16-year-old Betsy Clifford of Ottawa, who flashed to victory in the women's giant slalom here Saturday and became the youngest competitor ever to win a gold medal at a world ski championship or in Olympic ski competition.

The high school student, who had never before won an international race, swept smoothly through 48 gates on an icy 1,200-metre course in one minute, 20.45 seconds to maintain the giant slalom event as a Canadian preserve.

Betsy joined the ranks of Nancy Greene, Anne Heggtveit and Lucille Wheeler as slalom queens in Olympic and world championships.

"I can't believe it," she said after official results showed her topping French favorites Ingrid Lafforgue, 1:20.53, and Francoise Macchi, 1:20.60. "It's the happiest day in my life."

Betsy, whose win gave Canada its only medal of the championships, was not rated among the top challengers in the giant slalom, and was only 14th in the International Ski Federation standings.

Laurie Kreiner, 15, of Timmins, Ont., was the second best placed Canadian Saturday, finishing 19th in 1:23.88. Judy Crawford of Toronto, who fell nearing the finish line, wound up 37th with a time of 1:30.59, while Diane Culver of Montreal was disqualified for missing gates.

Michele Jacot of France topped the women's combined Alpine standings for the downhill, special slalom and giant slalom events, with team-mate Florence Steurer second and Marilyn Cochran of the United States third.

Bernhard Russi of Switzerland snatched a gold medal away from the favored Austrian team Sunday by winning the men's downhill race at the windup of the Alpine championships.

Speeding down a slow course in 2:24.57, Russi, who went off as the 15th competitor on the 3,750-metre track, had to wait behind 11 other skiers before getting his chance at bettering the 2:24.79 clocking of Austrian Karl Cordin, who placed second.

Malcolme Milne of Australia finished third in 2:25.09 to give his country its first medal in world ski championships.

Clocking 2:25.62 to finish fifth behind Austria's Karl Schranz, fourth in 2:25.46, Bill Kidd of the United States won the gold medal in the combined men's standings. He had placed 15th in the giant slalom and third in the special slalom, good enough to beat out France's silver-medallist Patrick Russel.

Track Students Await Selections

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian track stars are waiting anxiously for word on who will be on the team to the World Student Games in Turin, Italy, in September.

Following the first Canadian university track and field meet ever held, which wound up here Sunday, track officials began pondering the team selection.

Their choices will have to go to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union for ratification.

Athletes who will have to receive top consideration include Jan Maddin of Winnipeg, Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., Diane Jones of Saskatoon, Penny May of Victoria, Grant McLaren of Guelph, Ont., and Brian Donelly of Kingston, Ont.

Miss Maddin, 20, who holds the Canadian open record of 40.2 seconds for the 300 metres, came close to her mark again Sunday with a clocking of 40.3.

Miss May, 18, student at the University of British Columbia, clipped 1-10th of a second off the record for the 50-metre hurdles with a time of 7.5 seconds. The former Canadian open mark was held by Pat van Wolverlaere of Spokane, Wash.

WHITBY (CP — Earle Hushagen's Toronto rink dropped John Cathers of Kitchener 9-5 Saturday night to win the southern Ontario mixed curling championship. Hushagen's playoff win, his second over Cathers Saturday, sends him to the Canadian championships in Vancouver March 9-13.

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Dave Folk of Saskatoon has several reputations to uphold at the Canadian schoolboy curling championship starting in this Laurentian centre today. Riding a 10-game winning streak, the 17-year-old skip of the Evan Hardy Collegiate rink represents the province which won last year's title. Furthermore, Folk is the fourth member of his family in the national championship and has to try to at least match brother Rick's performance in 1968 when Saskatchewan just got squeezed out of the title in a playoff.

Gervais Eliminates Northcott

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Although Ron Northcott of Calgary will not be among the challengers in the 1970 Canadian Men's Curling Championships, the four western provinces will field seasoned competitors in this year's event in Winnipeg.

Hec Gervais, the friendly giant from Edmonton, defeated Northcott in two out of three games for the Alberta provincial championship and will make his first appearance at the Canadian championship since 1962.

Gervais, 36, won the Canadian and world titles in 1961 and represented Alberta in 1962. He defeated Northcott 8-3 Saturday night in the sudden-death final.

In Saskatchewan Saturday, Bob Pickering of Milestone, no stranger to Canadian championships, whipped Merv Mann of Saskatoon, who has never won a provincial title in eight tries.

The Manitoba champion was also declared Saturday night when Don Duguid of Winnipeg whipped Bob Friesen of Winnipeg 12-5 in only nine ends. Duguid captured the best-of-three final 2-1.

Lyall Dagg of Vancouver, the 1964 Canadian and world champion, qualified Feb. 8 to represent British Columbia when he defeated Rod Carmichael of Fernie 10-4 and 8-7 in the best-of-three final.

For Northcott, who won the world title in 1966, 1968 and 1969, it was the end to four straight Canadian championship appearances. He was searching for his fourth Canadian crown, a feat managed only by Ernie Richardson of Regina.

Two other players have won the championship three times — Ken Watson of Winnipeg and Matt Baldwin of Edmonton.

Gervais had defeated Northcott 7-6 Friday night in the semi-finals of the event with a last-rock takeout but Northcott came back to whip Gervais 9-6 in the B final and force the final game.

Pickering won the Saskatchewan crown despite the loss of his lead, Gary Ford, who suffered a leg injury and was forced to sit out two games against Mann. Pickering picked up a man from his home rink as a sweeper and second Jack Keyes threw four rocks.

Mann lost a gamble in the 11th end of the final game to allow Pickering to advance to the Canadian final.

He attempted to take out a Pickering rock in the 11th and count three, instead of drawing for two with the Milestone skip holding a 9-7 lead.

Mann nudged Pickering's stone, moving it far enough to make it shot rock and end his chances.

Hornets Hand Kingston Third Spot by Toppling Oaks Twice

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets blasted Oakville Oaks twice in weekend Ontario Hockey Association senior action to consolidate their hold on second place and make the Oaks' possession of fourth a tenuous situation.

Galt played host to Oakville in the league's only action Saturday, blasting their visitors 9-2, then travelled to Oakville Sunday where they rapped the Oaks 6-4.

In other Sunday games, Kingston Aces and Belleville Mo-Hawks tied 1-1, Woodstock A's toppled Owen Sound Crescents 4-3, and Barrie Flyers took Orillia Terriers 4-2.

The Barrie victory moved the Flyers into a fourth-place tie with Oakville, a situation which could be resolved Friday when Oakville visits in Barrie.

Hornets scored seven times in the first period Saturday night, and coasted in. Howie Deitrich and Vance Millar scored twice each, the other Galt goals coming from Bob Ertel, Bill Hway, Bob Maxwell, Joe Hogan and John Beechey.

Don Currie and Jim O'Brien scored for the Oaks.

Norm Defilice played the first two periods in goal for Galt, replaced by Ron Boomer in the third. Defilice was back less than three minutes later after Boomer was cut on the face.

In their Sunday encounter, with Boomer and Defilice out, Bob Aitken was called up from an intermediate B team to lead Galt to their 6-4 victory. Fern Belanger got two for Galt; Millar, Beechey, Ron Smith and Bruce Reier scoring singles.

Obie O'Brien, Charlie Cipolla, Dick Smith and Neil Cotton scored for Oakville.

Bob Tomcick led Woodstock with two goals, Wayne Goetz and Al Blair finishing it off; Keith Smeltzer got two and Dave McComb one for Owen Sound. It was Woodstock's first victory over Owen Sound in eight tries.

John Weeks with two led Barrie to victory over Orillia. Johnny McMillan and Mike Dubeau got the others. Ivan Walmsley, a former National Hockey League goalie, stopped 19 for the Terriers; Ken Payne kicked out 32 in the Barrie net.

Hawks Regain Scoring Habit

By CHUCK SVOBODA

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks, whose defensive play has been one of the highlights of the National Hockey League's first half, appear to be falling back into an old habit—scoring goals.

But unlike last season when all their scoring power failed to get them out of last place in the East Division, the Hawks now appear to be a solid threat to grab a playoff spot with the help of their late-surging scoring stars.

Three-time scoring champion Bobby Hull collected his 24th and 25th season goals while Stan Mikita, scoring leader in four seasons, picked up his 33rd to lead the Hawks in a 6-4 win over Toronto Maple Leafs Sunday night.

The win moved Chicago to within one point of fourth-place Detroit Red Wings who lost 4-2 to Pittsburgh Penguins.

New York Rangers regained the East Division lead with a 2-0 win over Montreal Canadiens while Philadelphia Flyers whipped Los Angeles Kings 7-1 and Minnesota North Stars tied 3-3 with St. Louis Blues in other Sunday matches.

Saturday, Chicago downed Minnesota 5-2, Toronto edged Philadelphia 4-3, Detroit whipped Montreal 5-2, Boston Bruins shutout Pittsburgh 3-0 and St. Louis Blues beat Los Angeles 2-1.

The two weekend games gave the Black Hawks a total of 32 goals scored in their last six games for five wins and a loss. They had 18 goals scored against them in the six games and their season total of 122 goals-against is second-lowest in the league.

Gerry Pinder, Pit Martin and Jim Pappin, with his 100th career goal, were the other Hawks scorers before a crowd of 18,000 at Chicago.

The Hawks were shorthanded when Hull beat goalie Bruce Gamble for his second goal of the night.

Chicago netminder Tony Esposito let in goals by Paul Henderson, Murray Oliver, Bob Pulford and George Armstrong. The loss further dimmed Toronto hopes for a playoff spot with Detroit now 10 points ahead of them and Chicago nine.

Ed Giacomin's fourth season shutout helped New York move back in front of Boston which had tied the Rangers for the eastern lead Saturday.

The Canadiens, meanwhile, dropped three points behind the Bruins and five behind the Rangers while holding only a five-point edge over the Red Wings.

Donnie Marshall and Bill Fairbairn scored for the Rangers 118th consecutive game without being shutout, a league record. The New York club set the previous mark of 117 in the 1940-42 period.

The crowd of 17,250 at New York saw the Rangers outshoot the Canadiens 29-19 with rookie Phil Myre in the Montreal nets.

Keith McCreary scored twice to spark the Penguins who outshot the Red Wings 34-32 before a crowd of 14,487 at Detroit.

Ken Schinkel and Bryan Hextall also scored for Pittsburgh which stayed three points behind second-place Philadelphia in the West Division.

Goalie Al Smith allowed Detroit goals by Gordie Howe and Alex Delvecchio. Howe's goal, his 20th, marked the 21st consecutive season the big right winger has scored 20 or more.

Bill Sutherland's two first-period goals started the Flyers rampage before a Philadelphia crowd of 14,606.

Terry Ball, Simon Nolet, Earl Heiskala, Gary Peters and Jim Johnson also made it a sad night for Los Angeles goalie Wayne Rutledge who faced 55 shots in the game.

Bernie Parent made 30 saves in the Flyers nets to earn the win, allowing one Kings goal by defenceman Bill White. The Flyers win kept them 11 points behind leading St. Louis.

Minnesota's Danny Lawson and the Blues' Terry Crisp scored unassisted within a minute of each other late in the third period in Minneapolis to extend a first-period 2-2 tie.

The 14,312 Minneapolis fans saw the North Stars get goals from Bob Barlow and Bill Collins while Jim Roberts and Red Berenson scored for the Blues in the opening period.

Minnesota's Cesare Maniago made 24 saves while Jacques Plante kicked out 18 shots in the St. Louis nets.

Pappin, Martin, Mikita, Doug Mohns and Chico Maki provided the Chicago scoring before 14,660 fans at Minneapolis Saturday night while goalie Dennis DeJordy stopped 31 shots for the win.

The North Stars took a 1-0 lead in the first period on a goal by Danny O'Shea but the Hawks came back to pelt Maniago with 39 shots in the game.

Barlow scored the other goal for Minnesota which now is winless in its last 15 games and remains fifth in the west, four points behind Pittsburgh.

Biafrans Said Penned in House and Blown Up

LAGOS (AP) — An international observer team reported Saturday it had been told by village elders in fallen Biafra that federal Nigerian troops herded 104 civilians into a cinder-block house last Christmas day, then blew it up.

The report, by senior officers from Canada, Britain, Poland and Sweden, said survivors from the blast were shot.

It listed physical evidence of the alleged massacre near Afikpo, northeast of the final Biafran enclave.

"In view of these statements and observations, the team is of the opinion that the behavior of the federal troops in the Amaseri area may not have been in accordance with the operational code of conduct," the observers' report added.

The report also confirmed rape, looting and indiscipline at the war's end.

It said: "Indiscipline hampered relief operations and restoration of law and order."

But, it added, there was no evidence of genocide.

It was the strongest report yet issued by the observers who were invited here in September, 1968, to investigate allegations of genocide. The government announced recently they are to leave by the end of February.

The federal defence ministry issued a companion statement blaming the reported Amaseri (Afikpo) massacre on Biafran terrorists. It said a full investigation was made.

The observers made two trips to Amaseri. During the first, the report said, they "learned of an incident which took place on 25 December in which 70 people of one compound of Ndukwe village (part of Amaseri) were killed and their homes destroyed—allegedly by federal troops."

On the second trip, they said, elders of the village gave this fuller account:

"Federal soldiers surrounded the Ndukwu compound before anyone was up on Christmas morning. They started firing, setting huts ablaze. Those alive were herded into a cinder block house, shut inside and blown up with charges. Survivors were shot.

The report, quoting the elders, went on:

"The dead included all the men, women and children of the compound. The elders stated that the total number of dead was 106. The relatives of the dead came and took the bodies away for burial.

"The team was told by villagers that similar incidents had taken place in all villages of Amaseri and in surrounding towns."

Observers reported they found no evidence of a battle, but that some compounds were burned and "all houses of the compound where the incident of 25 December allegedly took place were burned and some were destroyed."

They said one cinder block house was partly destroyed and there were two craters of two or three-foot diameter against a wall and there was a grave inside.

Zoologist Advocates Bonus for Childless

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto zoologist thinks the Canadian government should start paying married couples to remain childless as part of a world-wide effort to stabilize population.

Dr. Christopher Plowright also said in an interview the baby bonus system should be stopped soon.

Dr. Plowright is founder of the first Canadian chapter of Zero Population Growth, an International organization formed to stop the population explosion.

"One popular idea right now is to pay people not to have babies," he said. "The longer a couple goes without having children, the greater should be their payment from the government."

He suggested legislation to limit family size was "a foreseeable possibility," but he hoped it wouldn't be necessary.

Dr. Plowright, whose Toronto chapter of Zero Population has 50 members said neither the Ontario nor federal government has given him "a clear statement on their population policy."

"Population is not a politically popular issue in Canada. Many Canadians are unaware that there is a population problem. We feel we have to do a lot in the field of education to get grass roots support."

Jury in Third Day of Study Of Chicago Riot Evidence

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal jury goes into a third day of deliberations today on the fate of seven men charged with riot conspiracy but the defendants already are in jail and their lawyers have been sentenced to prison for contempt.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman of U.S. district court finished fixing sentences on the defendants for contempt Sunday, then turned to lawyers William M. Kunstler, and Leonard I. Weinglass.

Kunstler, 50, of New York City, was sentenced to 48 months and 13 days on 24 counts of contempt. Weinglass, 36, of Newark, N.J., was sentenced to 20 months and five days in prison on 14 counts.

The judge characterized as "reprehensive conduct," the actions of the lawyers for the seven men charged with conspiracy to incite rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic national convention in Chicago.

He stayed execution of the lawyers' sentences to May 4 to allow them to perform legal duties for their clients, being held in Cook County jail during the jury deliberations.

If convicted of conspiracy, each man faces a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine. The judge denied motions to free the seven on bond pending appeal of the contempt charges.

Weinglass said he was optimistic because the jury had not reached a quick verdict.

"I think . . . there is a reasonable likelihood of an acquittal or a hung jury," he said.

The jury was locked up shortly after noon Saturday and the judge began his contempt citations.

He sent four defendants to jail Saturday and sentenced the remaining three Sunday. Defendants' sentences ranged from 29 months and 16 days for David T. Dellinger, 54, down to two months and 18 days for Lee Weiner, 31. Dellinger was cited on 32 counts and Weiner on seven counts.

Weiner's mother, Ruth Weiner, was reported in fair condition today at hospital where she was admitted Sunday after taking an overdose of drugs. She and Weiner's father were in the courtroom when their son was ordered to jail.

Jerry C. Rubin, 31, was sentenced to 25 months and 23 days on 15 counts; John R. Froines, 31, received six months and 15 days on 10 counts; Thomas E. Hayden, 30, was sentenced to 14 months and 14 days on 11 counts; Rennard C. Davis, 29, received 25 months and five days on 23 counts, and Abbott (Abbie) Hoffman, 31, was sentenced to eight months on 23 counts.

Penalties for each count ranged from one day for such offences as failing to rise when the judge entered the court, or Abbie Hoffman's blowing a kiss to the jury, to six months for direct violations of the judge's orders.

Dellinger was sentenced to six months, the maximum for a single contempt offence without a jury trial, for calling the judge, "Mr.," and Kunstler was given two six-month sentences for statements he made Feb. 2.

During an argument, Kunstler told the judge, "You have violated every principle of fair play." Later in the same session, the lawyer called the trial a "legal lynching."

Froines was given a month on one count "for laughing aloud."

Abbie Hoffman received five days for a Feb. 4 outburst during which he said to the judge: "You're a disgrace to the Jews, you little runt." He received six days for an outburst on the following day during which he used obscenities and often referred to the judge as "Julie."

A legal team of seven lawyers announced Sunday it was preparing briefs to appeal the contempt charges. The American Civil Liberties Union criticized the judge's action and said it would play a "very substantial role" in expected appeals.

Dominican Plane Crash Kills All 103 Aboard

SANTO DOMINGO (CP) — All 103 persons aboard a Dominican Airlines DC-9 twin-engined jet, including at least 53 Americans and Puerto Ricans, were believed killed Sunday night when the plane plunged into the Caribbean minutes after take-off.

The plane, bound for San Juan, Puerto Rico, plunged into deep water five miles off the coast of the Dominican Republic. A U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in San Juan said it was carrying 98 passengers and five crew members.

No official casualty list was available early today but hope for survivors faded when a Dominican Navy spokesman said pieces of flesh were found floating near the crash. Earlier unconfirmed reports said 10 persons had been rescued.

If no survivors are found, it will be Latin America's second-worst air crash.

Among those reported aboard was a former world lightweight boxing champion, Carlos (Teo) Cruz, his wife and two children.

Also aboard were the wife, daughter and sister of Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera, who assassinated Dominican dictator Rafael Trujillo in 1961 and headed a ruling junta after the overthrow of President Juan Bosch. His daughter, Leslie, was going to San Juan to buy her wedding dress. She was engaged to the son of the Italian consul.

Liberals Want Government To Rate Municipal Workers

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government should rate the performance of certain municipal departments and publicize the results to help voters select strong leaders, a Liberal committee has recommended.

The six-man committee, in a paper to be presented at the Ontario party's annual meeting this week in Ottawa, recommends a special rating system for fire and police departments, school boards and welfare administration. It did not say how such a system should be administered.

"The basic idea is to elect strong councils, to give them authority to manage the community including the spending of provincial grants without strings, than to hold them accountable by comparing their performance against other councils."

The paper, released during the weekend, says good men would be attracted to municipal politics if they felt they were really managing a community.

And the councils "should have unconditional authority to spend the per capita tax sharing grants from the province."

Purpose of the rating system would be to force councils to achieve maximum efficiency—the best services at the lowest cost.

Another paper, prepared by the party policy committee, says regional governments should be established only when desired by the citizens involved.

It says regional government should be introduced only where a majority of citizens are not only prepared for it, but "actively desire it."

Creation of regional governments "must stand for less government, not more. . . ."

The rating system report was prepared by Donald Deacon (York Centre), Timothy Reid (Scarborough East), Donald Paterson (Essex South), Dante DeMonte (Dovercourt), Richard Smith (Nipissing) and Edward Good (Waterloo North).

Sopha Takes Issue With Double Charges

SUDBURY (CP) — Lawyer and politician Elmer Sopha is challenging the practice of charging a driver with both impaired driving and having more than .08 per cent alcohol in the blood on grounds that it places the accused in double jeopardy.

Mr. Sopha, Liberal member of the legislature for Sudbury, says provisions providing for the laying of both charges "are being used by the court as a sort of insurance mechanism—one charge is held in abeyance in case they can't get you on the other."

He has applied for a writ of prohibition in the case of Rejean Fluet of Dowling, Ont., charged with both offences in connection with an incident last Dec. 7.

The writ would mean the legal basis of the case will be decided by a higher court.

Fluet, who appeared in Sudbury court Friday, has been remanded to March 13, when Mr. Sopha's arguments will be considered by a district court judge.

Political Disruption Possible Aid Benefit

TORONTO (CP) — Political disruption within some underdeveloped countries may be one of the beneficial results of foreign aid, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp suggested Sunday.

Addressing a Lenten program at Fairlawn United Church here, Mr. Sharp said philanthropic and humanitarian ideas have been the strongest motive for Canadian aid. He challenged the view, expressed by some, that reducing hunger and misery would have a stabilizing effect on poor countries.

"The assumption that the developed nations' best interests are served by maintaining the status quo through the judicious supply of aid is both arrogant and unfounded," he said.

"There are countries where one can only hope that in due time development assistance will give to the people the sinews they need to rise and cast aside the cruel weight of unjust and unprincipled government."

But the unrest would only be "a transitional period leading eventually to a stabler and more prosperous world."

The text of Mr. Sharp's address was released to the press in advance.

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

Hungerford Road Superintenden Resigns When Pay Raise Deniec

A resolution was passed to make application to the Department of Highways for balance of subsidy on 1969 road expenditures.

Donald Palmateer asked council to consider improving condition of some hills on roads leading to his place. He was told that council planned to make an inspection tour of roads prior to allocating of road expenditures, and his request would be considered, at that time.

Mr. Thomlinson, manager Ontario Hydro, was called to meeting to give council a more detailed explanation of their survey of the suggested changes of the street lighting in the hamlet of Marlbank, so the council could better inform the ratepayers of that lighted area, of the proposed improvements and costs. The council thought the best way would be to meet some place in Marlbank, so that ratepayers there would have an advantage to decide whether council should proceed with any changes which could entail additional cost.

It was also decided that the Sheffield Fire Department should be contacted, to have them attend the next meeting of council to discuss fire protection for the southeast portion of the township, which could be better served by the department.

A resolution was passed, that council go into committee of the whole on bylaws with the reeve in the chair.

Kinsmen Bantams Lone Survivors

After taking a 7-2 decision from their Trenton counterparts Sunday the Blake Kerr midgets and Rollins Construction Peewees absorbed close 4-3 and 3-2 losses to the Trenton all-stars to be eliminated in their respective first-round series.

The Kinsman emerged from the four-game series with Trenton with two wins and a tie against one loss, outscoring the opposition 20-8 overall.

Andy Ricketts fired two goals in yesterday's 7-2 win giving him a total of eight in the four-game series. Mark Coates, Grant Goegan, Dave Flesch, Steve Kirby and Paul Ackerman were the other Kinsmen scorers.

The bantam all-stars see action Sunday night when Whitby visits the Memorial Arena for an 8 p.m. contest to open the second round of the playoffs.

The Blake Kerr midgets suffered a tough 4-3 loss to Trenton despite outshooting the visitors 37-20. Kevin O'Donnell scored Trenton's winning goal at 13:00 of the final period.

Steve Keech had given Trenton a 3-0 lead with his first-period hat trick. Dave Smith scored twice and Tim Yohn once for Belleville, to tie the game in the middle frame. After dropping the series opener 11-6, the Imperials had forced a deciding game with a neat 5-3.

Bob Thompson of Trenton scored at the 10-minute mark of the third period to hand the Rollins Construction PeeWees a 3-2 loss. The goal was his second of the game with Robbie Outwater scoring the other Trenton marker. Bob Thompson of Belleville and Gary Thompson were the Rollins marksmen.

In other action Sunday, the Towers Food City Novices took the first step towards their third consecutive Zone 4 championship by defeating Trenton 9-1.

Bobby Crawford paced the winners with a four-goal effort, while teammate Randy Hutchinson scored twice. Andy Lupenette, Ricky Sprague and Dave McBride were the other Towers goalscorers. Jotham scored the only goal for Trenton, who drew two of the game's seven penalties.

In a tournament in Prescott on Saturday the Food City team won their first game by default and added a 5-4 overtime win against Cornwall to capture the championship.

Bobby Crawford was a standout for Belleville scoring two of his three goals in the overtime period. Randy Hutinson and Bennett were the other scorers. Towers drew two penalties against five for Cornwall.

Wilson Tykes Sweep Pair on Weekend

Belleville minor hockey teams won all three regular season games on the weekend as the Wilson Concrete Tykes clobbered Bowmanville 10-0 on Saturday and recorded their first win against Peterborough when they took a 5-2 decision Sunday. In the other game played, Mulroney's Sunoco Novice B team came through with a 4-1 win over Campbellford.

In Saturday's contest played at Orono, Mark Crawford had a hat trick and Wayne Dayton scored two goals to pace the tyke attack. Chris Valentine, Bill Rowe, Peter Fredette, Brad Miller and Larry Dayton scored one goal apiece for the winners, with Bob Hedge adding three assists.

Against Peterborough, Crawford had two goals with singles going to Valentine, Fredette and Steve Mofina. Wayne Dayton notched three helpers for the Wilson's Tykes.

Bruce McKinney led the Mulroney's B team to their 4-1 win against Campbellford, scoring two goals. Mark Coughlin and Ron Doornbos were the other goal-getters.

Bruins Clean Comets

The Bruins of the Northern Electric Hockey league pulled an upset Sunday as they defeated the Comets 5-2 to win their two game total - point playoff series 9-7. The Comets had finished in first place during the regular season. In the other series the Dukes and Bonkers played to a 3-3 tie, with the Dukes taking the round 10-5.

Larry Lupenette had two goals and a pair of assists to pace the Bruin attack, with Bill Goodfellow scoring twice and adding a helper. Dwight Rathwell was the other Bruin scorer. Peter Rooke and Bob Baitley were the Comet marksmen. The winners had three penalties against two for the Comets.

Wayne Twiddy fired two goals and an assist to lead the Dukes into the finals. Bob Moon scored once and Rick Rosebush added a pair of assists. Bob Totten scored twice and Morco Mior once for the Bonkers, who drew one of the game's three penalties.

Tire Manufacturers Do Best To Market Reliable Product

By RAY STAPLEY

I have visited the factories of the leading tire manufacturers in Europe and North America, and I am convinced that not only are they capable of producing a reliable product but they are doing everything possible to do so.

At one U.S. laboratory I saw a tire rated for 85 miles per hour spun up without load or contact to demonstrate the effect of centrifugal force at high speeds. This test was conducted in a cell lined with steel boiler plate, and we left the room to watch the test on a TV monitor in the lab. Dials were turned on the control panel and the wheel began to rotate, its speed measured by a speedometer on the panel. When it hit about 200 miles an hour the body of the tire started to balloon out and reached enormous proportions as it finally disintegrated at 331 mph.

When we returned to the cell I could see why it had been lined in boiler plate. The tire had blown into a thousand pieces.

In another laboratory I witnessed several overloaded and underinflated tires being tested to establish exactly how much punishment a tire can stand. And, they don't stop until the tire is destroyed. Smoke was pouring out of these overburdened tires, and it is incredible how many hours they will run under these conditions before they disintegrate.

Then, after they do fail, they are cut into dozens of pieces and a meticulous post mortem is performed to locate stress points and weaknesses.

To point out the disastrous effects of underinflation, they inflated a tire to only 20 lbs. pressure and proceeded to spin it at 120 mph (normal pressure at this speed would be about 32 pounds).

High speed cameras were used to take photographs of the deformed shape of the tire as it rotated. I saw the photographs and the tire's tread section that was pressed under load against the test wheel did not go back into round for approximately half a revolution of the tire.

I saw another machine, a two-storey high press, force a steel plunger into the tread of a tire while instruments measured the force required to cause a fracture.

At the Daytona International Speedway in Florida, a professional driver bombed me around the track in a high performance stock sports car at 140 miles per hour, the fastest I have ever travelled by car. On another occasion I visited a multi-million dollar proving ground in Texas, where in one year 400,000,000 test miles were recorded without the loss of one single life.

A crack test driver drove me around a track capable of handling speeds of up to 200 miles per hour. I saw tires being tested at fantastic speeds on asphalt, cement, gravel, sand and cobblestone surfaces. During these tests in the blazing sun with the temperature hovering around the 100 degree mark, tires were subjected to the tortures of Hades — there's no other way to describe it.

Remember, the tires that allow professional drivers to push their cars toward the speed of sound are designed and produced by the same factories that make the tires for our cars. These same plants make the tires for the ultimate punishment of jet aircraft landings. While such tires cost thousands of dollars, we expect to buy a whole set of tires for a fraction of the cost of one aircraft tire.

As well as withstanding the burning temperatures of equatorial deserts and the sub-zero cold of our northern areas, modern tires are almost impervious to the chemicals we throw on our roads, and they can bear normal beating from stones, potholes, curbs and the brutality of some drivers. Apart from providing a comfortable ride, and adhesion to propel and to stop a car, the tires play a vital role in a vehicle's handling characteristics.

Today's tire goes farther, lasts longer and costs less than the tires we used to buy. In the early 20s tires sold for about 1.67 a pound. Today, even with our inflated dollar, the price has dropped to something like $1.20 and mileage is perhaps ten times more than in the good old days.

RCMP Chief Denies Probe of Black Clubs

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP Sunday denied charges by a Canadian Negro organization that they are investigating black communities and clubs.

RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgit said in an interview the charges by the National Black Coalition are unfounded.

"We don't go around investigating all black clubs for no reasons. I deny that unequivocally. I just don't believe it is true."

Edward Clarke, an organizer with the coalition told the Metropolitan Toronto Labor Council Saturday that an RCMP sergeant had told him the investigations were "for reasons of internal security."

In an interview following the council's panel on law enforcement, Dr. Howard McCurdy, coalition chairman, said the RCMP had been conducting investigations of black organizations for two years.

Dr. McCurdy, a professor of biology at the University of Windsor, said that the coalition intends to approach the federal justice department when sufficient data have been collected.

He said the investigations were most intensive in Montreal and Nova Scotia.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

People Ignore Doctor's Warnings

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Why don't people listen to their doctors? Take my husband, for example. He prides himself on taking a yearly physical. Yet he continues to smoke three packs a day, drinks too much, and is at least 40 pounds overweight.

I asked him, "What did your doctor say about it?" All he does is shrug his shoulders and answer, "Forget it. Don't be a nag."

I haven't contacted his doctor, but don't you think he has warned my husband about these dangerous habits? I'll bet he has. — Mrs. O.

• • •

Comment: I'd like to take a stake in part of your bet. I doubt that any heavy smoker or drinker or over-eater can get out of his doctor's office without some kind of warning. Doctors are too aware of the harmful complications of obesity, tobacco and alcohol.

You raise an important question, Mrs. O. Why do so many (like your husband) spend time and money for checkups, yet go about committing slow suicide? They think, "I'm an exception."

Like the soldier who believes no bullet was made to strike him. It is a form of fatalism. Unfortunately, fatalists more often die young. The heavy smoker who says "Lung cancer or heart disease won't get me," may be the very one attacked years later.

The heavy eater who disdains his doctor's warning is more likely to be the one who later suffers from hypertension, diabetes, gall bladder disease, arthritis. And the chronic alcoholic may be ticketed for cirrhosis of the liver long before he believes he is a likely candidate.

• • •

Mrs. O., if you doubt that people actually go about killing themselves, consider the 50,000 traffic deaths yearly. Alcohol and the wheel don't mix. But many a sober driver has killed himself and others because he had too heavy a foot on the accelerator. Fatalism prevented his imagination from working. He could not visualize the consequences of having a blow out — or something else — at 80 miles an hour.

And so it is with patients who do not listen to the warnings by their doctors that they are heading for "crackups."

• • •

For Mrs. U.: Whether a patient with coronary thrombosis will have to take anticoagulants (blood thinners) for months and years will depend upon the doctor's judgment. However, it is not true that we have specific proof that the patient who takes blood thinners for many months will be free from complications; or live longer than the patient whose doctor does not prescribe them after the acute heart attack.

• • •

For Mrs. D.: Rubella (German measles) vaccine is now available. However, your doctor uses good judgment in refusing to give it to you while pregnant. The effects of the vaccine may still be present in the blood weeks after administration, and may pass the placental barrier and affect the growing baby.

Even the non-pregnant woman who receives the vaccine should delay pregnancy for months to make sure there is no damage to the growing fetus.

Strictly Personal

Pilots Oppose Tests

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

While I was visiting New York for a few days during the Christmas season, the chief pilot for the New York Times died suddenly of a heart attack. He was only 45 years old, and luckily was not piloting a company plane at the time of his attack.

I especially noted this incident, for just a few days earlier I had read in that very paper an article saying that the Federation Aviation Administration was planning to require a more rigorous heart test for airline pilots.

This plan — based on the Master Two-Step Test for evaluating possible heart disease — was being violently opposed by the Air Line Pilots Association, which threatened a walkout by its 30,000 members if the FAA went ahead with the more severe test for the pilots' semi-annual physical checkups.

The union expressed fear that many of the pilots over the age of 50 might be grounded if they flunked the Master Two - Step (which it claims is not medically conclusive); at present commercial pilots can captain planes until the age of 60, if they pass current examinations.

Yet everyone knows that experienced pilots are in short supply, and the nation's airlines will desperately need all the experienced men they can find to fly the new jumbo-jets coming into service in 1970.

So that the proposed FAA measure is not something that can be used by the airlines to retire pilots prematurely, to get rid of deadwood, as might be true in another industry. A healthy jet captain is worth his weight in gold — and will be paid just about that annually for flying the jumbo-jets.

Every organization and institution resists measures that seem to restrict its scope, even when such measures are in the public interest and in the interest of its own members. Surely the possibility of undetected coronary disease in commercial pilots is so grave a risk to hundreds of passengers that no margin of error should be allowed for.

The pilots themselves quite properly insist upon the most rigorous inspection of their planes, and refuse to fly with the slightest suspicion of a meaningful malfunction. Yet, like doctors themselves—who so often pay little attention to their own health while insisting on their patients' adherence to a strict regimen — the pilots want more relaxed standards for their bodies than for their vehicles.

The Air Line Pilots Association does its members no service by resisting the new test. One or two accidents because of a coronary attack, and we might find that all captains over 50 are barred, which would be cruelly and stupidly unjust. But when we oppose necessary measures, we often open the door to unnecessary restrictions later.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Pay no attention if neighbors, acquaintances take on a formal manner. Your own quiet candor requires such a response. Caution in driving or use of mechanical equipment is urged.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Snap decisions are extremely costly — it isn't just the waste of money but the later disruption of good plans that dismays others as well as yourself.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Bring your performance record to attention, negotiate an improvement in conditions. Long-term commitments are favored. Consider what changes would benefit your home, make life easier and more comfortable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Seek movement and change of views, new scenes fresh areas of earning. Speculation should not be impulsive, but more a matter of well - calculated probability. Take home something nice for your loved ones this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Consolidate your position; cash in on any gains. Property dealings promise much more, but in all matters be sure of the soundness of the parties you deal with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Some of today's surprises are quite happy. Trivial inconveniences have to be tolerated in good grace. Communication supplies suffer interruptions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An independent mood hits you. Be sure nobody is upset or left without notice as you scoot off to some personal relaxation outside your regular groove. Give deep thought to your plans, possible revisions.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): There's nothing quite so certain today as your susceptibility to difficulty if you flout rules and courtesy.

Young New Democrats Accused of Drug Use

TORONTO (CP) — William Zock, retiring secretary of the Ontario Young New Democrats, lashed out at his own organization Saturday and criticized members for vandalism, drug-taking and drunkenness.

He presented a report to the 134 delegates at the youth party's annual convention saying conduct of some members was "appalling" at two meetings last year.

He said an unnamed executive member supplied drugs to youth delegates attending a provincial NDP council meeting last year in Brantford, Ont.

"It was appalling that in Brantford several members indulged in the use of narcotic drugs while representing the OYND as delegates to a meeting of the provincial council.

"But (it was) even more appalling that the drugs were supplied by an executive member, and that the act took place on the property of the Brantford Trades and Labor Club.

"This irresponsibility, if detected by the police, could have severely damaged not only our organization, but also and more importantly, the entire labor movement in Brantford."

The report also said the United Automobile Workers Union at Port Elgin has refused to allow the OYND to use its facilities again because of drunkenness and vandalism at an OYND meeting there last year.

Decrying the public drunkenness at the conference, Mr. Zock said "the focal point of this immature fiasco was the break-in and wilful destruction and damage to the cafeteria."

He termed the incident "deliberate acts of vandalism."

By a vote of the delegates, the report was not referred to a closed meeting of the conference. Delegates criticized Mr. Zock for making the charges but did not deny them.

Its Location Makes Regional Planning Imperative for Sidney

EDITOR'S NOTE: Second in a series surveying Sidney township by Staff Reporter Ted Ferder.

The location of Sidney Township between Belleville and Trenton makes it imperative any planning and development be carried out on a regional basis.

Sidney Township officials recognized this fact recently when they agreed to take the Belleville resolution of a planning board to its council for consideration.

Trenton chose a plan whereby separate planning boards, one for Trenton, one for Belleville, and one for the rest of Hastings County would be set up.

In addition Trenton has recommended that a joint planning committee comprised of the villages of Brighton and Frankford and the townships of Sidney and Murray be formed to work in close co-operation with the Trenton Planning Board.

Belleville opted for a plan whereby an area planning board together with subordinate zoning boards for each municipality would be set up.

"It is important we work together because it is felt Trenton's growth will be to the west and north," said Art Hoornweg, zoning administrator and technical adviser to Trenton and Suburban planning board. He pointed out the Bay of Quinte prevents growth to the south and the Canadian Forces Base, growth to the east.

Trenton's eastern limits border on DND property in the southern section of the town and on Sidney Township further north. Mr. Hoornweg said that just recently, Sidney Township had engaged a firm of consultants to plan an industrial park for the township which he understood would roughly cover the area between the CNR tracks and Highway 401, from the eastern boundary to the western border on Trenton. This plan would pose no problems because Trenton's area bordering this section is already zoned for industry.

The area to the south in Trenton is residential and already has some homes built along the boundary between Sidney Township and Trenton. Problems would result if the township went ahead on its own, and planned industrial sites immediately opposite this area.

Mr. Hoornweg emphasized that the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board has repeatedly made known to township officials it is most anxious to co-operate to ensure sound planning for the area.

"It is recognized by everyone that growth is bound to come," Mr. Hoornweg said. "It will only be through close co-operation and understanding that the immense potential to be realized will be of the utmost benefit to all concerned."

Mr. Hoornweg evidenced concern, however, that unless some comprehensive planning was initiated soon, the splendor and beauty of a waterfront route between Trenton and Belleville would be ruined by uncontrolled buildup of hous-

Control of Credit Is Held in Reserve

Provinces Promise To Tighten Budgets

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal-provincial premiers' conference agreed today to shelve, for the time being at least, the idea of putting controls on consumer credit as a further step in fighting inflation.

"We think there may be other tools more effective, and we won't have to resort to this," said Prime Minister Trudeau as he left the closed-door meeting for lunch.

"We are keeping it in reserve, something we may have to come back to."

General agreement was reached Monday on reinforcing federal anti-inflation measures with tight provincial budgets and proposed rent review boards. Points of detail were left to be ironed out in a communique today.

Several provinces Monday suggested measures to control minimum down payments and maximum repayment periods on consumer loans and time payment plans. The federal government has not, however, made up its mind on the subject.

Mr. Trudeau noted that the federal and 10 provincial governments represent "the totality of government in Canada," and added:

"If we agree we want to stop inflation, we can do it."

At the end of Monday's meeting he said there is "a considerable amount of agreement," and "a great deal of support" for anti-inflation restraints proposed by Dr. John Young's prices and incomes commission.

For Other Stories On The Federal-Provincial Conference See Page 5.

Government officials were assigned the overnight task of drafting a communique which would become binding on the governments if approved today.

Today's conference takes up matters left over from Monday on inflation, and the subjects of pollution control, the Prairie farm situation, and limiting the mounting expense of shared-cost welfare programs.

Dr. Young, who won agreement among industry leaders last week for limiting price increases during 1970 to something less than cost increases, presented two broad propositions to the premiers' meeting, backed up by five specific proposals.

Big Oil Slick Breaks Bounds

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A giant fuel oil slick has floated out of Tampa Bay, circling human defences and threatening to foul additional Gulf Coast beaches.

Weary anti-pollution crews were spread thin Monday as they tried to sop up parts of the 10,000-gallon slick that blackened beaches and coated boats in marinas.

Straw, polyurethane foam, old rags and anything else that would soak up oil was tossed on the black tide.

St. Petersburg Beach, an island resort community separated from the mainland by Boca Ciega Bay, was the first tourist area reached by the slick.

Hundreds of Pinellas Peninsula residents plucked water fowl from the slick and washed them clean with salad oil and corn meal.

But Audubon Society officials said many birds were so weak from struggling in the oil that they died soon after they were cleaned.

Gabriel Blows His Horn

MONTREAL (CP) — Instead of heading for the nearest tavern when he failed his first-year law examinations, Mansour Gabriel decided to sue the University of Montreal.

In his damage suit, the student is claiming $210,000 to cover his 1968-69 tuition fees, "the loss of his profession" and "moral damage resulting from an unjustified decision on the part of the faculty of law."

Mr. Gabriel said he was awarded a 58.1 average in his first-year exams, but deserved to get 85 per cent. The passing grade is 60.

The student said there were three reasons why his marks did not average 85 per cent — the "lack of culture" of those who corrected his papers, the "mediocrity" of the examiners and "the incompetence of the professors."

Stanfield Would Scrap White Paper Proposals

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Monday the government's white paper on proposed tax changes should be scrapped and new proposals for tax reform introduced immediately.

Mr. Stanfield said the government should remove Canadians below the poverty line from income tax roles and institute measures to encourage development of Canadian-owned small businesses and farms.

He made the comments at a news conference following a day-long meeting with about 60 business leaders from across Canada.

Marcel Lambert, Conservative member for Edmonton West, said in an interview following the meeting that a concerted cross-country campaign against the white paper will consist initially of a series of speeches by Mr. Stanfield and others against the white paper.

Mr. Stanfield said a capital gains tax should be instituted which would be imposed only on realized gains at a maximum rate of 25 per cent. The tax should be integrated with estate taxes and not applied to family homes or personal property.

The white paper proposes a maximum rate of 50 per cent on capital gains realized by the sale of assets and would allow realized capital losses as deductions from taxable income.

Mr. Stanfield said his campaign "against the Trudeau government's white paper" will begin Thursday in a speech in Kingston, Ont., home of Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

During the next few weeks, Mr. Stanfield said, he will speak in Montreal, Burlington, Ont., Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Calgary, Kamloops, B.C., and Vancouver.

Nixon Asks Congress To Lower Voting Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration asked Congress today to follow the lead of Britain and approve a constitutional amendment lowering the voting age to 18 for U.S. federal elections.

The administration position was presented by Deputy Attorney-General Richard G. Kleindinest, who noted that Britain—which originated the traditional voting age of 21—recently abandoned it.

"The time has come for us also to measure the constraints of custom and tradition against the compelling force of reason and the every-day facts of life which surrounds us," Kleindienst said.

Ontario Will Hold Tax Line And Balance Budget--Robarts

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario will hold the tax line, balance its 1970-71 budget and make it tougher for landlords to increase rents as the province intensifies the battle on inflation, Premier John Robarts said Monday.

He told a news conference after the first day of federal-provincial conference on the economy that Ontario has "no difficulty" in accepting six proposals aimed at enforcing restrictions on price increases.

The proposals, made to the conference by the federal prices and income commission:

General support for voluntary price restraints; endorsement of a call on the business community to accept restraints; adoption by government of the same basic restraints; limits on rent increases in major municipalities through review boards; pressure for voluntary restraints on professional fee increases; and restrictions on government spending at all levels.

"All this we can go along with," Mr. Roberts said. "Much of it we have already begun to put into effect."

He felt there had been a high degree of agreement among the government leaders.

Ontario already permits municipalities to establish lease-hold bureaus to arbitrate rent disputes under the 1969 Landlord-Tenant Act, but the legislation is permissive.

"It may be necessary to review the functions of those bureaus to see if they can be made to meet the objectives required," Mr. Robarts said.

Ontario already has medical profession agreement to give six months' notice of proposed fee increases and "it might be the proper course for Ontario to confer with all professional bodies, impressing on them how much of society is accepting voluntary restraints and asking them to co-operate."

Organized labor's attitude to restraints on wages "has not been involved at this stage," the premier said.

Ontario will attempt to balance its budget in 1970-71, as it did in 1969-70, and will refrain from borrowing as it seeks to limit expenditures, he said.

"But we don't want programs cut simply to limit expenditures. We do want economies in the operation of all programs."

Mr. Robarts said Ontario will "control increases in those areas where we can exercise control," as in the fees charged for provincial services.

"We don't intend to raise the price of liquor, you will be pleased to hear."

The premier did not specify what sanctions may be imposed on those who flout voluntary price restraints but said "they will be dealt with on an individual basis and I see no problem there."

Separate School Issue Lingers On Board Reluctant to Make 'Snap Decision' in Teacher Dispute

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The dispute between the Hastings - Prince Edward separate school board and its teachers remains unsettled this morning despite a lengthy meeting of the teacher's provincial executive and trustees here last night.

The board remains firm in its decision not to include a new classification system in the 1969-70 teachers' contract and this is the crux of the teacher - trustee dispute.

"The provincial executive of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association was informed last night — when about 10 of its members met with us — that the board was prepared to entertain the concepts concerning definitions of levels for implementation in the 1970-71 year," board chairman E. J. Buckley said this morning. "Definition of levels" is the classification of teachers for salary purposes.

"We are exploring the ramifications of "definition of levels", Mr. Buckley said. "The members of the provincial executive of OECTA who met with us last night explained the pros and cons on definition of levels largely to the board's satisfaction. But the board felt it had completed all negotiations for 1969-70."

The provincial executive is seeking to have the classification clause made retroactive to last September, the beginning of the 1969-70 school year.

"The item being carried over had to do with definition of levels and due to much uncertainty and lack of information concerning this the board has been unable to formulate an adequate opinion on the subject," said Mr. Buckley. "It has been reluctant to make snap decisions on matters that appear to be so significant and far reaching."

The separate school teachers of Hastings and Prince Edward counties handed their resignations to the provincial executive of OECTA last Nov. 21 for submission to the board on Nov. 30.

"Before the resignations were submitted, a mediation meeting between the two parties was arranged by Neil Robertson of Trenton, a former trustee," Frank Griffin, deputy executive director of OECTA said last night.

"At this mediation meeting the board agreed to submit the points in dispute to a teacher - trustee committee for its recommendations. This joint committee met twice and unanimously agreed on levels 1 to 5 of the classification system, a main issue in the dispute.

"The board rejected the findings of this committee for 1969-70. The provincial executive sought at Monday night's meeting the reasons for the board breaching the spirit of the agreement by rejecting the recommendations of the teacher - trustee committee.

"The teacher representatives are of the opinion that they were duped into believing that a satisfactory outcome would be the result of the Nov. 23 meeting," said Mr. Griffin.

"This they believe was done so that teacher resignations would not be handed in on Nov. 30. The teachers are now locked into their positions until June, 1970," he added.

(Teachers are permitted by law to resign on two dates each year — on Nov. 30 to take effect Dec. 31 and on May 31 to take effect Aug. 31.)

In a statement released last night after the meeting, Mr. Griffin outlined the four reasons the board gave for rejecting the teacher-trustee committee's recommendations concerning classifications.

His statement follows:

- The board said that the department of education was about to change teacher certification in the near future and this would have a bearing on salary reclassification. To this the teachers replied that no such change was anticipated in the near future and that any contemplated change, about 1975, would still not have any bearing on the classification system.
- The board said it was unable to get qualified teachers in isolated areas of the county. The provincial executive could see no connection between this reason and the refusal to set up a classification system.

Mr. Griffin said the department of education anticipates a surplus of elementary teachers this September and intimates it will issue no more letters of permission to unqualified teachers.

"But we included a clause in the 1969-70 classification system stating that if an unqualified teacher was valuable to the board, he would suffer no loss of pay in 1969-70," Mr. Griffin said.

- On being questioned on costs, the board was unable to give a figure on additional costs arising from teacher reclassification because they had not yet estimated it. Trustees were asked how they could say it would cost too much when the cost was unknown, Mr. Griffin said.

"We maintain costs would not be great because only a few teachers are affected," commented Mr. Griffin.

- The board said the teachers lack statistical proof of the worth of a definition of levels in encouraging teachers to up-grade themselves.

The teacher representative said that they had statistical proof to show that boards which did have an adequate classification system had fewer teachers in the lower levels and more in the higher levels than boards like Hastings - Prince Edward with an inadequate classification system. The teachers said that this board is the exception to the rule, in that every board of any consequence in Ontario has adequate definition of levels.

After issuing his press release, Mr. Griffin added that more than 50 of the 60 separate school boards in the province have adequate definition of levels.

"This board's classification system provides for only four rigid classifications for elementary school teachers," Mr. Griffin said. "These classifications ignore specialist qualifications like music and art which many elementary teachers obtain to improve their teaching."

The provincial executive, empowered last week to act for the 189 local teachers, will call a teachers' information meeting "within the next few days" Mr. Griffin said.

"We will decide then, with them, on a further course of action," he concluded.

Trenton To Review Bingo

TRENTON — This town's three - man administrative board was directed by council Monday evening to conduct a review of all bingo games operated in the municipality.

Purpose of the review is to study which nights are being used and which are available. The review is to be completed before new permits are issued, but council expressed the opinion that organizations which are currently operating bingos should get preference over newcomers.

Council's action came in response to an application for a bingo permit by the Trenton Rotary Club.

In other action council authorized the takeover of the Dufferin Development subdivision by the municipality which will be responsible for maintenance, as well as the erection of a "Welcome to Trenton" sign for the west end of Centennial Park.

A council directive authorized the town to request that the Ontario Housing Corporation conduct a survey concerning the possible construction of further low-rental housing in Trenton.

Regional Planning Imperative For Sidney Due Its Location

ing, industry and commercial enterprises along the highway.

If present plans to widen the highway into four lanes materialize, it is his opinion the natural beauty of the route be preserved with any development of the area restricted to an area north of the highway.

Additional emphasis is placed on co-operative planning by the fact that Sidney Township is bordered by the City of Belleville on its lower eastern boundary. This is accentuated by the recent action of Belleville City Council in its decision on which type of planning board it feels is necessary in the future.

The council decided that application be made to the minister of municipal affairs for the approval of the establishment of an area planning board, together with subordinate zoning boards for each municipality. The area would be comprised of the townships of Murray, Sidney and Thurlow — the village of Frankford — the town of Trenton and the City of Belleville.

Active participation of the present 11-member Belleville and Suburban Planning Board consists of three members from Sidney Township; three members of Thurlow Township and five from Belleville. The area covered by this board is roughly 82 square miles and includes the southeast corner of Sidney Township; almost the entire southern half of the township of Thurlow, and the City of Belleville.

Bert Kenny, planning director of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board expressed his opinion that the planning of an industrial park in Sidney township would not appear to disrupt any future plans for the area as a whole. He felt that this plan, and any others there might be, would be viewed by the municipal affairs department in the light of their over-all effect on the total planning area.

A development plan which might be typical of those expected should an area planning board be formed is one that has already been five years in the making.

Hallcraft Developments Limited of Belleville has such a proposal known as the Hastings Park Secondary Plan. The area covered by this plan is located in the southeastern corner of Sidney Township, bounded on the south by Highway No. 2, on the east by Avondale and Marshall Roads, on the north by Hastings - Belleville Suburban Road 5A, and on the west by Avonlough Road.

It comprises over 450 acres of land, very little of which has been developed.

Completely modern in its concept, the plan includes single family and semi-detached units, town housing and apartments. Schools, shopping centres and parks are also included.

Total population of the area would be approximately 10,515 including a projected student population of about 2,900.

Almost all development within the Township of Sidney has taken place without comprehensive planning. Approval of the Ontario Municipal Board and the department of municipal affairs has been gained however, for an area of 66 lots zoned and approved for cottages. The area is west of the Trent River—north of Frankford.

Sidney, particularly that area lying south of Highway 401 to the broken front on the Bay of Quinte, is generally recognized as having immense growth potential. The manner in which this growth takes place will determine the benefits to be derived by all concerned. The localities and close proximity of all municipalities would indicate an imperative need for the utmost co-operation and wisdom of those charged with the responsibility of future planning.

Recent decisions by muncicipal bodies in efforts to create a sewer and water service area, and talks about regional planning would seem to indicate a conscientious attempt to fulfill these responsibilities is taking place.

Four Crews Picked To Operate 707s

TRENTON — Four flight crews from Air Transport Command's 437 squadron stationed at Canadian Forces Base Trenton, have been selected to undergo Boeing 707 conversion training.

The first of two courses for the specified air crew, pilots, navigators and flight engineers will be held at Boeing's Seattle, Washington plant from Feb. 19 to April 10.

A spokesman for the public information office at CFB Trenton said this morning that approximately 40 trainees — about one-half the total air crew for Canada's four new Boeing 707s — will be included in the initial two conversion training courses. The second seven-week course runs from March 5 to April 23.

Trenton-based 437 Squadron, which currently operates the Canadian Forces fleet of 12 Yukon transports, will fly the new jets — the replacement for the turbo - prop Yukon.

Following completion of the first training course during the first or second week in April, crews will come back operational with two of the four 707s. The other two planes will accompany the second group of air crew.

The spokesman at CFB said that additional training of 707 air crew and ground personnel will be announced as plans, now under study, are completed.

Credit Curbs Studied

He asked first for agreement that rapidly rising prices and costs have got to be arrested, and that governments generally endorsed the price restraint plan worked out with industry leaders last week.

Specifically, he asked the provinces to:

—Restrain their own government spending, lending, and borrowing, and make it clear to everyone that "further increases in taxes might well be forthcoming if current efforts to restrain price and income increases fail to achieve sufficiently marked progress."

—Ensure that government-owned agencies, and enterprises regulated by government, observe the same criteria on pricing goods and services that private industry is to observe.

—Establish, or empower the municipalities to set up, rent review boards in all major urban centres to see that higher rents charged on existing self-contained accommodation are justified to the extent that they cover only major operating cost increases, such as municipal taxes and maintenance.

—Use their powers of control or influence over major professional groups, such as associations of doctors, dentists, lawyers, engineers, architects, accountants and nurses, to defer increases in fee schedules for the balance of 1970.

—Withdraw financial assistance or purchase orders from any firm flagrantly failing to comply with the price restraint policies agreed to by industry.

Federal sources at the conference said the premiers readily agreed to endorse Dr. Young's action with industry leaders. The 11 governments now are expected to ask the prices and incomes commission to call formally on industry to adhere to the price restraints.

A subject not included in Dr. Young's recommendations, but widely discussed at the closed meeting, was the need for consumer credit controls—regulations that would require people using time-payment plans to put, say, a minimum of 15 or 25 per cent down and pay off the balance in a strictly limited period of time.

A federal source said this subject now is regarded as a matter of federal fiscal policy—indicating that it might be included in Finance Minister Edgar Benson's federal budget early next month.

Mr. Benson indicated to the conference that the subject has not been settled in the government's own mind. Federal authorities are believed to have found a way around the legal contention that such controls are within provincial constitutional jurisdiction.

Premier John Robarts gave the conference his government's assessment that the anti-inflation battle in Canada and the United States has already, broadly speaking, been won, and only mopping-up is needed now. He said the conference should be considering longer-range policies to put the country on a plan of controlled expansion.

Privately, federal officials disagreed. They said there isn't sufficient evidence yet that prices, wages and costs are slowing their advance. The latest consumer price index, for January, showed the same rate of increase over a year ago—4.6 per cent—as did the December index.

Survey Needed

Cannifton Road Traffic Plugged

Traffic overload — particularly on Cannifton Road — may necessitate an engineering survey on Belleville's northside.

However, such a move must await a decision on the conceptual plan for downtown urban renewal, says Alderman Arthur Keegan, chairman of the city's traffic and light committee.

"The whole situation in the northend has got to be considered and reviewed," the alderman said after the committee discussed the situation yesterday.

Involved would be the city's main north-south arterial arteries — North Front Street and Cannifton Road.

The buildup of traffic — particularly on Thurday, and Friday late shopping nights — often creates a lineup extending far down Station Street, he noted.

This is due to a combination of complications — College Street traffic lights adjacent to a CNR level-crossing, natural increase of volume and more traffic created by diversion of an east-west county road carrying rural residents to the city.

The committee will not yet make any definite recommendation to city council on the survey.

Such a move will hinge on the outcome of a downtown conceptual plan based on a recent urban renewal study.

However, a start on the conceptual plan in turn hinges on an Ontario Municipal Board decision on Belleville's proposed northend shopping plaza.

(The plaza project now is being reviewed by OMB officials following a six-day hearing which ended in Belleville last week).

If the urban renewal concept for the downtown core doesn't involve north - south traffic movement, then the traffic engineering survey must be considered, indicates Ald. Keegan.

Such a review would take six months to a year, he believes.

"We can't wait any longer. We've just got to do something and that's all there is to it," he says.

Upright and just in all his days.
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories he left behind.

But our memories of you will never die,
We miss you more than anyone knows,
As each day passes our emptiness grows,
The tears we shed will wipe away,
But the ache in our hearts will always stay,
You left so suddenly your thoughts unknown,
But you left us memories we are proud to own.

Five Year Possibility

Prince Edward Schools Face $3 Million Capital Expenditure

PICTON — Education in Prince Edward County may require a capital expenditure of at least $3,000,000 within the next five years.

George Flower one of three Ameliasburg township representatives on the County Board of Education mentioned the seven figure amount as an estimate for a five-year forecast requested by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Mr. Flower explained that he did not suggest spending the sum he quoted. It would serve the board as a guide for getting its house in order in the event of a call for a large capital expenditure later.

The Board is committed to providing accommodation for increasing number of elementary and secondary students throughout the county.

Evidence of continuing growth in the school population was the board's decision to budget $27,000 for three new portable classrooms needed by next September to ease crowding in the system. The board also decided to offer $40,000 for five portable classrooms under lease since the term started last fall. The owners will be asked to include the year's insurance coverage on the buildings with the deal.

There is a possibility 1,700 students in the system will be supplied with free milk. The total being considered includes kindergarten and grades 1, 2 and 3.

However, if board member Mrs. Dorothea Carson had her way all 5,000 in the Prince Edward County system would receive a free daily ration of milk.

The proposal was viewed as having merit from a public relations standpoint and a means of putting the county's surplus milk to the best use.

Cost of supplying a student with free milk for the school term is $20. This means that, unless the board is able to obtain supplies below dairy prices, there is little hope of a blanket plan becoming a reality. The cost for all of the 5,000 students in the county would be far beyond anything within the board's present financial resources, the board agreed.

Board member Mrs. R. Hart's motion that $10,000 be earmarked in the budget for implementing a free - milk program carried by a majority vote. At first kindergarten and the first three grades in the elementary schools will be involved. The appropriation will permit the administration to observe the program in operation for four months from September through to December and then make any necessary recommendations. If a cheaper source of milk can be found it may be possible to expand the program came out in the discussion.

Transportation chairman H. Montgomery's recommendation that Elliott Motor's tender of $6,165 for a new school bus for Wellington be accepted received the approval of the board.

Consideration will be given to a request for financial assistance in building at least three open air rinks in the county for students' use in the winter time another year.

Humane Society Asks for Review

TRENTON — The general manager of the Ontario Humane Society asked Trenton council Monday night to reconsider its decision to terminate their animal services control contract.

"This was set up as a cost-sharing arrangement (between Belleville and Trenton) and will rise or fall as a cost-sharing arrangement," Tom Hughes told town council.

Mr. Hughes told council that the society would be unable to exist only on the contract with Belleville. If Trenton quit as presently planned, Belleville would be forced to purchase animal control services from another source.

Town council hired Don Tucker, of Stirling, as animal control officer two weeks ago. Primary reason behind Mr. Tucker's hiring was a $5,000 annual saving to the town.

Mr. Hughes told council that the one-man dog-catching operation was disappearing because it simply could not supply the same services as a group like the Humane Society.

Stressing the need for a regional system, Mr. Hughes said that the Humane Society wanted to spend $25,000 within the next three months to complete renovation of current facilities. The building is located just west of Belleville on Sidney township's first concession in a former artificial insemination unit.

Mr. Hughes admitted that the Society would have been further ahead to construct a new modern shelter rather than purchase and renovate an existing structure. But, he insisted, that purchase of an existing structure was dictated by the urgency with which Belleville required animal control services.

The town voted to give the Humane Society the proper six months notice a fortnight ago and, pending review of the Humane Society's latest approach to council, that contract will terminate August 4, 1970.

Councillor Ted Parker noted that the Society hadn't built a new structure as Trenton was led to believe they would, emphasizing: "We didn't get what we bargained for".

Animal control officer Mrs. Shirley Morin said in a letter to council that in the past Mr. Tucker had an agreement with Queen's University to provide some animals for research purposes, whereas the Humane Society disposed of animals humanely.

However it was pointed out that Mr. Tucker disposed of the animals with a shotgun on the recommendation of the Ontario Humane Society.

The Society's letter asked if the animals were properly cared for and suggested that his treatment of the animals might be inferior to the Society's because he had a profit motive whereas the Humane Society was strictly a non-profit venture.

Council is expected to review the animal control situation at next week's committee of the whole meeting.

Clinic Seeks 275 Pints

TRENTON — Parking meters near the Canadian Legion Hall on Quinte Street won't collect many coins Monday, March 2.

The town's parking authority has been asked to provide free parking to citizens attending Trenton's first blood donor clinic of the decade.

Mayor Duncan McDonald made the request that the parking authority cover the meters in the area for the convenience of blood donors. The request was prompted by an inquiry from Mrs. Marg Berry, chariman of the Trenton blood donor clinic.

Mrs. Berry said that the clinic would be open from 2.30 to 5 p.m. and from 6.30 to 8.30 p.m. and would be staffed by a Red Cross mobile unit operating out of Toronto.

Goal of the clinic is 275 units of blood Mrs. Berry reported. This is more than one-third of the record 776 units collected at Trenton's three clinics last year.

However contributions at the summer clinic usually run below those of the spring and fall clinics and if the 275 target is reached Trenton will be on a comparable level to last year's record performance.

Blood collected at the March 2 clinic will be shipped to Red Cross headquarters in Toronto. Trenton Memorial Hospital relies on the Red Cross blood bank for weekly supplies throughout the year.

The Red Cross Society's rotating system of clinics across the province provides fresh daily supplies for the needs of hospitals throughout the province.

Manoeuvring six-ton facing slab on new Loyalist College technology wing yesterday called for big effort by men and machines. Two mobile cranes with booms totalling more than 160 feet were needed to span project before ticklish operation was completed.

Summer Youth Projects Planned

This summer, the young people of Belleville will have a head start at doing their thing — with the help of a number of projects designed especially for their needs.

All kinds of new events will be hapenning for city teenagers, with the backing of most community organizations as part of the effort.

The facts were revealed at a meeting of community representatives and YMCA officials held last night.

Representatives of community organizations involved with youth programs in the city (Kiwanis, Kinsmen, the schools) are putting in motion plans for summer projects designed to capture the interest and enthusiasm of the young Bellevillians.

Young people also attended the meeting, and voiced what they felt were the most pressing needs that had to be met, particularly during summer months when teenagers are on vacation.

The teenagers expressed the need for more summer projects which would profitably utilize their spare time, and, simultaneously involve them in worthwhile projects.

Already organized by one of the Y's program directors are a number of programs for a group called Opus Teens. These include child care for girls and gardening for boys.

Representatives discussed the possibility of establishing more drop-in centres throughout the city, so that teens in every part of Belleville would be able to have a centre of their own close at hand.

Women and girls' program director at the Y, Maureen Kelly, explained that interest was expressed in a "youth-training program" and job placement service for young people during the summer.

"The YMCA also wants to assist in backing a hostel for transient youth, which would, if successful, be continued the rest of the year as well", said Miss Kelly.

She indicated that the Y was interested in helping to get these various projects "off the ground", and continue to back them once they are started.

"Adults at the meeting were most receptive to what the young people had to say, and agreed with the needs they expressed. I think this is an indication of future co-operation which will mean the complete success of all of these proposed projects", she added.

Hospital Plan Still Possibility

PICTON — A provincial, federal and municipal scheme here to transform the unoccupied buildings remaining in Camp Picton into a multi-purpose hospital could become fact in approximately 30 days.

Picton mayor, H. J. McFarland, announced this morning that he and Norris Whitney, MPP for Prince Edward, were working together on the project — he from the federal end of things, Mr. Whitney from the provincial end.

He said that the details could possibly be worked out between provincial and federal government officials by the end of 30 days.

Mr. McFarland added that it was quite possible the federal government could be talking about the matter today whereby the provincial government would be taking over control of such a hospital.

The Camp Picton site is ideal for such a hospital complex because most of the structures have already been constructed — used by the military when the camp was operating near Picton, the Picton mayor said.

Mr. McFarland explained that approximately 240 houses could be utilized as well as other constructed buildings such as churches and schools. The area also contains playgrounds and parks.

Such a hospital would enable long-term treatment for patients with such ailments as mental retardation in that families would be able to live near the hospital itself.

He said that the hospital would probably handle between 800 and 1,000 patients.

Blue-Chip Blood Donor

William Smith of Trenton receives a certificate from Marg Berry, chairman of the Trenton blood donor committee. The certificate, signed by Governor-General Roland Michener, recognizes Mr. Smith's contribution of more than 50 units (pints) of blood given at Red Cross blood donor clinics in Canada, Germany and Scotland.

Mayor Opposes Land Acquisition

TRENTON — Two council members — Mayor Duncan McDonald and Councillor Neil Robertson — opposed a resolution at last night's council session that the town include $20,000 in its 1970 current budget for the acquisition of land for municipal purposes.

Mayor McDonald said the high cost of borrowing such a sum of money, or an equivalent, for a necessary expense, made the recommendation uneconomical.

He claimed that the property's value wouldn't increase sufficiently to cover the high cost of borrowing. If possible current funds should be used for capital expenditures.

Councillor Paul Tripp defended his resolution saying that it guaranteed the money would be considered in the budget. Then, if it weren't feasible, the sum could be set aside at a later date.

The land acquisition will follow the planning methods the town has adopted in the past, Mr. Tripp said.

Trenton Memorial Hospital Board of Governors' appeal for financial support was referred to the town's Administrative Board by council.

The board of governors said it still lacked $8,000 of the $20,000 minimum cost of furnishing the new intensive care unit. A non - recurring grant to defray the cost would create "the best possible reaction from those concerned."

A decision by the Administrative Board is expected along with preparation of the current budget which clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry said would be brought down not later than March 31.

In an action designed to allow proper servicing of the town's streets, council passed a bylaw prohibiting overnight parking from 1 a.m. to 6 a.m.

Just A Blue Day For Bank Robber

TORONTO (CP) — Maybe it was the blue sneakers.

Anyway, Monday turned into one of those days for a would-be Toronto bank robber.

Wearing blue sneakers, he strode into a downtown branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and handed teller Mrs. B. C. Child a note saying: "I want some money."

Mrs. Child thought him a customer and said:

"You'll have to fill in a proper withdrawal slip."

He came back with a second note: "Give me the 50s and 100s."

"Don't be silly," she said, and walked away.

The frustrated robber finally fled, sneakers and all.

Bilingualism Issue

We have no objection in principle to the learning of French by Canadians who do not already have a knowledge of the language. Politics aside, the more capable a person is in languages other than his own native tongue the more valuable and useful he is.

French is not only useful to the traveller in Quebec and in France itself, but as an international language it facilitates communication in many other countries, just as knowledge of Spanish is a big help in Latin America. To deny this is merely churlish and betrays a parochialism which Canadians should be attempting to shake off. This is a big country and there is room for two languages which have been in use here since the early days of colonization.

Where the government falls down, though, in this matter of bilingualism is in its attempts to thrust French down unwilling throats, as if its life depended on this. Indeed, if it keeps it up, the Trudeau government will be cutting its own throat.

The latest chapter in this promotion of bilingualism is the government's designation of bridge) as bilingual customs ports. Customs officers at both places have been instructed to Prescott and Lansdowne (Thousand Islands attend a "total immersion" course in French being held in Hull, Quebec, starting February 23 and continuing in two sessions until May 8.

The decision has produced a strong reaction in the areas concerned, including a protest from the Leeds Liberal Association. Job security is an immediate issue; officers over the age of 55, for example, will not be permitted to take the course, which means they could be transferred or perhaps forced into early retirement.

A much better plan of action by Ottawa would have been a directive advising customs personnel of the advantages of being bilingual, that courses to this end were being planned, but postponing indefinitely any decision to declare the customs ports officially bilingual.

But no, the government, as in so many other spheres, is hell-bent on making another group of employees bilingual virtually overnight. Its haste is unseemly, the plan impractical, the manner in which it is being carried out, inconsiderate. The French have a word for it: gauche.

Rutted Roads

This seasaw of a winter — below zero one day, 30 or 40 above the next — is cotton picking hard on cars and road surfaces alike. Cracks are appearing on the roads and a good example is the Bay bridge. Since we must bear with this archaic structure, narrow, badly-lighted and inconvenient (especially in summer) as it is, the authorities should ensure that the surface at least is properly maintained. And while they are at it, the road surface from the bridge on past Zwick's Island and into town needs repairing also.

Brass Tacks

Slang words and phrases are a bit of a pain. A popular one in politics is to talk about "grass roots," meaning the ordinary voter, man-on-the-street and so on. Now there is a new one making the rounds and it is to refer to the "nitty-gritty" (ugh) of a subject.

Even the church is getting into the slang act, as witness the report from Winnipeg pointing out that a commission studying church union of three Canadian churches has wound up its seventh general meeting on a note of optimism.

It makes us wince, but the said note of optimism is that the commission is finally getting to the "nitty gritty of the problems."

Makes one think of a mouthful of sand, nuts or something. . . !

What ever became of brass tacks?

Bermuda Switches

While still using pound sterling, Bermuda offically has switched to the decimal system. An official of the colony, Britain's oldest, says the changeover is being put into effect as quickly as possible. Dollars, of course, are no problem to an island which caters to a quarter-of-a-million American tourists a year. They account for 75 per cent of Bermuda's economy. Australia and New Zealand have already switched to the decimal system while Britain, ironically, will not do so until next year.

PC's Immigration Critic

Seamen Gain Entry to Canada—Thanks to Steve Paproski

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Big, burly Steven Eugene Paproski — he goes an impressive 20 stone on the scales — has come out a winner in a fight to establish his credentials as Conservative Immigration Critic in the Commons.

It was a tough battle, and victory is all the more sweet.

He was being hammered in the House by Manpower and Immigration Minister Allan MacEachen as a reactionary red-necked bigot.

There were even thinly-veiled hints from the government front benches that he might be something of a racist.

All "Big Steve" had done to fire up this fury was to wonder, very low key, why immigration from Europe was dwindling while on the increase from Asia and the Caribbean countries.

It happens that this is exactly the case as disclosed in Allan MacEachen's report on immigration, but for some still unexplained reason the government seems super - sensitive about it.

So the Liberals put the lash to him, and Conservative Leader Stanfield was so alarmed as to disown Steve Paproski's quiet enquiry about the increasingly obvious imbalance in immigration as "not party policy."

Far from intimidated, Steve Paproski further outraged the sensibilities of Allan MacEachen by asking how come such a well-known world revolutionary and big - scale trouble - maker as Daniel Cohn-Bendit — who led last year's Paris riots that all but brought France to her shaking knees — so easily could enter Canada.

It was passing strange, murmuring "Big Steve" in his soft little voice, that "Danny the Red" could be made welcome while nine Polish sailors, who two months ago had jumped ship in Halifax, must languish in jail.

Steve Paproski makes no secret of his feelings about Allan MacEachen's immigration policies which, he has protested in alarm, are making "a human garbage can of our country."

Anyone can get through Allan MacEachen's wide-mesh immigration net, he claims, "anyone, Algerian terrorists, Black Panthers, American army deserters and draft dodgers, student hellraisers, established nihilists, known anarchists, anyone."

None of this has exactly endeared Conservative Immigration Critic Paproski to Liberal Immigration Minister MacEachen.

Nor, it comes out now, did Steve Paproski's constant daily pounding at Allan MacEachen by phone and mail over the fate of the nine Polish seamen.

And it just might be that the Immigration Minister erupted like a volcano simply out of irritation over his critic's persistence that the Polish seamen be given political sanctuary, the status of landed immigrants and later Canadian citizenship.

By keeping at it, inexorably, through stubborn refusal to ease up on the pressure, Steve Paproski has won his — and the Polish seamen's — case, and established beyond any reservations his weighty worth as Conservative Immigration Critic.

He took up the case of the nine fugitive Poles the day they were jailed at Halifax, and he did not put it down until Allan MacEachen saw it his way.

He threw in with Montreal ethnic radio station proprietor Casmin Stanczkowski to fly the Poles to Montreal from Halifax for Christmas dinner (and back to Halifax and jail again).

But most of all, he just kept writing and phoning Allan MacEachen. And he has proved, beyond question, that he is more concerned with getting the right kind of people in than with keeping the wrong people out of Canada. And more successful at it, too.

Conservative MP for Edmonton Centre, "Big Steve" is quite a character for the Commons.

He refers to his weight in stone — all 20 of them — on the basis that everyone does not know that figures out to 280 pounds. And the big boy is sensitive about his weight.

He is an established construction executive and an industrial wheel in Edmonton — but he is also a former professional wrestler, and centre guard with the Grey Cup winning, 1953 and '54, Edmonton Eskimos Football Club.

He wrestled as "Killer Murphy" in Mexican border towns when he and his pal Gene Kiniski were working on their business administration degrees at the University of Arizona.

The boys, like all students, were short of money, so Steve wrestled as "The Killer," and Gene Kiniski refereed the bouts — a convenient, if questionable but necessary form of picking up the winner's purse.

Steve is the political protege of Gene's mama, the famed Ma Kiniski, who, as an alderman, Motherhemed the Edmonton City Council. "Big Steve" is Mary's "little boy."

He chose politics, grins Steven Eugene Paproski, as the alternative to shedding 50 pounds "so I could continue making $3,000 a year (the going pay at the time) as a pro football player."

He finds Parliament a "much better game." He plays it like the pro he is.

Chicago's Mount Trashmore

Kingston Whig-Standard

In the Chicago area there is a popular mountain known as Mount Trashmore. With an altitude of only 65 feet Mount Trashmore hardly compares with the Rockies. But to residents of Evanston, Ill., the mountain is plenty big enough for a day of winter fun.

Mount Trashmore is part of the 55-acre James Park in suburban Evanston. Ten years ago there was no mountain. In fact, ten years ago there was no park. The site was the city dump. By 1962 the land had been filled by trash and incinerated ash from the city's garbage; a new dump site had been located. That's when the Evanston Parks and Recreation Department stepped in and offered a formal plan for reclaiming the dump to City Council. The park opened in 1965, although not completely finished.

Since then it has become one of the city's most popular parks, as well as its largest. In addition to the popular Mount Trashmore toboggan and sled run, there are four lighted softball fields, four grass diamonds, two baseball diamonds, three playgrounds, eight tennis courts, an archery range and a recently completed warming house. More trees, more walkways and "more things for people" are planned, according to William DiConia, a Parks and Recreation official.

Evanston's handling of the trash problem produced an attractive park and a "mountain". What Evanston city officials have accomplished should be an incentive to Kingston City Council as it considers plans for reclaiming this city's landfill area — plans which thus far include a ski hill and a golf course.

Ulster Botanist Was Albert College Professor More Than a Century Ago

Ulster Commentary

A peak in the Selkirk Mountains of British Columbia, and no less than 48 species of Canadian flora and fauna, were named in honor of one of the most distinguished naturalists and explorers of 19th century Canada — John Macoun.

Born in the County Down village of Magheralin in April, 1831, Macoun emigrated at the age of 19 to Upper Canada and in 1868 he engaged in farming before settling to the study of botany. He was appointed Professor of Natural History at Albert College in Belleville, Ontario.

He lectured there for four years and then set out on a voyage of exploration to western Canada, accompanying Sir Sandford Fleming's expedition as far as Edmonton in the Province of Alberta. From Edmonton he continued westwards to the Pacific coast via the Peace and Fraser Rivers. Then in 1875 three years after this expedition, he made the reverse journey as a member of the Selwyn expedition and took up his Professorial Chair at Albert College.

In 1879 he left his college post and joined the Canadian Geological Survey in order to continue his scientific studies on the plants and soils of the Prairies, realizing their tremendous potential as food-producing areas.

By 1882 he was appointed botanist to the survey and, five years later, combined the duties of Naturalist and assistant director. He travelled throughout the country, collecting and classifying the rich flora and fauna, and then settled in British Columbia, having been elected a Fellow of the Linnaean Society and a charter member of the Royal Society of Canada. Among his many publications were Manitoba and the Great North West (1882) and The Forests of Canada and Their Distribution, (1895).

On Understanding Oneself

Richard Needham in the Globe and Mail

I tell the high school and university students, "Look, you've got food in your belly, which is more than a lot of people have in this world. You've got clothes on your back. You've got a nice warm bed and TV and Beatle records and all the rest of it, so why do you look so miserable? What's the problem?"

After a moment or two of silence, I say, "You don't need to tell me; I know what the problem is. It's your relationship with some other person — your mother, your father, maybe both, your boy friend, your girl friend, isn't that true? Our problems here in present-day Canada aren't really physical or material, we can manage those; it's our individual human relationships that bug us."

I was at a public library in one of southern Ontario's small cities the other night, and after I'd made the above remarks, a girl of perhaps 16 agreed with them, saying, "It's my parents. We can't communicate. I don't understand them, and they don't understand me."

I think we (and especially the young) make a fetish out of "understanding" others, being "understood" by them . . .

Joseph Conrad said, "It is when we try to grapple with another man's intimate need that we perceive how incomprehensible, wavering, and misty are the beings that share with us the sight of the stars and the warmth of the sun." Graham Greene says, "No human being can really understand another, and no one can arrange another' happiness."

That's true. So stop trying to understand some other person, try to understand yourself. And stop trying to make some other person or persons happy. Make yourself happy, be cheerful within yourself, and you'll be surprised how infectious it is. I think the finest thing a person in Canada can do is not to save the Indians, succor the poor, or clean up the lakes, but to laugh and dance and sing . . .

I tell the students this, too, and they inform me that it is "irrelevant", which shows how little they understand me, or life, or history, or the great world they're about to enter. They've been "educated", they've had 13 or more years of it, and they know nothing.

Canada Behind in Research

Quebec Le Soleil: It is a severe warning that Maurice Lamontagne, chairman of the Senate committee on scientific research, has just given to Canadians. He declared that Canada is not only behind but completely out of the running in international research. He was speaking of industrial research and the responsibilities, he says, are divided among industry, the universities and the government. . .

Among industrialized countries, Canada is the smallest contributor to industrial research: 1.3 per cent of the gross national product, compared with 3.4 per cent in the United States and 2.3 per cent in Great Britain. . .

There is an enormous amount to do in this area and the Senate committee of Senator Lamontagne could be the agency to channel all energies (into it). If Canada isn't even in the running in scientific and industrial research, we must begin by putting it in the race.

Maritimes Like Prescription

Ottawa's Inflation Medicine Approved if Dosage Is Right

OTTAWA (CP) — Premiers of the four Atlantic provinces gave broad approval Monday to Ottawa's prescription for anti-inflation medicine.

But they coupled it with a plea for carefully measured doses.

Premier Smith of Nova Scotia said it is too early yet to judge results of the federal-provincial conference on the subject. Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick, on the other hand, described the opening session as more fruitful and harmonious than he expected.

Premier Campbell of Prince Edward Island told reporters his government, and the others "down east," generally endorse an appeal by Prime Minister Trudeau for provincial co-operation. The premiers were asked to support Ottawa and "take positive measures" recommended by Dr. John Young, head of the federal prices and incomes commission.

Dr. Young asked them to hold down government spending; keep prices charged by government agencies well below cost increases; establish rent review boards in major centres; persuade professional groups to forego fee increases, and withdraw government business or support from firms that refuse to follow in price restraint.

All Atlantic premiers promised to keep a rein on provincial spending. But Premier Smith added that Nova Scotia would not want to curtail current efforts to stimulate needed economic growth.

Premier Robichaud qualified his agreement with a reminder "that inflation is caused unequally among the regions of Canada and that therefore every effort must be made to apply anti-inflationary policies unequally among the regions."

He said this might be done by reducing interest rates charged by federal agencies in slow-growth areas, applying different fiscal policies there and continuing or restoring federal-aid programs in these regions.

Mr. Smith suggested Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the federal regional expansion department provide more extensive programs in slow-growth areas to offset the side effects of anti-inflation medicine.

They got reassurance from Prime Minister Trudeau, who said, "We recognize that the situation is not the same in all provinces and therefore the extent and nature of action might differ."

All Maritime premiers agreed that provincial agencies should follow the guidelines for price restraint set for private business. Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said such prices are generally regulated by public utilities boards in any event.

Nova Scotia promised to legislate for rent review boards and Newfoundland will review existing legislation. New Brunswick and P.E.I. premiers said they do not consider rents in their provinces a major factor in the inflation problem.

Mr. Campbell and Mr. Smith would try to persuade professional groups to use restraint in fee-setting but they said the fees now charged are below the national average. Mr. Smallwood said there is little a provincial government can do here except appeal for co-operation.

Premier Smith said Nova Scotia will co-operate in imposition of sanctions against over-charging firms. The other Atlantic leaders voiced doubts about their effectiveness in this field.

However, Mr. Robichaud said, "If it can be shown that we can play a useful role in these areas we are willing to commit our best efforts."

Bertrand Plans Brisk Brawl for $200 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec is scheduled to stop smiling at the federal-provincial conference today.

He said so himself Monday.

For Quebec's Union Nationale leader has scheduled a $200,000,000 showdown with Prime Minister Trudeau's government.

And it all is to happen amid Mr. Bertrand's preparations for a general election in Quebec province this year.

At issue is what Mr. Bertrand calls "the notorious social development tax," levied by the federal government Jan. 1, 1969.

The premier says the tax was imposed to finance medical care insurance, but the province won't enter the plan until July 1 this year.

He says Quebecers have been paying for a service without receiving it and the $200,000,000 to be collected prior to July 1 "must come back to us."

If Ottawa doesn't give the money back, the Bertrand brief to the conference said, Quebec would take "the measures dictated by the situation."

The premier told reporters that he couldn't reveal what measures he has in mind, but he said: "A budget is being prepared at Quebec."

The Union Nationale already has threatened to impose its own social development tax and lay the blame on Ottawa.

Quebec, meanwhile, has proposed that Ottawa agree to transfer $200,000,000 to the province and Mr. Bertrand expects an answer this afternoon.

Anticipating an automatic Ottawa no, Mr. Bertrand told reporters Monday: "we'll be smiling until tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon."

The premier's candid comment reveals something of the politician in the Union Nationale leader, busy with 1970 election strategy.

Mr. Bertrand is fond of quoting publicly from the Bible, especially Ecclesiastes: "To every thing there is a season and a time. . . ."

One might put his strategy here in capsule form as: There is a time to smile and a time to frown and a time to plan elections. . . .

He and his ministers have been flogging Ottawa over the social development tax ever since it was announced in the 1968 budget.

Why all this attention, if not because Mr. Bertrand feels the issue provides good grounds to challenge Trudeau federalism in the 1970 election?

So Mr. Bertrand will likely return to Quebec City as a pleased politician, no matter whether Quebec gets $200,000,000 from Ottawa or not.

Prairie Premiers To Talk of Grain

OTTAWA (CP) — The Prairie premiers were to get their chance today to talk about grain at the federal-provincial conference.

All three indicated they would seek federal incentives to encourage farmers to grow less wheat — and federal efforts to sell more abroad.

It's estimated that by July 31, Canada will have about 1,000,000,000 bushels of unsold wheat on hand.

Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, the worst hit province, told the conference Monday his province is suffering "a recession of major proportions," largely due to its wheat surplus.

Canadians Held in Mexico on Marijuana Charges

KITCHENER (CP) — The Record says two Canadians have been held in an Acapulco jail since Dec. 31 on a charge of possession of marijuana although a jail interpreter thinks they are not guilty.

The newspaper says the two in custody are Neil Van Duffelin and Stuart Kennedy, former students at the University of Waterloo, and both in their early 20s.

In a telephone interview, Manuel Sernandez, a prisoner and interpreter at the jail, said soldiers who arrested the two men may have planted the marijuana.

Sernandez is quoted as saying:

"I think they really are innocent but I don't know if they can prove in court they are innocent."

Under Mexican law, a person is guilty until proven innocent.

Wilfred Shantz, 53, of Ripley, Ont., about 80 miles northwest of here, said he met the two men when he was in the same jail. In an interview Monday, he said he too thought they were innocent.

Shantz was charged with killing a girl who died in a traffic accident which he said he knew nothing about.

He was put in jail Jan. 1 and released Jan. 9 when Acapulco newspapers took up his cause and witnesses in the case reversed their testimony after his insurance company paid $1,000.

The newspaper said that in a letter dated Jan. 19 and sent to a friend in Kitchener, Van Duffelin said:

"The whole issue is dirty and ridiculous and false.

"We headed out to the country along the highway to sleep in the car when we were arrested, jailed and two weeks later charged with possession of 100 kilos of marijuana—it seems to be a game here to pick a foreigner and get him for everything he has."

Sernandez said the two men will probably be sentenced within five days and then would have to prove their innocence in a trial before being released. He said the alternative would be for them to apply for bail after sentence is handed down.

Grenade Charges Dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charges of possessing hand grenades against the daughter of T. C. Douglas, Canadian New Democratic Party leader, last fall were dismissed in federal court here Monday.

U.S. District Court Judge Warren J. Ferguson dismissed indictments returned last Oct. 15 by a federal grand jury against Shirley Jean Sutherland, 35, and Donald Freed, 37.

Ferguson ruled the indictments were deficient because they did not state whether the defendants knew that possessing the grenades was illegal.

Mrs. Sutherland and Freed had been scheduled to stand trial next week on one count each of conspiracy to possess hand grenades and one of physical possession of the weapons.

Farmers Lack Power To Decide for Selves

OTTAWA (CP) — The lack of power among farmers to make decisions for themselves is a "hidden cause" of rural poverty, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture said today.

In a brief presented to the Senate committee on poverty, the federation said opportunities for the small farmer are contracting while the farmer's need for security and price stability was leading to an increased degree of planning.

Changing the picture would involve introduction of much more extensive farm production subsidization to farmers.

But the government views "even the subsidy programs it has at present with evident lack of enthuasiasm," the federation said.

Blind Woman Lies Helpless For Days After Son's Death

TORONTO (CP) — Firemen Monday rescued an 82-year-old blind and bedridden woman from the garbage-strewn home in which she lay helpless, unaware that her son was dead a floor above.

Laura Singleton is believed to have lain in bed for days, unable to find out why her son Henry, 58, did not answer and unable to reach a telephone for help.

Police and firemen went to the $40,000 house after neighbors became concerned that they had not seen Mr. Singleton, described as a "strange man who kept to himself," for a few days.

Police said garbage and boxes were stacked high in every room along with open cans and old food. Two cats were found prowling for food.

One neighbor said Mr. Singleton was once an accountant but did not work "because they apparently had some money." Another said he and his mother moved to the house in 1947 "and he never went out to work since that time."

Mrs. Singleton was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital where she is undergoing x-rays and diagnostic treatment.

Canada Will Stake Its Claim To Control Arctic Navigation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will soon declare its right to bar from the Northwest Passage and its other Arctic seas any ship that threatens to cause pollution, informed sources said Monday.

The Arctic seas pollution prevention bill, to be introduced in the Commons in the next few weeks, will define all Arctic waters in which Canada will proclaim this anti-pollution measure.

By this means, informants said, Canada will not only declare in effect sovereignty over its Arctic waters—that is, the right to make regulations concerning use of these seas—but will be trying to develop international law in this field.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has already declared that Canada will permit innocent passage through its Arctic seas.

But such passage will be conditional on determination by Canada that ships about to use these waters do not threaten to cause pollution.

For instance Canada will insist on the right to inspect any oil tankers plying the Northwest Passage to ensure, as far as possible, that there will be no oil spill in Arctic waters.

Informants said Canada will welcome the flags of all nations at least on non-military vessels in the Northwest Passage.

But it will bar the Passage to Russian military ships on the ground that the Soviet Union has denied access to its Northeast Passage to American coast guard vessels.

Informants said the government is using the anti-pollution method of declaring Canadian regulation of Arctic waters so that it will not have to force the sovereignty issue with other countries, mainly the United States, before there is any need of doing so.

In this way, they said, Canada was protecting its position but keeping it flexible enough to meet a constantly changing situation concerning international law of the sea.

Davis Plans Ceiling On Some School Items

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Education Minister William Davis today will announce a ceiling on certain school board expenditures and an increase in government education grants.

The newspaper quotes a department spokesman as saying the ceiling is designed to eliminate per-pupil expenditures of $15,000 or more by some boards. In future, boards exceeding the authorized ceiling would have to pay the difference out of their own revenues.

The grant increase is the first step in the government's three-year program to take over 60 per cent of the total education costs in the province, the newspaper says.

It quotes the department spokesman as saying the government hopes the grant increase will enable education tax increases at the municipal property level to be held to a minimum.

Israeli Jets Raid Egyptian Missile Bases

By Reuters

Israeli jets today attacked Egyptian missile bases on the outskirts of Cairo following an attack on military targets along the Suez Canal, the Israeli command said.

An Israeli spokesman said two Egyptian ground-to-air SA-2 missile bases were hit in the air raids.

One of the bases was 20 miles south of Cairo and the other eight miles southwest of the big industrial region of Helwan at Dahashur, he said.

Imperial To Expand Oil Hunt

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. has decided to expand its exploration program in the Atkinson Point area of the Northwest Territories, site of an oil discovery in January.

The company hopes to have a second drill rig operating at Atkinson Point, about 125 miles north of here, by early March, says Donald D. Lougheed, assistant manager of the company's production department.

"I don't think it is an overstatement to say that Atkinson has provided a strong hint that the oil potential of the north is great."

Besides another drill rig, Imperial will fly an additional seismic crew into the Atkinson area to help evaluate the size of the discovery.

If Atkinson Point's reserves welcome the flags of all nations at least on non-military vessels oil to refineries in the United States and Canada, Mr. Lougheed said in an interview.

However, he emphasized that the reserves must be "quite large."

Imperial's Ellice Island drill hole, about 50 miles west of Atkinson Point, was almost finished, and "contrary to widespread rumors, it has not discovered oil."

Students Discover That A University Education Is Quite Expensive

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

After tuition fees are paid, it costs $1,000 to $1,500 a year to keep a student paying room and board in college.

The 1969-1970 calendar for Brandon University in Manitoba lists the residence fee at $650, for Mount Allison University in Sackville, N.B., at $775, for Waterloo Lutheran in Waterloo, Ont., at $385 plus $475 for board—a total $860.

In Edmonton, Linda Fleming of Calgary, a student at the University of Alberta, pays $72.50 a month to share an apartment with another girl. Each puts $10 a week in the kitty to pay for food and operating expenses.

Mary Anne Pease of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Shari Brierly of Hamilton share a room in a University of Toronto residence for $1,008 each with board for a year.

John Morris of Oshawa lives in a U. of T. men's residence for $900 a year.

Residence space is at a premium, and they must maintain good behavior and scholastic standards.

Girls in a co-op-residence at Erindale, a suburban college affiliated with the U. of T., pay $13 a week room and board. They do much of their own work, such as getting meals.

A rooming house near the downtown university campus would charge a student about $10 without board.

One fraternity residence costs $770 a year for room breakfast and 20 meals a month. A member estimates it costs about $8 a month for the rest of his meals. A non-member may live at the frat house for $55 a month.

Transportation and shipping costs between home town and school obviously may be either negligible or expensive. Students under 22 can sometimes get special rates.

Students in residence or close enough to school may not need to worry about local transportation costs. For the others, Edmonton has half-fare bus passes that cost $35 a term.

All the students interviewed say they spend about $130 on books a year. It is possible to get second-hand books at most schools and to sell back new books at half price if they are on course lists for the following year. John Morris says he wanted new books because most of the second-hand ones are marked with someone else's notes and comments.

John estimates he spends about $7 a week on odds and ends such as coffee and tooth paste. His home is close to Toronto and he says he brings in extra food supplies often.

Shari says she spends about $10 a week and thinks she could get along on $5 if she had to. Linda tries to limit her spending money to $5 a week to cover coffee, cigarettes, shows, buses, campus events.

John pays an annual $25 social fee at the residence that covers such things as dances. The Toronto fraternity social fund costs $85.

A non-resident fraternity member pays $250 and gets some meal privileges. Sorority and fraternity costs in Edmonton are about $175 for the first year and $100 after that.

There is either no fee or a nominal one for most campus clubs.

John says he and his fiancee take advantage of campus activities such as plays, dances and skating as part of their social life.

Shari and Mary Anne are going out with young men not at the college, and are more likely to have off-campus dates.

In the vicinity of the downtown University of Toronto campus, a $5 dinner for two would be considered inexpensive. Movie tickets run to about $2.50 each.

If it is expensive to take a girl out, Shari and Mary Anne say it is also expensive for a girl to keep herself in circulation if she isn't going out with anyone special. Both say they spent a lot of money in their first few weeks at college. Their residence wasn't yet serving meals so they had to eat out, and they spent money going places to meet other students.

"One girl we know has two weekend jobs. The girls who aren't going with anyone spend a lot of money entertaining themselves."

What they do not have to spend a lot on is clothes. John says a sweater and slacks are standard wear. One suit can be handy for special occasions.

The girls say they have found the same casual approach possible, and Mary Anne says she worried about her wardrobe unnecessarily during the summer.

"It was a big deal; I was going to college in the fall. I came here and one of the first things I was told was you can wear slacks to classes. Clothes would be the least of your college expenses."

Shari agrees. "You think you have to spend $200 on clothes, but you don't have to worry."

A girl might want a formal, but Shari says if she has one for high school, it would do fine.

Graduation costs vary with local custom as well as personal interest.

Most colleges rent out caps and gowns and hood for a nominal charge, about $4, and often with an option to buy.

A graduation picture costs about $10. The year book at the University of Calgary costs $7.

Waterloo Lutheran has a degree fee of $25, Mount Allison a diploma charge of $10.

There may be clothes, transportation and hotel bills for proud families.

All the students interviewed are helping earn their way through college. Linda works part-time during the year as well as working summers. Both she and Shari have government grants and loans.

Shari has a mixture of scholarship, grant and loan. She says the debt bothers her, but it's the only way.

She and Linda have worked as resort waitresses and hope to again. They get a minimum wage plus tips. Mary Anne says she and other Niagara Falls students are fortunate because tourist jobs are usually available to them at home. John has worked for the city of Oshawa and hopes to again. He says he intended to make a certain amount of saved money last until Christmas, and actually had $100 left when the holidays came.

They all say they have been fortunate, that they know students who have had trouble finding jobs. They all reapplied for theirs early in January.

U.W. Will Have Guest At Next Meet

Dr. John Boyd, principal of teacher education at the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville, will be speaking to the University Women's Club Feb. 19 in the Corby Public Library. His topic will be "The Handicap of Deafness", dealing with what it means to have one's hearing severely impaired — psychologically, educationally, sociologically and economically.

DR. JOHN BOYD

Dr. Boyd was born and educated in Toronto. After graduating from Toronto Teachers' College, in 1948, he joined the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville as teacher of boys' physical education. At this school he completed his training and received his specialist certificate as teacher of the deaf.

From 1951 until 1956 he taught social studies then English in the senior school. During these years he lived in the boys' residence and thus gained valuable experience in observing the behavior of deaf children both in and out of school.

In the interim he furthered his education and in 1967 returned to the OSD in Belleville as principal of teacher education. A new one year full time teacher education program for teachers of the leaf was then inaugurated.

Club Activities

AQUARIUM CLUB

The Belleville and District Aquarium Club met in the Recreation Centre for the Feb. meeting. Mrs. Marguerite Wessels, the president welcomed both members and guests. This was followed by a brief business period.

On behalf of the Juniors, Charles Parsons introduced the speaker for the evening, Thomas Stovell. Mr. Stovell's topic "Pets in your aquarium, terrarium and vivarium" proved to be interesting and informative to both juniors and adults alike. Mr Stovell's suggestions broadened the interest of the Club to include pets such as salamanders, newts, butterfly cocoons, snake eggs etc. which might be kept and reared in an old aquarium.

Also during the evening a lively auction was run by Stephen Bocking and a fish quiz by Barbara Wylie.

The tropical fish show was judged by Mrs. R. Almendinger of the Belleville Plaza Pet Shop and the following members won awards in order of merit: seniors, fish of the month, Marguerite Wessels, Norman Wessels, Shirley Sinclair; open livebearers, Calvin Sinclair, Vincent Sinclair, Velma Sinclair; open egg layers, Norman Wessels, Marguerite Wessels; Vincent Sinclair; juniors, open livebearers, Wallace Caslick, Olga Brinkman, Richard Nickle; open egg layers, Wallace Caslick, Richard Nickle, Brenda Nickle.

Door prizes were won by Nina Almendinger, Terry Robinson and Shirley Sinclair. The raffle was won by Colin Wilcox and Merle Allen.

Mrs. Velma Sinclair served lunch.

CN LADIES' AUXILIARY

On Tuesday, Feb. 10 the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Club Canara held a regular monthly meeting at Club Canara.

President Alice Storms chaired the meeting and welcomed all present. Reports were read by various conveners.

The monthly draw was won by Olive Gerow and Shirley Welch.

A plastic ware demonstration was given by Mrs. Reid who held contests and gave prizes.

The meeting adjourned and lunch was served by Mrs. Gulliver's group.

PRINCE EDWARD - BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club met at the recreation centre on Feb. 11 with an attendance of 25 even though the weather was far from being pleasant.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. F. Henderson who welcomed all present. She noted that the meeting was close to Valentine's day — the symbol of love and expressed the thought that love could be shown by sending valentines to shut-ins or by visiting them.

A moments' silence was observed in memory of Mrs. L. McCoy, a beloved member for many years who recently passed away.

After the business reports were given, Mrs. O. White reported on flowers sent to the ill and read a card of thanks from Miss M. Gerow. After some discussion, it was decided to order a suitable pin for the members.

In charge were Mrs. F. Bedell, Mrs. L. Sharpe and Mrs. M. Jewell. Mrs. F. Bedell spoke of the club's creed which was formerly repeated at each meeting.

Giving a valentine's reading was Mrs. E. Wells and a solo was performed by Mrs. M. Doyle.

Mrs. L. Wannamaker gave the history of Big Island written by Clayton Sprague in 1960. He died in 1968. The first frame house was built on the island by Sam Shaw and from 1880 to 1890 hops were grown on the island.

In her diary Miss Julia Allison spoke of making cheese and walking to the ferry on the north side of the island. She then walked on to Belleville to sell the cheese she and her mother had made.

There were four schools on the island and the teachers received $12.75 a month as their salary.

All grain sold was paid for in cash and helpers received $1. a day for weighing. It was possible to go by boat from Northport to the Toronto Exhibition for $1.

The residents made their own clothes from the wool of their sheep and farmers took their wheat to the mill and received 37 pounds of flour from one bushel of wheat.

Mrs. F. Bedell finished off by reading "The old wooden tub."

A birthday cake and ice cream were served during the refreshment period to celebrate the 27th anniversary of the club.

Churches Prepare for Special Event

MARMORA — In preparation for the World Day of Prayer service being held this year March 6th in St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, a meeting was held in St. Andrew's church parlor on Tuesday afternoon. Attending were representatives of Marmora's five churches: St. Andrew's: Mrs. Douglas Miller, Mrs G. J. Meiklejohn and Mrs. Douglas Vilneff; St. Paul's Anglican: Mrs. Clarence McCoy and Mrs. George Brown; Free Methodist: Mrs. W. A. McMillan and Mrs. Alex McFaul; Pentecostal: Mrs. William Hull and Mrs. Paul Ripley; Sacred Heart: Mrs. P. J. O'Neill and Mrs. Charles O'Connor.

It was decided that the acting chairman each year will be the wife of the minister of the church in which the service is held, or the president of the C.W.L., and the secretary appointed was Mrs. Meiklejohn.

The program planned, with Mrs. Miller presiding for the service, included the participation of members from each church, and vocal music will be provided by members of each church choir.

Mrs. David Saunders of St. Paul's Anglican Church will speak on the theme, "Take Courage". A social period will follow the service.

Special Sunday Night Event To Be Held at Albert College

A Sunday evening musicale, consisting of vocal selections and piano accompaniment by two sisters of the Holy Cross from Cornwall will be presented at Albert College, Sunday evening, Feb. 22 at 8 p.m.

Sister Patricia Lalumiere

The public is invited to attend the special evening musicale by Sisters Francoise Gagnon, mezzo soprano and Patricia Lalumiere. Both are members of the teaching staff at Ecole Musica, Cornwall.

Sister Lalumiere began her musical studies at the age of seven in Penetanguishene. Under the direction of Mrs. F. Bertrand of Montreal, she obtained a degree as a solo performer. She holds both C.S.C., and the A.R.C.T.

Both sisters are bilingual. Sister Gagnon will present a recital of art songs, arias and French folk songs.

Following early piano studies with Sisters of The Holy Cross, Sister Gagnon, a native of Montreal, came to Ontario as a piano teacher in 1947. In 1959, she began studies with one of Ottawa's best known vocal instructors, Mrs. Dorothy McCurry. She is a silver medalist of The Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto and also holds the vocal A.R.C.T., as a solo performer.

Sister Francoise Gagnon

She is a graduate of Laval University in Liturgical Music and Choir Direction and is presently teaching voice, harmony and counterpoint at Ecole Musica in Cornwall.

GERMISTON, South Africa (AP) — A little old lady sent a cheque for $7 intended for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals — SPCA — noting it was "for my dumb friends." By a fortunate transposition it landed first at the SAPC — South African Police Club — where the station officer matched the $7 and sent the $14 to the SPCA.

New Ideas for Spring Coats

Quite Difficult to Determine The Latest Coat Silhouette

NEW YORK (CP) — Trying to determine what is the latest spring coat silhouette poses a tricky problem.

It's probably the wrap coat or perhaps the full swing-back style. But don't forget Coco Chanel's cardigan look. The Broadway musical is responsible for several Coco revivals, including the cardigan sweater coat.

What happened to the fitted and belted coat? It's still important, although more coats are sashed than belted. Certainly you won't be outmoded in the fitted silhouette. Indeed, you can't possibly be out of style no matter what type of coat you wear and at whatever length you fancy.

There's even a hint of the three-quarter coat coming back into favor. Pauline Trigere likes this length for travelling, sleeveless and with a flare skirt.

About the only coat dictum agreed upon by most designers is that midi-coats should be worn only over pants.

Each designer has his or her own preference in coat styles and length. Adele Simpson, a pioneer in travel coat and costume, likes the new wrap. A navy style includes a no-collar look and new elbow-length sleeves. All her spring coats are cut on a soft shape, with a pronounced flare at hemlines.

Modelia, too, likes the wrap or bathrobe style with trim belts. His spring coats fall straight or swing open.

At the other extreme is Christian Dior-New York with a "traditional tidy and skinny silhouette," with the house's newest look in a waist-cinched trench coat.

Best of Show award in the Union Label's collection went to a costume by John Warden. The coat was a Coco Chanel cardigan style, collarless and in caramel twill. It was worn over matching twill white pants and white tunic.

The white edging on plain-color coats seems to be extremely popular everywhere. Last year's winner of the Union Label's Best of Show, Montrealer Leo Chevalier, uses it most effectively, too. All his favorite pastel coats are white-edged and he's fond of all white, too, for spring. He's also featuring pale printed wool gabardines.

Torontonian William Frohman's collection, Young Scene, includes a pale green fitted coat with darker green leather belt and a red maxi with small shoulder cape banded in a floral Lurex print.

Pastel fleece dominates Montreal's Irving Samuel collection. One is a yellow bamboo print, white-belted. Another in red geranium has a single-buttoned front and a flowing back from under a yoke.

Pill-pusher Peddles Wares Near School

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This morning a friend of mine (I'll call her Mrs. A.) was telephoned by the school. Mrs. A's 15-year-old son has not been to classes in two weeks. She is divorced and the sole supporter of the boy.

Mrs.A. left work and found her son in a hangout near the school — higher than a kite, on pills. The pills are called ups and downs, They cost 25c each. Three other boys were with him. They were in the same condition. Mrs. A. took her son to the nearest police station. They told her, "Sorry, there's nothing we can do. Take him home." She asked "Why?" The answer was, "Because we have to find the pills on the boy — not in him."

At this moment, the 15-year-old is sleeping it off and his mother is near collapse. The pill-pusher is still peddling his wares around the school, no doubt. It will go on unless somebody stops it. What can be done? — MAD IN CHICAGO.

DEAR MAD: A boy who ditches school for two weeks and zonks himself on dollies needs to be taken to a doctor at once. This is a very sick kid.

The school principal should be notified. That joint near the school needs to be looked into. Also, more heat should be applied to the police in the area around the school. The rat who is selling the pills must be nailed in action. Your friend should enlist the help of her clergyman, her lawyer, her doctor, the school principal and the parents of the youths who were with her son. She should get together with other concerned people and they can clean up this mess.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is to let you know your advice doesn't always fit. I refer to your words of praise for the wife whose husband was cheating, then suddenly came back home and has been a model husband ever since. Well, bully for her, but I wasn't so lucky.

It so happens "The sample wasn't ample" for my husband. He kept going back for more samples and now he has decided he wants to buy the product.

The girl is a tramp. She broke up two homes before mine. Eventually, you can bet my husband will come crawling back. The question is — should I take him? Please don't give me any more canned phrases like "The sample was ample." What I need is some solid advice. — SANTA BARBARA.

DEAR SANTA B.: O.K. - - - so the sample wasn't ample. I'm sorry. How can I give "solid advice" when I don't have any facts? A great deal depends on how long your husband stays away and how you feel about his absence. Are there children involved? How old are you? How old is your husband? How old is the sample? Write to me when he comes crawling back and I'll do my best to help you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: There's a woman in the office — on the lying side of 50, wearing this ridiculous micro-mini skirt. She is driving us nuts. She sits there, in a most un-lady like position, exhibiting her fat knees and varicose veins and on a clear day you can see Vallejo. Every ten minutes, she asks, "Is my girdle showing?" — which, of course, it is. We are too embarrassed to tell her. Will you do it for us? — THE BLUSHER.

DEAR BLUSH: The guilty ones never think you are talking to them. So — my advice is speak up — in no uncertain terms.

Operating Dishwashers

Best Results for Dishwasher

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If you were one of the lucky housewives who received a new dishwasher for Christmas, Louise Starling, an Alberta home economist, says there may be several points you have overlooked about operating the appliance to obtain best results.

With the gleaming new work saver installed in the kitchen, there are simple ways of keeping the interior in its original spotless condition.

Iron or manganese, even in small quantities, may cause discoloration of the tub, Miss Starling said. Iron will leave a reddish-brown stain and manganese a stain that is brown or black.

For periodic removal of iron or manganese, select the longest washing cycle offered by the dishwasher, add one-half ounce of salts of lemon to the water and allow the machine to complete its cycle.

Most water supplies have enough hardness to cause water spots or a film on washable items in a dishwasher, Miss Starling said.

This condition can be eliminated or greatly reduced by the use of liquid rinse agents in dishwashers equipped with wetting-agent injectors, or by adding cake-type aids in the last rinse for other models.

The wetting agent reduces surface tension of water and eliminates formation of spots, she said. The water "sheets" off the dishes instead of clinging and forming spots.

In actual operation of the machine, avoid placing aluminum ware near the detergent dispenser, Miss Starling said. The detergent concentrate could cause darkening of bright aluminum.

Similarly, stainless steel will develop a blue haze in the presence of high heat and should not be placed in close proximity of the heating element.

Small, light articles should be placed on the top shelf under a bowl to prevent them from being tossed around by the water spray.

Knives, forks and spoons should be mixed together in the cutlery rack, Miss Starling said. "Nested" utensils cannot expose themselves to the cleansing action of a dishwasher.

Rubber spatulas and wooden spoons are best washed by hand, but they can be placed on the top rack of the dishwasher, away from the heating element.

Greater satisfaction can be obtained by buying equipment compatible with dishwashers. Plastic mixing bowls and refrigerator dishes should be marked "dishwasher-proof," and all kitchen tools with plastic handles should carry the same guarantee.

Wooden bowls, which warp and take up considerable space in a dishwasher, should be replaced by bowls of some material other than wood, and of a shape that compactly fits into the racks.

And finally, she said, in buying glasses or cups, make sure the bottoms haven't any deep wells where water can collect when they are loaded upside down.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S WMS

The regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian WMS was held in the Sunday school auditorium. The president, Miss L. Burnside opened the meeting with a poem and conducted the business period.

Reports from the secretaries of the various departments were received and several items of business were dealt with. Mrs. F. Parsons announced that World Day of Prayer will be held in College Hill United Church. Miss Burnside reported on the annual meeting of the Kingston Presbyterial held recently in St. Columba Church.

On behalf of the auxiliary, Mrs. H. Elvidge presented a life membership certificate and pin to Mrs. J. Webb in recognition of many years of service. Mrs. Webb thanked the members for the honor conferred upon her.

Miss F. Matthews led the study period assisted by Miss Burnside and Mrs. Elvidge.

Refreshments were served by the group in charge.

Bran Muffins Are Still Popular

By MARY MOORE

Bran Muffins continue to be best sellers in bake shops all across the country. Readers want them moist and sweet, but complain about the cost of buying them.

This suits me just fine because I think you should have the satisfaction of making your own. In a one-woman tiny campaign I am helping Mr. Trudeau fight inflation by using part bacon fat in this recipe I am giving you today and it is good.

RAISIN BRAN MUFFINS
(18 medium)

1-3 cup shortening (I used half bacon fat and half margarine)
½ cup dark brown sugar
1 egg
1 cup sifted all - purpose flour
1⅓ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
2 cups all bran
1 cup plus 1 tbsp. buttermilk (or 1 cup sweet milk soured with 1 tbsp. lemon juice.)
1 cup plumped raisins (see below)
1½ tsps. (packed) fresh grated orange rind

Plump raisins first by measuring into strainer and placing over boiling water, covered and letting them steam until soft and plump.

Meanwhile in beater bowl cream together shortening and sugar, then beat in egg. Sift together sifted flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add all bran. Add to creamed mixture along with plumped raisins and orange rind, alternately with buttermilk, stirring only until blended. (Remember that muffins should never be overmixed. Turn into 18 med.-sized muffin pans filling them full. (These do not rise much. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. at centre of oven 20 min.

Make some at your first opportunity.

U.C.W. Meeting

BRIDGE STREET UCW

At the general meeting of all units of the UCW of Bridge St. church held on Tuesday afternoon Rev. Arthur Bateson spoke on the work of the Canadian Auxiliary of the Leprosy Mission.

Mr. Bateson is one of six area secretaries in Canada. He has recently been transferred from Vancouver to Belleville.

The Leprosy Mission operates 35 centres in India, Burma, Nepal, Hong Kong and Korea and also aids some 90 missionary societies. It is an international, inter-denominational Christian organization dedicated to fulfilling the specific command of the Lord Jesus to "cleanse the lepers".

There are 15 million leprosy victims in the world living today. The problem was old in the days of the laws of Leviticus which condemned a leper to a loneliness that made him "dead while still alive".

This mission operates 40 large hospitals and homes, roadside clinics and mobile teams which are doing much to break down the barriers of fear and superstition by offering the benefits of modern medical science and consultative help. Leprosy is not the curse of the gods but a disease of poverty.

Dr. C. K. Job, pathologist in Madras Medical School was once a boy cured of the disease but rejected by his Hindu village because he had become a Christian while being cured. It is he who uses the $64,000 electron microscope purchased as a nineteenth anniversary project. This instrument magnifies up to 250,000 times.

Volunteers are needed for medical work, for prayer, and for cash contributions.

The worship service, conducted by Mrs. Karn and Mrs. Savage had for its theme "prayer" and this fitted in well with the stories of individuals related by Mr. Bateson.

In thanking the speaker, Mrs. J. Reynolds noted also how this subject was a vital part of the UCW theme for 1970, "Reconciliation in a Broken World."

During the question period it was related how leprosy had been a problem in early days in England, many old churches having "leper holes" through which the victim could listen to the service.

There are 18 cases in Canada today, and this country is leading the world in having them treated in isolation in their own local hospitals.

The program talk was followed by a business meeting, under the chairmanship of the vice - president, Miss Myrtle Reid, in the absence of the president, Mrs. R. Berry.

The 1970 budget was explained and accepted and ways and means of raising these funds discussed.

A friendly cup of tea was enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

Dear Doris: "Too Close to Tears" complains of emotional instability, and my reaction is one of envy.

I used to be the same way, but I guess it became too painful to do all that feeling, and some unconscious mechanism has to a large extent cut my feelings off. The limbo that has resulted seems far worse than any emotional problems I used to have. Now, to be able to feel, even if it means feeling sadness, is so welcome on the rare occasions when it happens that I felt I just had to let your correspondent know that she has something to be thankful for.

I have sought help in psychiatry and attending sensitivity training sessions. All have helped slightly and at least given me some intellectual idea of what is wrong. — Envious

Dear Envious: Without feelings we all turn into vegetables. Our joys, as well as our sorrows, reach us through our emotions. Who wants to be coldly intellectual anyway?

Here's hoping that the psychiatric and sensitivity sessions will do the job for you and bring you back to good full-blooded warm — albeit hectic — living.

Dear Doris: I, like the daughter of Wheel Chair Hobbies, was in a car accident last year. My head went through the windshield. My left side of face and head was badly cut so it is mostly paralyzed. My left eye won't close.

I have always done a lot of handwork as I had six boys and one girl. Yes, I will be 66 in February.

I know I could sell some of this girl's lamps and could help her do other things. — Down But Not Out

Dear Down: Looks to me as if Wheel Chair Hobbies and her daughter are going to be busy, judging by the ideas that have been sent to her. I'll pass on your offer.

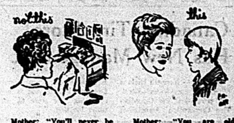
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "You'll never be able to get to classes on time when you go to college unless you learn to get up by yourself. What will you do when I'm not around to call you a dozen times every morning?"

Mother: "You are old enough to get up without having to be called several times. I am not going to call you after this, so be sure to set your alarm clock so you won't be late for school."

Deal with the present and you won't have to worry so much about the future. Children learn responsibility by being responsible for their own action and by suffering the consequences of their irresponsibility.

Auxiliary President Gives $3,500 to Hospital Board

NAPANEE — "Hospitals in Egypt and Greece 1200 B.C. were better than those in the Middle Ages," Mr. E. H. Mills, administrator of the Lennox and Addington County General Hospital stated at the annual meeting of the Auxiliary this week. They had gymnasia and libraries, and knew that sunlight was a healer. Inscriptions on pillars even give names of patients, their progress and their discharge from hospital. This information has come to light through excavation of ruins.

In later years, Egypt and India, in particular, had excellent hospitals, with personal cleanliness stressed. The doctors even performed surgery, long before the days of anaesthetics. Their method of anaesthetizing was to knock the patient on the head with a wooden mallet — "probably supplied by the Women's Auxiliary of the day", Mr. Mills quipped.

All this disappeared during the Middle Ages. Sanitation was ignored, and patients were often three or four to a bed, no matter what their disease. Squalor and filth were taken as a matter of course. Modernization of hospitals did not really begin until the Crimean War and Florence Nightingale, Mr. Mills said. And it was just at the right time, as it coincided with the coming of modern medicine. Anaesthetics, X-rays, bacteriology, biology and physio-therapy and many other modern practices came into being in quick succession.

Progress has never halted, Mr. Mills told his audience, until today we have our modern hospitals. Progress is continuing, and hospitals must keep pace with new medical findings.

But in 1200 B.C. there was a Woman's Auxiliary, and throughout the ages, wherever there has been a hospital, there have always been women who helped as they could, bringing food and flowers, for example. Today the auxiliary of any hospital is a vital part, providing many extras which it would not have otherwise.

During the course of the meeting, Mrs. Jessie Quirt, auxiliary president, presented to Mr. Al Zeron, treasurer of the Board of Governors, a cheque for $3,500.

Behind The Glass

By CDT.

Two local rinks from Quinte Curling Club skipped by Murray Johnson and Nev Burroughs have won Division 3A-3B Playdowns in the Ontario Curling Association Governor - General competition.

The local rinks won the Division 3B Playdowns on Sunday at Brighton Curling Club where they met and defeated rinks from Cobourg and Canadian Forces Base Trenton.

The Johnson rink, composed of Don Deacon, Jim Petticrew, Dave Brown and skip Murray Johnson, has previously competed in the same event, winning the Provincial Finals by one rock in 1968.

The Burroughs rink comprising of Rick Maham, Paul Henderson, Nev Burroughs, Bill Henderson is in the event for the first time.

In the Belleville - Cobourg round, the local rinks were up nine shots at the 10th end at which time Cobourg conceded the win to Belleville.

In the Belleville—CFB round the game was extremely close and was finally decided in an extra end with Belleville coming through by one rock to win the round and Division 3B. In the extra end the Johnson rink scored two over CFB, while the Burroughs rink were forced to concede a single to the other CFB rink. The win however went to Belleville by a single point.

Division 3A-3B playdowns will be held in Napanee on Sunday, March 8. With a win, the local rink will play Division 1-2-3-4 in Tweed on Friday, March 20 with the winner going to the Provincial finals in St. Catharines on Saturday, March 21.

Should the local rinks make the finals, this will be the first time since 1922 that Belleville has been in the finals of the Governor-General's competition.

Almost All Shows in Color Most Sets Black and White

NEW YORK (AP) — It is a rare television program today that is not made in color.

Producers of programs think in terms of color, rely on it, build effects on it. Yet 60 per cent of the television homes in the U.S. still can see only black and white pictures.

This viewer found many black and white programs, particularly weekend sports shows, lacking a vital, enlivening ingredient, like salt in soup.

The initial program of this season's Experiment in Television on NBC Sunday afternoon was not an hour that, in any event, would be every viewer's choice. It was a fantasy, Dream on Monkey Mountain, full of the dreams and hopes of a West Indian. It was filmed in Trinidad and performed by a talented native cast.

The story was built on the framework of the last days of an old mountain man who has recurrent visions that he is an African king, freeing his people from oppression. What really happens is that he smashes a village bar.

The drama moves from grim reality to his grandiose visions and nightmares, with village people assuming other roles. However, the native color and scenery would have provided an extra dimension that might have helped fix the viewer's mood and, perhaps, helped his comprehension.

Survival on the Prairie, an NBC nature special Friday night was, without the addition of color, just another travelogue-type hour. It specialized in dramatic shots of great expanses of prairie grasses bending to the wind, of snow and of rushing streams—all of which might have been a visual delight. Hugh Downs handled his role as narrator with eanrest dignity.

Where there is a fast- moving story—a western or action show or even a situation comedy—color or lack of color does not make much difference. It might be a good idea if the producers took a look at the product once in a while in black and white.

Dick Van Dyke Looks Ahead; Plans Shows Well in Advance

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A far-sighted fellow is Van Dyke. For example: He is taping a CBS special with Bill Cosby, which will not appear on the network until November.

He also is doing introductions to the CBS showings of Born Free, scheduled to be a Christmas attraction for years to come, in the manner of The Wizard of Oz.

He is discussing with Carl Reiner the format for the new Van Dyke television series, which will begin on CBS in the 1971-72 season.

Besides these things, Van Dyke is looking ahead to his retirement from films, which he says will occur after he concludes his two remaining commitments with Disney and the Mirisch Company.

All this seasons highly visionary, except for the fact that Dick Van Dyke usually ends up accomplishing what he plans to do. Many a beleaguered city dweller talks about escaping the urban mess. Dick did it.

The Van Dykes sold their Encino home and became permanent Arizonians last June. Two of the sons go to college here, and the daughters, 15 and 18, live on the ranch. Dick said he had no problem keeping busy.

One of his latest passions is archeology. He and his wife spend hours digging in the remains of a thousand-year-old Indian civilization which he found on his property.

Until last October, he saw little of the Arizona ranch, since he was making three films last year. The latest was Cold Turkey—"I play a sanctimonious minister, and if I did the job right, people are going to hate me."

REAL ESTATE IN THE 1970s

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

With the end of the 1960s, we are closing the era of the 40-hour week. With the 1970s, we are entering a new phase in which we will have ever more leisure time, ever less work time.

Spending on hobbies and recreational gadgets is currently increasing 10 percent a year.

The two-week vacation will become the three and four-week vacation; the two day weekend will become the three-day weekend; retirement at 65 will gradually become retirement at 55. Unions are pressing now for shorter work days and weeks.

This trend will, and is now, having a very direct bearing on real estate property related to leisure. Summer cottages are rising steadily in value — in some places skyrocketing — as demand grows. Farm land of marginal agricultural value is, in many instances, acquiring new value as recreational areas.

Beach frontage, land for country retreats and businesses related to leisure activities are becoming very good investments. A knowledgeable Realtor has his fingers on the best properties available in his area for individuals seeking to fulfill personal desires or investors looking to the future.

It would be a wise investment in your future to check into these opportunities.

Planning A Changed World

Former University of Toronto student leader Steven Langdon pondered some of the questions posed by Moira Secondary School Grade 13 students at their annual teach-in at Albert College yesterday. Lingering on the chapel steps to discuss his call to change the world are Sue Reilly, Mr. Langdon, Pamela Baily and John Campbell.

Education Creating Cynics Students Told at City Teach-in

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A group of senior students from Moira Secondary School ystereday were challenged to "take a commitment to change the high schools and universities."

"For when you do," warned Steven Langdon, former president of the University of Toronto's Students' Administrative Council, "you take a commitment to change society."

Mr. Langdon was the speaker Monday afternoon at the annual teach-in for Moira's grade 13 students at Albert College. It was the second year that Moira has taken over Albert College during the college's mid-winter break, to hear speakers on current issues and conduct seminars on the subjects they present.

M.rLangdon told students that education has two aspects — one is the student's subjective reaction to his schooling, the other its social aspect, its effect on society.

"Secondary school education is a pattern of strict rules and strict courses, a pattern of expected responses," he told the students.

"Our function is to absorb what the system wants us to absorb and put it back in according to the expected responses," he said. "School is not a place you go to get your questions answered; it is the place you go for people to get the answers they want out of you."

Mr. Langdon, now finishing his last year in an honors political science course at Toronto formerly led a student movement to gain more self-determination in course content and calibre of lecturers at the university.

Yesterdoy he called for courses more relevant to the needs of the students. This would be achieved through the students being permitted a say in the courses they take and the way in which they are presented.

"The students who accept the patterned response type of learning, whether seriously or as a game, emerge not as creative, critical, thinking persons but are turned into competitive people, competing against each other," he said.

"In our more cynical moments we might say that education is the process of preparing people to go into industry and not ask questions when they get there," he added.

Education, the soft-spoken Mr. Langdon claimed, "doesn't serve society, help to build a better society or help us to improve the lot of others".

"It is turning out cynics who retreat into individualism, do their own thing," he said.

"The response to this, on the part of people resisting change, is to say that education is a social process and the community has a right to ask for what it wants and needs from education. The individual has to conform for the sake of society."

"You don't have a society now that can put you down forever," he said. "You don't have to go through what we went through. At the U of T we organized a student union to get some student control of our education. As a result we have no cold exams, and an organized resistance in the lecture room now to professors who present irrelevant material."

Mr. Langdon was critical of the Hall-Dennis report on Ontario education and its recommendations.

"The Hall-Dennis report says, in effect, 'OK, you're right; we'll loosen up and let you do the 13 years in six different programs at your own speed. But it means still going through the same program of patterned responses, with somebody outside still setting up your programs."

His question, "Has anybody here ever had the experience of sitting down and deciding what he wanted in a course?" brought an unfavorable response from his listeners.

"You are arguing for a system of no restraints and that would be chaos," retorted one girl. The majority of the small group of students who remained to talk with Mr. Langdon indicated that students "need direction, they don't know enough about the fields of study to know what they want".

"We stayed in high school because it meant more money for us," Mr. Langdon said of his generation. "We were told that if we went to university we would get good jobs and make more over a lifetime than those who didn't get degrees. Don't accept that argument. Most of the people who go to university are upper middle class people who would get good jobs anyway."

"Besides, money is the poorest reason for going to university," he warned. "The world is more than having enough money to live a safe, comfortable middle class life. It is more than that, and that "more" is what we have to get the high schools and universities to deal with."

Earlier in the day the students heard Ed Broadbent, NDP MP for Oshawa urge them to concern themselves less with American problems and devote themselves to exploring Canadian problems.

The recreational facilities of Albert were available for the students' use, and the teach-in concluded with a dinner in the evening.

Heart Fund Drive Starts Feb. 22

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

This Sunday, Feb. 22, is Heart Sunday — the official start of Ontario Heart Foundation Week.

All across Canada, the next week has been set aside for the heart campaign. In the city, organizers say the campaign will culminate about March 14th.

Canvassers will begin knocking on doors in Belleville this Thursday, asking everyone to give "so that more may live".

According the campaign chairman Mrs. Dorothy Howell, an army of volunteer canvassers will visit homes in the area to help meet an $8,000 goal.

The campaign, in operation for the past four or five years in Belleville has received what Mrs. Howell termed "terrific response" from members of the community.

Last year's campaign results are a case in point. While the goal was set at $6,000, donations totalled $9,600 — an indication, organizers feel, of how Bellevillians feel about the work of the Ontario Heart Foundation.

"All donations we receive go directly to research and towards the education of the public on the prevention of heart disease," said Mrs. Howell.

Disease of the heart and blood vessels remain the major health problem killing more people than all other diseases combined — 75,000 Canadians die annually from this disease alone.

The Heart Foundation is an active partnership of physicians, scientists and the general public as well as voluntary health organizations.

This organization is dedicated to the conquest of not a single disease, but a complex of many — one of which might ordinarily be considered a cause in itself.

It is through its educational activities that the Foundation helps to eliminate fears and misconceptions about heart and circulatory diseases while encouraging early diagnosis and treatment.

Statistics show progress is being made. Most victims of heart attack now survive, the majority returning to work, or, at least, a relatively active life.

Although there is no guarantee that heart attacks can be prevented, medical scientists agree that exercise, avoiding a high cholesterol diet, regular medical check-ups and no smoking all work against the chances of suffering a major heart attack in the prime of life.

Tallest Building Houses 60,000

TORONTO (CP)—Engineers can—and probably will—erect buildings almost half a mile high efficiently, but the social value of such immense structures is questionable, a New York consulting engineer said Monday.

Leslie E. Robertson, who made the statements in an interview, is a partner in the firm that is building what is thought to be thewo rld's tallest structure, the World Trade Centre in New York City.

When completed, it will stand nearly 2,000 feet high—about 900 feet taller than the Empire State Building—and house 60,000 people on 100 floors, each an acre in area.

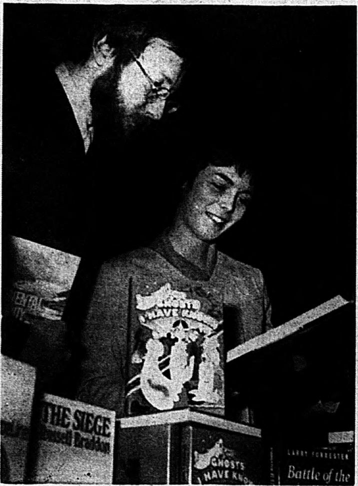
"We've solved the engineering problems in building to this, and greater heights," Mr. Robertson said. "But such buildings create other problems. Interference with aircraft is one we haven't solved yet. Another is the extraordinarily irritating ground winds created. When they house great numbers of people such buildings can lower human values unless they are carefully planned, with adequate facilities. High rise buildings create a kind of pollution."

Mr. Robertson was in Toronto to address the second Canadian structural engineering conference sponsored by Canada's major steel companies and the University of Toronto.

Palmer E. Savage, vice-president of engineering for Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., and conference chairman, predicted that improved steels, better steel design and fabricating, and the increasing use of computers to estimate design and material requirements, should make all steel buildings lighter and more economical in future.

Steel strengths have been increased by about 25 per cent in the last year, to a maximum load capacity of 44,000 pounds per square inch.

Other conference delegates predicted this improvement in quality will reduce the amount of steel needed in new buildings, and increase the use of steel in competition with concrete and other alternate building materials.



All About Books

Quinte educators can browse through 2,500 books during three-day display at Sun Valley Motor Inn. Paul Shakespeare, Cheryl Evis today put finishing touches to exhibition organized by publishers.

Full Use of Quinte School Raises Maintenance Problem

Hastings county's advisory vocational committee continued its tour of the system's secondary schools yesterday with a meeting at Quinte Secondary School in Belleville.

Since its formation early in 1969, the committee members have followed a policy of visiting each school and inspecting its technical department.

They came away impressed with Quinte ("This is the best one yet," commented a member later), but concerned with the special problems of the school.

Unlike any other school in the county, Quinte is in use from about 8 a.m. until midnight, with 300 to 600 adult students under the Ontario Manpower Retraining Program using the building from 5.15 to 11.15 p.m. every weekday of the year.

Principal John Hayman told the committee that because of heavy use of the school, "the equipment replacement program is in a bad situation."

"The extra wear and tear through constant use has resulted in increased repair and replacement needs unique to this school," he said.

The federal government has begun to pay school boards an allowance for Manpower students trained in their schools. At a rate of 60 to 65 cents a student a day, the sum paid to the Hastings county board this year is expected to be about $80,000.

The committee decided yesterday to recommend to the board that "all money from the Manpower program be allocated to the school where the program is in effect".

"I'm in favor of the money coming in from the federal government being used to repair the rooms and equipment used by Manpower at Quinte," said trustee F. Jonn Follis in making the motion.

The same policy, if accepted by the board would also apply to Trenton High School, where a more limited Manpower retraining program is in effect.

Trent University Plans Course on Pollution

Trent University at Peterborough has announced it will start a credit course on pollution this fall for third or fourth-year undergraduate students. Trent will be one of few universities in North America offering such a course.

President T. H. B. Symons said the university's plans "indicate the strong concern felt in regard to pollution by members of the university." He said much of the research work carried out in the district over the past five years reflects this. "We can now turn the information we have gathered to practical advantage," he said.

The course will be directed by Dr. David Carlisle, head of the biology department, which has been involved in research work along the Trent River system since 1965.

The new course will concern all aspects of pollution — air, land and water. It will focus particularly on water pollution, especially Ontario waters.

Trent University also is engaged in planning for a seminar on pollution that is to be held during the summer.

Restaurant Owner Attacked

Ontario Provincial Police are pressing their investigation into an early morning attack on the owner of Burkitt's restaurant on Highway 37 near Corbyville.

Two men escaped after beating Charles Burkitt with an unidentified instrument about 5:30 this morning. Mr. Burkitt was treated at Belleville General Hospital and released.

Police said Mr. Burkitt was asleep in his restaurant, open all night but empty of customers at the time of the incident, when the two men entered and immediately attacked him. He fought them off and they made their escape. Police offered no motive for the attack.

Drug Charges Are Laid

Three Belleville area youths are in custody today facing several charges of drug trafficking, police reported this morning.

Charged with two counts of trafficking in narcotics is John Edward Adams, 16, of 527 Sidney Street. Charged with trafficking a drug under the Food and Drug Control Act is Paul George Thomas, 17, of Cannifton.

A third youth, a juvenile also faces charges of drug trafficking.

Book Market Comes To Quinte Teachers

A Toronto publisher has turned a new leaf in marketing literature for schools — and the project comes out from behind covers for Quinte educators today.

School librarians, department heads and board officials have been invited to browse through a literary pasture of some 2,500 volumes as the three-day exhibition opens at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

The volumes are the publications of Clarke, Irwin and Co., and are part of a campaign to bring a wide-ranging title list to the attention of school officials.

The displays were inaugurated a year ago, beginning in metropolitan schools and big provincial population centres.

This year the displays will be carried across the Ontario border to the Western provinces.

Idea behind the display is an on-the-spot emphasis of the publisher's titles log.

Clarke Irwin representative Paul Shakespeare — one of three supervising the Sun Valley exhibit — explains that the display makes hundreds of volumes immediately available for inspection.

Besides current titles every publisher has a backlog of texts educators may find useful.

It is impossible for the individual salesman to carry such an unwieldy cargo in canvassing school officials.

A central display is aimed at solving the problem by supplementing the traditional doorstep method of sales calls.

"When teachers require materials it's difficult for one representative to show a full range of his products. This way, we can show our new books more effectively together with our backlist," explains Mr. Shakespeare.

Thus far, teachers have been "very enthusiastic" about the new approach.

The display puts a new emphasis on the visual, with a number of new texts lavishly illustrated.

The shift to what the publisher calls "visually exciting teacher materials" is to meet changing demands of modern classrooms.

The exhibition is open daily until Thursday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

On Top of the World, Frazier Has Nowhere to Go

NEW YORK (CP) — Joe Frazier is sitting on top of the boxing world today, but like a man without a country, he has nowhere to go.

Frazier wiped out Jimmy Ellis with a fifth-round knockout in Madison Square Garden Monday night to become the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world, but where to now?

Even Cassius Clay, whose title Frazier won, didn't fulfil his promise of handing over his championship belt to the winner. He didn't show up.

Clay's crown was taken away because he refused induction into the United States armed forces and that's what the Frazier-Ellis fight was all about—to find a successor to the vacant title.

Frazier, 26, was a six-state, Mexico and Argentina champion, and Ellis, 29, was champion in most other parts of the world.

Now Frazier is the undisputed champion, but who, outside of Clay, is there left for him to fight?

Chuvalo was stopped for the only time in his career by Frazier, but he had him hurt and is the best drawing card in the Garden of what contenders there are around today.

As for the Frazier-Ellis fight itself, it was a cakewalk after the first round for the Philadelphia slugger.

Ellis, 201, of Louisville, Ky., managed to get in three out of a dozen right hand leads in the first round, but none really connected the way he wanted them to. After that he made the mistake of 24 of Frazier's opponents before him. He fought the other guy's fight and became the 22nd kayo victim in 25 fights for the undefeated champion.

Ellis now has a record of 27 victories and six losses. It was his first loss as a heavyweight, and the first time he was knocked down.

Frazier, 205, started turning what tide there was in the second round and was all over Ellis like a leech. Ellis tried to stab him off with left jabs but to no avail and Ellis had a taste of what was to come.

Frazier came out throwing bombs in the third round and staggered Ellis with a left-right-left and Ellis was trying desperately to hold on. Frazier cornered Ellis near the end of the round and banged away when all of a sudden the 6-to-1 underdog fired back with his only damaging combinations of the fight and had Frazier backing up as the bell sounded.

The start of the fourth round was the beginning of what proved to be the end. Frazier nailed Ellis with another left-right-left combination and the World Boxing Association champion ended up on his back. He managed to stagger up at the count of nine, but he was in dire straits.

Frazier pursued his prey and was just missing until seconds from the end when he uncorked a vicious left hook and Ellis was again on his back. He just managed to beat the count and staggered back to his corner.

But his manager, Angelo Dundee, wouldn't allow him to come out for more despite Ellis's pleas.

"The guy just caught me with a good left hook," said Ellis. "I wanted to come out but Angelo wouldn't let me."

"He just wasn't responding to me," said Dundee. "He was hit a heck of a punch on the second knockdown. I was talking to him, banging on his knees, hitting him with water and he didn't respond so I stopped it."

When questioned on whether he could hear clearly the counts on his two trips to the canvas, Ellis said: "I heard the full count. I was down only once."

John F. X. Condon, Garden publicity director, said 18,000 persons attended the fight and paid about $600,000. The fighters, with the gate and the other rights, each should gross $300,000 plus.

Back in Philadelphia, Marcellus Cassius Clay made an appearance at a closed-circuit outlet and would have no comment on the outcome of the fight. He did say, however, that he had sold his exclusive comment on the fight to a magazine and that was why he had to be where he was.

Clay handed out free tickets before entering a city arena to watch his former sparring partner go down to defeat at the hands of Frazier.

Clay's only comment as he ran down the street with a friend was:

"These guys are always trying to take my job."

Frazier Dubbed 'Black Marciano'

NEW YORK (AP) — "A black Marciano with precision."

That was one thumbnail assessment today of Joe Frazier, undisputed heavyweight boxing champion—an imposing hulk of a man who struck down Jimmy Ellis with a thunderclap left hook Monday night at Madison Square Garden.

"He's a Sonny Liston who can box," said another critic.

"Frazier reminds me of Rocky Marciano," commented Zach Clayton, 49, veteran Philadelphia referee who officiated over the Jersey Joe Walcott-Ezzard Charles title fight.

"He can't hit as hard as Rocky but he hits more often. If he throws 10 punches, he will connect on eight.

"Frazier is tough and mean and swarms all over you, just like Rocky. Instead of taking you out with one quick punch, he chops you down like a woodsman felling a tree with an axe."

"Jimmy wanted to continue but he was in no condition to do so," said Angelo Dundee, Ellis's manager. "I asked him 20 questions. He couldn't answer any of them."

Frazier, 26, former Olympic champion and now undefeated in 25 pro fights, with 22 kayos to his credit, is the new killer of the ring.

Color of coffee without much cream, he is powerfully-built, a half-inch short of six feet and 205 pounds. Under the Garden lights, his rippling muscles glisten like burnished copper. His arms are like wagon tongues, his thighs as sturdy as tree trunks.

He fights in a crouch, looking like an animal ready to spring, and he knows only one direction forward.

He is a barroom type brawler. He swarms all over his opponent, giving his foe no time to catch his breath. He is tough and vicious and, at times, even frightening.

He is a bear of a man seemingly always hungry for the kill. He hits and he snarls and he hits again. He tosses off insults as easily as he throws his murderous left jabs.

He taunted Ellis during the heat of the combat. "Come on, Sissy, let's see what you got. I can take anything you can throw."

"Now I'm gonna retire," he said after the bout, obviously in a jocular vein. "I'm gonna retire and play rock-'n'roll music 'til Cassius—or what do you call that man, Muhammad Ali, comes back."

Green Struck First Blow

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial Judge Edward Carter is expected to decide today whether winger Wayne Maki of St. Louis Blues committed assault causing bodily harm when he clubbed down Ted Green of Boston Bruins in a National Hockey League exhibition game here last Sept. 21.

Maki, 26, of Sault Ste. Marie, who pleaded not guilty to the charge when his trial opened Monday, told the court he was only trying to protect himself and his career in the stick duel with Green that sent the Boston defenceman to hospital with a fractured skull. Green required two operations and is due for a third Wednesday. He hasn't played since September.

Immediately after the Maki verdict, Green is expected to face the same charge.

Maki is believed to be the first NHL player ever to face such a serious charge resulting from an ice brawl. The maximum penalty is two years in jail.

Maki's coach, Scotty Bowman, whose own career was cut off at age 17 when he was whacked on the head and suffered a fractured skull, was among defence witnesses.

All witnesses agreed that Green, a bruising defenceman, started off the chain of events that brought cries of horror from the 10,000 fans who watched the game here.

Referee Ken Bodentistel of Guelph, who had perhaps the best view of the incident, told the court that he had assessed a delayed roughing penalty against Green only seconds earlier.

He said both players raised their sticks aboye their shoulders and he immediately called penalties against them for that infraction.

TED GREEN

With play stopped, both players continued the argument.

"They pushed one another and Teddy Green came down with his stick on Wayne Maki," Bodendistel testified.

Maki repeatedly told the court he was not trying to hurt Green in the stick duel.

He brushed off a suggestion from Crown Attorney John Cassells that he could have skated away or taken refuge behind an official.

"If you skate away from a person like that, it could drive you out of the league," Maki said.

Maki said he got on the ice for the first time in the exhibition game just before the fight began.

As he jumped over the boards, the puck was shot into the Boston end.

"Teddy and I started after it but Teddy got there first and shot it behind the Boston net," Maki said. "Then we collided ad Teddy hit me, I lost my balance and he hit me in the head with something."

Some witnesses said that at this point, Maki speared Green but Maki said he doesn't recall that.

He said he skated "to the slot" in front of the Bruin net for a chance at a possible deflection.

"I saw Teddy start coming at me, I shied away and his stick hit me on the back of the neck."

He said he raised his own stick in self-protection. When Green "made a motion at me" h swung at Green.

He said his stick hit Green's, slid down and cracked the Bruin defenceman on the head.

He testified he wasn't angry at Green for the punch he took behind the net or for the stick swing. His only thought was to protect himself.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The success of the National and American Football League merger has encouraged pro football to envision expansion to 32 teams, including Mexico and Hawaii, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Monday night, but he's leaving Canada alone. Rozelle offered no timetable on possible future expansion, but said he envisions 32 teams. "We may even have teams outside the continental limits of the United States — such as in Mexico and Hawaii. We have also looked at Canada, but we don't want to do anything that would disrupt the pro football program they already have."

Grey Cup Back in Tow

TORONTO (CP) — The Grey Cup, stolen from Ottawa Rough Riders' clubhouse last December, was recovered in a downtown hotel locker Monday and tucked away safely in a trust company vault.

It will probably stay there until the Canadian Football League has made security arrangements for the future, said Greg Fulton, CFL secretary-treasurer.

Ottawa won the cup Nov. 30 at the Canadian final in Montreal. It was stolen from the club's trophy room in Ottawa a few weeks later.

Police said they found the cup undamaged in a locker in the basement of the Royal York Hotel after receiving an anonymous tip. CFL officials and police then placed it in a Toronto vault of the Montreal Trust Co.

Ottawa police, who investigated the theft, concluded it was the work of pranksters since more valuable trophies were left behind in the clubhouse.

The cup was donated in 1909 to the Canadian Rugby Union by Lord Grey, governor-general at the time. It was stolen in Hamilton, Ont., in 1965, but found abandoned three days later. Its real value does not exceed $50.

Finders, Keepers?

TORONTO (CP) — Playful Toronto police have laid claim to the 1970 Canadian Football League title and the Grey Cup.

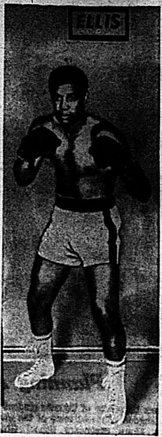
When they recovered the cup and turned it over to the league Monday, the spot reserved for the engraved name of the 1970 Grey Cup champion sported a neat sticker which read: Metro Police ETF (Emergency Task Force).

Metropolitan Toronto police have no football team; only a soccer team.

"If the game ends in a tie we may give it to them," said Greg Fulton, CFL secretary-treasurer.

Under Grey Cup rules the game cannot end in a tie.

The cup, stolen in December in Ottawa, was picked up by police here Monday after an anonymous tip.



Ellis Ran Into Clean Left Hook

NEW YORK (CP) — "Jimmy Ellis said he was going to use me for a checkerboard and jump me right out of the ring," Joe Frazier said in a post-fight interview Monday night.

"But you can't do any jumping when you ain't on your feet."

The Philadelphia slugger had just scored a fifth-round knockout over Ellis to win the undisputed heavyweight championship of the world.

Frazier almost tore Ellis's head off with a left hook seconds before the bell sounded to end the fourth round and Ellis was in no condition to continue.

"When I hit Jimmy Ellis with that last left hook, it was like hitting a baseball real good with the bat and it goes sailing out into the open field," Frazier said.

"He punched well but he tried to take me out with one shot and he ended up fighting my fight.

"I can't remember getting hit with one clear shot. I was moving all the time."

After the first round, Frazier said Ellis was no problem.

"I didn't get hit with more than one or two right hands in that first round. And they weren't solid shots. He did tie me up in the first round, but I didn't get excited. I did what Yank (manager Yank Durham) told me and didn't try to snap away from him."

"I wanted to stay away," said Ellis, who let Frazier move in close after the first round and took a brutal pounding for his mistake.

"I did what I wanted to do in the first round. I was hitting him good."

Asked if his long layoff between fights might have hurt his chances, Ellis replied:

"If I had a tuneup bout, it wouldn't have mattered. If I'd have had four or five tuneup bouts and then got hit with that left hook, what difference would it have made?"

"The guy just caught me with a clean left hook," said Ellis, who was floored for the second time in the round with the same punch. "I wanted to come out but Angelo wouldn't let me."

Gervais Making First Brier Appearance in Eight Years

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rinks skipped by Hector Gervais of Edmonton and Don Duguid of Winnipeg are rated the ones to beat in a star-studded field of 11 at the 1970 Canadian curling championship in Winnipeg, March 2-6.

Gervais, the 280-pound supershooter and his new rink, will represent Alberta in the national round-robin tournament for the first time since 1962.

One of the most celebrated names in the curling world along with Ernie Richardson of Regina and Ron Northcott of Calgary, Gervais won the Canadian and world titles in 1961.

It will be the third appearance at the national championship for Duguid.

The other nine rinks from East to West make this year's national playoff read like a who's who in curling.

Lester Bowring from St. John's will represent Newfoundland for the first time and Art Burke will skip the Prince Edward Island champions from Charlottetown.

Hap Mabey, making his fifth appearance at the national final, will skip the New Brunswick entry from Moncton for the second consecutive year.

Ron Franklin of Halifax will be skipping the Nova Scotia titlist for the second consecutive year.

The Quebec entry will be skipped by Bill Kent of Montreal, who played with the provincial titlist in 1963.

Although Ontario will be represented by two newcomers to the Canadian championship, both have previous experience at the national level.

Southern Ontario will be led by Paul Savage, 22, of Toronto, the 1965 Ontario schoolboy champion, and Northern Ontario will be skipped by Tom Tod, 30, of Thunder Bay, Canadian schoolboy champion in 1958 and runner-up in 1959.

Bob Pickering, of Milestone making his fifth appearance at the national final, will skip the Saskatchewan entry for the second straight year.

Lyall Dagg of Vancouver, the 1964 Canadian and world titlist, will skip the British Columbia rink.

When Wayne Maki hit Ted Green over the head with a hockey stick Sept. 21, he struck a blow for the sport's helmet crusaders.

The blow, albeit in self-defence as the evidence in Maki's trial this weekend indicated, may have ended one of hockey's most promising careers because hockey players find helmets "uncomfortable."

The steel plate due to be inserted into Ted Green's head tomorrow will be somewhat more uncomfortable.

Professional hockey players have been giving a spectrum of excuses for not wearing protective headgear in a sport that combines the violence of football with the speed of cycling.

The sweat gets in my eyes," or "It bothers me" are about the most substantial putdowns of the hockey helmet.

Gordie Howe was perhaps a trifle more honest last winter when he observed that he, and other National Hockey League players feel a loss of identity when their features are partially obscured from full view of Hockey Night in Canada by headgear.

But since when was vanity on a par with sanity? Not even Broadway Joe Namath would venture out onto the turf brandishing his curly locks for all the admiring lassies.

Not unless he wanted Willie Lanier or some other blitzing linebacker to leave a lasting impression on his head . . . dentalwise.

Then again, Namath's sport offers him no choice but to wear a helmet.

Once scoffed at, helmets are now mandatory at all hockey levels from tyke to junior B, and some coaches above that level have opted for hard-hats.

Dapper Joe Kane, former Central Pro League president who makes occasional sorties into Ontario Senior Hockey wars, laid down the helmet law this season while behind the Barrie Flyers' bench.

At the outset of the current OHA Senior A season, Corby Adams and a handful of other Flyers sported helmets. But when the Flyers visited the Mo-Hawks a week ago, Memorial Arena spectators may have noticed that each and every Barrie player was outfitted with green and red headgear to match team colors.

John McMillan, a better-than-journeyman senior hockey player, didn't like the idea at first — until Kane fined him $20 a game for playing with only his hair protecting his skull.

And, in a way, every hockey player paid for his efforts risks a slimmer wallet by leaving his head open to butt ends, blades, elbows, plexiglass, or a combination of these.

At 29, Ted Green can virtually kiss at least $25,000 of annual Boston Bruin bread goodbye.

Somebody who had nothing better to do figured out that when a Bobby Hull collides in full stride with, say, a Tim Horton, the resulting impact is comparable to that felt by a motorcyclist introducing himself to a brick wall at 60 miles per hour.

It's been a long time since we've seen anyone riding so much as a Honda without wearing a helmet.

• • •

Speaking of Mr. Hull, he may not be the first to score 500 National Hockey League goals, but he could do it the quietest.

Ever since his blow-up with Chicago management, Hull has been the victim of a publicity blackout. This recalled something the Point Anner told this department during his "retirement" concerning the ability of such organizations to "blackball" troublesome players.

Whatever the reason for his near-anonymity, Hull has managed to score 25 goals in only 39 games, a consistency unmatched in the league.

That gives him 497 in only 858 regular-season NHL appearances.

Three goals from now, in case you don't hear about it elsewhere, Robert Marvin Hull will become the third man to score 500 times in the National Hockey League.

Here Friday to Help Firemen

Worsley Has Come to Rescue A Few Times

Who's Due for A Hosing?

The firemen are taking dead aim on Belleville law enforcers, as evidenced by hoseholder Don Putnam, in their upcoming charity hockey match. While one of the city's finest, Al Kirby, appears to be at a momentary disadvantage, his hockey playing cohorts hope to turn the tables on the smokies in Friday night's annual Red and Blue game.

The main attraction at this Friday night's Police-Firemen hockey benefit game has been involved in a few rescue missions himself.

Lorne "Gump" Worsley, who will referee Friday night's 8.30 mayhem, can take credit for thousands of saves in the course of his 17-year National Hockey League goaltending career.

The career presumably came to an end this season when the eccentric "Gumper" refused even temporary demotion to the Montreal Canadiens' farm system and "retired."

This, and an increasingly bad case of airplane - caused nerves were the surface reasons for Worsley leaving the club he had helped win four Stanley Cups in his five full years with them.

Rumors have it that Worsley, never known for his shyness (he once told the press, New York Ranger coach Phil Watson was "full of baloney" after Watson had said Worsley was "full of beer") is something less than an admirer of Habs' coach Claude Ruel.

Whatever Worsley's reasons for leaving behind the days of wine and Vezina Trophies, he remains a crowd - pleaser, whether signing autographs around Montreal or stopping slapshots, as he was this past week in a promotional gimmick for the manufacturers of an unbreakable hockey stick.

His presence at the Memorial Arena Friday night is designed as a drawing card to help the city's Firefighters' Association pad their underprivileged children's kitty, just one of the smoke-eaters' annual contributions to community goodwill.

Admission to Friday night's 8:30 game with the city's constabulary costs 50 cents, with that stub also entitling a patron to a chance at a couple of dozen attractive door prizes.

Marysville Draws Blank

The Downtown Merchants blanked Marysville 4-0 last night to win their Gas House League semi - final series three games to one. The Merchants meet the winners of the Mustangs - Mulroney's semi - finals battle, with the Mustangs holding a 2-1 edge in games by virtue of their win by the same margin last night. The two teams have tied one game.

Jim Woodcock fired two goals to pace the Merchants to their berth in the finals. Ralph and Carl Boomhower each notched a goal and Bob Lloyd added three assists for the winners. Goalie Bob Harrison recorded the shutout. The Merchants picked up six of the game's 10 penalties.

Bob Mulvihill's goal after 40 minutes of play gave the Mustangs their 2-1 victory over Mulroney's, despite the fact they drew seven of the game's nine penalties. Gord Green scored the other Mustang goal, while Terry Casselman cashed in Doug Bolte's pass for the only Mulroney's marker.

Belvedere Builds Lead; Cabbies' Whittled Away

The pennant - winning Belvedere Hotelmen had little trouble in the opening round of the Quinte Hockey League semi - finals as they trounced Stinson's Construction 7-1. The second place finishers, Central Taxi saw a 5-2 lead go up in smoke in the other series, as Aluminum Star came back to tie the game at five goals apiece.

Doug Hallam collected two goals and an assist in the Belvedere win. Bill Nolan, Gary McMillan, Larry Stewart, Larry Marshall and Bill Goodfellow had a goal apiece, with Elmer Cain assisting on two goals. Bill Genereaux potted the only Stinson marker, as they received two penalties against five for the winners.

Goals by Ron Urch, Don Moore and Jim Muir erased a three goal lead and gave Aluminum Star their tie with Central Taxi. Tom Pierce showed the way for the Taximen scoring two of their five goals. Maurice Switzer had a goal and two assists, while Andy Prudden and Larry Soule scored once. The cabbies were hit with five costly penalties against only two for Aluminum Star.

Jim Muir scored twice and Ron Urch had a goal and two assists for the Stars. Single goals went to Don Moore and Hubert Pointer.

Second games in the best-four-out-of-seven series will be played next Monday night.

Stinson's Denard Quinte League MVP

In an attempt at knowledgeable and impartial award selections, the Quinte Hockey League used a vote by league referees to sort out top players nominated by the four league teams.

Stinson Construction's centre Rick Denard was voted the most valuable player for the season, finishing second in regular season individual scoring for his third place club. Denard fired eight goals and added nine assists in the fifteen league games to earn MVP honors.

Belvedere Hotel's Elmer Cain edged Denard for the scoring championship with his eight-goal, 10-assist total, as centre on the league-leaders' top line. Belvedere netminders Dave Hicks and Larry DePietro shared the top goaltending award, coming up with a stingy 1.74 goals against average for their 15 games.

The Hotelmen were tops in two other categories, as Doug Moreau was picked top league defenceman and Larry Marshall took the Most Improved Player honors.

Leftwinger Bill Rushlow of Aluminum Stars took the most gentlemanly player award for clean but effective play.

Centennial's Johnston

Charger Good Quarter Bet

(Today, staff sportswriter Eric Emerson gives the first in a series of profiles of some of Belleville's outstanding high school athletes.)

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

When Teddy Roosevelt uttered his famous "walk softly and carry a big stick" line he could quite easily have been describing Centennial Secondary School's quarter-mile star, Frank Johnston.

The tall, 17-year-old Grade 12 student runs with a long ground-covering fluid stride that belies the speed he gets from his five-foot, 11-inch, 165-pound frame.

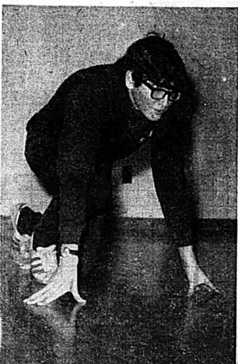
His big stick, however, is an eye-catching gimmick called talent that has brought him the Ontario championship in the midget 440-yard dash three years ago and a second place finish last spring in the same OFSAA event at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

Despite being soft-spoken, Johnston shows particular desire in what is possibly track's toughest race. According to his track coach Bruce Faulds, "Aside from his natural ability, Frank's biggest asset is that he doesn't like to be beaten. The difference between winning and losing is the ability to make yourself run that last 220 and Frank has this ability."

The Centennial super-charger's best effort to date in the quarter mile was 50.5 seconds turned in at the All-Ontario meet last year, where his second place finish was tops for a Bay of Quinte athlete. In addition he anchored Centennial's mile relay team, to a fifth-place finish, after they had won the COSSA and Bay of Quinte titles.



Frank Johnston

Johnston's ability isn't confined to track and field, where he competes in the 220, 880 and long jump as well as the 440. As centre for the senior Chargers basketball team, Frank draws praise from coach Dave Sellers. "He's the only indispensable player I've got," claims Sellers, "He does practically all of our rebounding."

In addition to these sports, the Windsor native also utilizes his speed (10.6 in the 100-yard dash) as a flanker on Centennial football teams and although he tends to downgrade his performance ("I didn't score a touchdown all year and we had a passing team"), football mentor Doug Irvine takes a different view. "He's a good blocker and runner, and he likes contact."

Despite his proficiency in other sports, track is number one on the Johnston agenda and he is hoping for another successful season this spring. In an attempt to improve his quarter-mile time he plans to concentrate on speed work and possibly compete in the 220-yard dash.

Along with his busy athletic schedule, Frank finds time for such activities as the school band, as well as maintaining his studies. University track coaches will undoubtedly be pleased to know that he plans to continue his education after Grade 13.

FOR SALE

"The Hardest Working Classified Want Ads are the ones that are Written the Best!"

Follow These Helpful Suggestions For Writing A Good Want Ad.

1—IT'S ALWAYS BEST to start your advertisement with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment or room for rent or property for sale, start your advertisement with the location.

2—Be CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete or definite information. Always include "price".

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always insert your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, give a preferred time to have prospects contact you.

4—THE GREATEST READER ATTENTION can be secured for your advertisement by using consecutive insertions.

You can stop your ad in the event of results, and then you pay only for the days it is published.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you would like to know (about your offer). The answer you give will make a good Classified Ad.

6—CLASSIFIED readers are already interested in buying your used or new merchandise. These people have the money and are already in the market to buy. So give them every advantage you can with good ad copy.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL to bring satisfaction do so, not through any lack of readership, but because they are often carelessly worded and do not contain enough information to get prompt action.

THE OWL PEN READER by Kenneth McNeill Wells

Here in one volume are the four Owl Pen books written some years ago by Kenneth McNeill Wells. They tell how a journalist and his artist wife left the city and took to farming in a remote area. How they coped with the new and ardous way of living and how they came to know animals wild and domestic, is told in understated narrative.

VERDICT ON A LOST FLYER by Ralph Barker

In 1962 a French patrol in the central Sahara desert came upon a small biplane and beside it a partially mummified body. Thus was solved the disappearance of Captain Bill Lancaster, pioneer flyer of the twenties and thirties. Ralph Barker recounts the story of a very eventful life which included, in addition to the early London to Australia air races, a trial for the murder of a friend of his mistress.

THE PRIVATE WORLD OF LEONARD BERNSTEIN text by John Gruen and photographs by Ken Heyman

The exceptional talents of Leonard Bernstein, conductor of the New York Philharmonic, pianist, composer, author, are well known. But in this book Mr. Bernstein is seen as few are privileged to see him — among his family and friends on holiday in Italy. Photographer Ken Heyman's candid pictures add immeasurably to the portrait of this brilliant man.

CAPTAINS WITHOUT EYES by Lyman B. Kirkpatrick

A former executive director of the CIA discusses some of the intelligence failures of World War II. He shows how either inaccurate or wrongly interpreted in such cases as the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Dieppe, Arnhem, the Battle of the Bulge. Lives were lost and in some cases the course of the war itself was affected because of the misuse of intelligence systems.

WOMAN ABROAD by Janet Stevenson

Among the many books about adventurers in small craft, this is somewhat unusual in that it is written by a woman. She, her husband and crew of two sailed from Los Angeles to Tahiti and back. They were enchanted with the South Sea Islands, and Mrs. Stevenson gives a detailed picture of life there as well as the hazards faced during the voyage.

DAILY LIFE IN ANCIENT PERU by Hans Disselhoff

The cultural history of Peru goes back thousands of years before the Inca Empire, but as these people had no form of writing, our knowledge of their way of life comes from the archaeologist. Dr. Disselhoff, former director of the Berlin Museum of Ethnology, has gathered pictures of Inca crafts from collections around the world and has given us a richly illustrated account of their civilization.

WILDERNESS MISSION by John F. Hayes

In the mid - 1600s the Jesuit Fathers established a mission to the Huron Indians in the wilderness of Georgian Bay. Modelled after a Normandy Village, it was an outstanding achievement, complete, with church, hospital and living quarters. Today, Sainte-Marie has been restored stone by stone and timber by timber and stands as a monument to the devotion and courage of such men as Brebeuf and Lalemant who met torture and death along with the destruction of the Hurons. 'wilderness Mission tells vividly in word and picture, the story of these events.

Kinsmen Celebrate Double Event

The Kinsmen Club of Belleville celebrated the 50th anniversary of the Association of Kinsmen Clubs and the 36th anniversary of the Belleville club at the Club Canara last Friday evening.

Special guests included past national president Harry Moll from Montreal; His Worship Mayor Scott; local MP Lee Grills; Governor of District 6, Pierre Blanchard from Montreal; Deputy Governor of Zone 1, Ron Hotston from Picton; and past Governor of District 6 and candidate for national vice-president Barry Brown from Montreal. Other guests included presidents of several of the other local service clubs and other Kinsmen Clubs in the area as well as past Kinsmen of the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

President Bill Christie chaired the function and welcomed all who attended to help celebrate 50 years of service to the Dominion of Canada and 36 years of service to the city of Belleville.

Kin Bill MacLeod presented a toast to the women; vice president Bob Lafferty presented a toast to the past presidents and past president Roland Belanger presented a toast to the association.

His Worship Mayor Scott extended a welcome from the city to the out of town guests, and congratulated the association and the local club for the service provided to Canada and the local area in the past.

Past president Jack Canning introduced the guest speaker for the evening, past national president Harry Moll. Mr. Moll stressed the fact that as Canada was becoming smaller and smaller, the entire world was doing the same. He pointed out the need for communication with people from other countries at every opportunity and for Kinsmen to continue the outstanding work they have done in the past.

He related experiences he encountered during his visits to several countries last year as national president and his visits to clubs associated with the World Council of Service Clubs. Mr. Moll was thanked by past president Paul Russell.

The Kinsmen of the year award, given in memory of the late Frank Lang, a past president of the Belleville Club, was presented to Kin Chris Akey by Mrs. Mary Lang. This is the second time Kin Chris has received this award.

The Kinette club, the women's auxiliary to the Kinsmen Club, presented four tricycles to be given to the School for the mentally retarded to mark the Kinsmen 50th anniversary.

Prior to clearing the hall for an evening of dancing to the Commodore Orchestra, president Bill Christie thanked his committee chairman Walter Wickett and the members of the committee for coordinating events and making the evening such a success.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Old Respond Well To Disc Surgery

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Charge it up to senility. At least I call myself senile at 60, trying to out-perform kids 40 years younger than myself. I won't tell you what silly acrobatics I tried — just to prove to them that the ol' man was just as fit as he used to be.

To make it short, I've developed a devilish pain in my back that has almost incapacitated me. Also down my leg. I thought it was old-fashioned sciatica. But heat pads and aspirin didn't help.

I went to our doctor. He suspected I had some disc trouble. A consulting orthopedist confirmed the diagnosis. But he wants to make doubly sure. Suggests hospital confinement so he can do some tests. If they are positive, he says he will advise operation.

Just like that! Is it possible for an old fogey like myself to withstand surgery on my spine? The doctors think the trouble is way down in what they call the "lumbar region." — Mr. N.

Comment: Of course, diagnosis is important. Let's suppose that the pain in your back is due to a lumbar disc that has herniated — called: herniated nucleus pulposus. Your doctors will discover it by doing a myelography (special procedure to obtain spine X rays after injection of a dye that will show up on films). They may decide to try conservative treatment at first. Sometimes traction, physiotherapy and bedrest helps. If unsuccessful, they will consider surgery. They will take chest X rays, electrocardiograms and other tests to make sure you are a good candidate for operation. What are your chances?

You will be interested in the results of lumbar disc surgery performed in 25 patients 60 or more years of age. They tolerated the operation well, according to a report in Clinical Orthopedics by Stanley D. Simon, M.D., and his associates.

Most had disc herniations in the fourth lumbar space. Results were excellent in 15, good in seven, and fair in three. No poor results occurred, and all patients improved to some degree.

This is what you have to look forward to, Mr. N., if operation is inevitable. Incidentally, don't feel conscience-stricken about having acted like a kid. Some people develop disc trouble from just bending over to tie a shoelace.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 13½ years old and would very much like to have my ears pierced for my birthday. My mother approves but my father doesn't. He thinks they might become infected or harm my ears in some way. Will you please change his mind? — Miss C.

Comment: It's a simple, harmless procedure provided you don't go performing self-surgery or allow some friend to do the job. I think your father will agree, if you ask your family doctor to cast his vote in your favor.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am an 18-year-old girl and I am writing this letter for my girl friends and me. I would like to know about "kissing disease." Can it be dangerous? Is it really caused by kissing? How can you tell you have it? — The G's.

Comment: Mononucleosis is the name for it. Usually, it is not dangerous. There is fever, swelling of glands in the neck, aches. The basic treatment is bedrest for a few weeks. In some cases kissing may be the cause. But it might just as well have the unromantic label: "Cup and Saucer" disease. Undoubtedly, utensils spread it, too.

Tan Was Once Unwanted

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

By the time these lines appear in print, their author, God willing, will be basking on the sands of Florida, preening like a salamander in the hot sun. And working hard on that supreme status-symbol of American affluence — the winter tan.

It's odd how even a matter like complexion becomes connected with social and economic status over the years. When I was a boy, a tanned or florid face was the sign of a workman. The swells were proud of their pale complexions, which they carefully preserved under parasols and sun-umbrellas.

The parasol, indeed, was invented to guard against the rays of the sun, and was a mark of caste for many decades, when only farm women and their like were forced to acquire dark and leathery complexions. Lightness of skin, for both sexes, set off the gentry from the rest.

Then, as unpredictably as most fashions, the tanned skin became an upperclass symbol, in summer and even more so in winter. Until the 30s, on the beaches, people protected themselves as much as possible; thereafter, they exposed themselves as much as possible — and far more than was good for them. The sun-lotion business entered the billion-dollar bracket.

In large part, the rise of sun-worshiping began with the discovery of the vitamins which were heavily popularized in the '30s — and especially with Vitamin D, which it was learned can be synthesized by the body from the action of sunlight on sterols in the skin. As a nation, we became vitamin-nutty at about the same time we became suntan-happy.

If vitamins were good for you, and the sun provided the essential vitamin D, then we had a perfect rationale for soaking up as much sun as possible — even if overdoses could cause cancer of the skin, nausea, anorexia, kidney damage, and harmful deposits of calcium salts in certain tissues. (In the same way, if two vitamins a day were healthful, we thought six a day were three times as healthful, even if this excessive dosage was wasted or positively injurious.)

So that the consumption of vitamins and the infusion of sunlight became indices of could afford them in conspicuous amounts; and while nobody could tell how many vitamins you had gulped down, everybody could admire your tan in the glim months.

And while rural people became paler (they almost never go outdoors in the summer, unless the machinery breaks down), the urban affluents became ruddier and bronzer and prouder that it costs them a mint to acquire the skin-tone their savage forebears got for nothing, and hated.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 18

Your birthday today: The Sun this year moves into Pisces at 8:43 PM Eastern Standard Time today. Smooth beginnings arise from determined effort: you expand into areas you've never touched before, new sources of income, influence beyond what you know from previous experience. People you work with are replaced by others who remain lifelong friends. Today's natives (both Aquarians and Pisceans) are practical, thoughtful, with a good sense of drama and music.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Look for a lucky purchase, a shopping bargain today. Use your connections this afternoon to consolidate your career gains. Social activities promise a light and enjoyable evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Brethren, neighbors, work associates, turn out to be quite helpful.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The morning is slow, and you may be delayed by having to look out for the safety or welfare of others.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Organize your day so that you get extra time for rest and reflection. Some of your friends get in the way or contradict your opinions. The facts are generally much brighter and happier than current reports — check the stories out.

LEO (July 23 —Aug. 22): It may turn out that you have been eating enough but not selecting a well-balanced diet. Family affairs, social events go quite smoothly if you make a reasonable effort.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Comparing of notes with others in your line of work now can be priceless. Strive for better connections, new contacts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Do your work without comment, but listen well. Protect your own current interests. Old associates, failed ventures are no more viable now than when they collapsed — leave them where they rest. Bickering with mate will get you nowhere.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Wind up what you can of unfinished business, delayed correspondence, and the like — tomorrow may bring drastic changes which need a clear deck.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You will find your companions expressing themselves rather freely. Offers of new connections should be checked before you decline.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Turner Proposes Six-member Federal Law Reform Commission

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons Monday gave first reading to a bill that would create a six-member federal law reform commission.

"This will ensure that the law will never stand still again," Justice Minister John Turner told a news conference.

His department is sometimes called the biggest law firm in the country. Besides handling federal prosecutions, it drafts or scrutinizes all federal legislation.

At least 70 bills have been scheduled for this session and the department's legal aces have little time to take a searching look at aging statutes.

Mr. Turner, who said he is looking for "young tigers" to appoint to the proposed commission, has three major tasks lined up for them.

They would be asked to redraft the Criminal Code, the laws on evidence and public-administration law.

Mr. Turner singled out theft, obscenity and vagrancy as areas of the Criminal Code, often amended but not tackled as a whole since 1892, that are obsolete.

There were also anachronisms and anomalies in the laws on evidence. And the law on public administration includes tribunals, boards and other semi-judicial bodies that issue licences, set fees and even levy fines.

The Commons gave second reading and sent to committee a bill amending rights of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. It also was sponsored by Mr. Turner, who ducked away from the federal-provincial conference at the conference centre, near Parliament Hill, to handle the two bills.

In other business:

—External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister with Mr. Trudeau at the conference, said the U.S. tanker Manhattan may make another Northwest Passage voyage in April.

Speaking on the Supreme Court bill, Eldon Woolliams (PC Calgary North) said the court should be empowered to standardize penalties for illegal drug possession. He said penalties now range from petty fines to two years in prison, depending on where the charge is placed.

Mr. Woolliams said statistics on convictions and sentences of teen-agers using marijuana would show shocking discrimination in various parts of the country. If the Supreme Court could hear appeals on such sentences, there would be uniformity from British Columbia to the Maritimes.

Mr. Turner said later he feels sentences for drug offences should reflect community feeling. The Supreme Court was too far removed from the local level to achieve that goal.

The Supreme Court bill opens the right of appeal in certain cases and removes a restriction in a proposed 1968 bill that would limit certain appeals to cases involving more than $10,000.

Also given second reading Monday and sent to committee study was a bill that would permit the Canada Deposit Insurance Corp. to lend up to $200,000,0000 to investment companies facing serious debt problems.

Both Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin (Peace River) and Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) accused the government of hungrily seeking socialistic powers over investment companies.

Mr. Baldwin criticized clauses that give the government and its officials power to obtain information about a company's borrowing and investing transactions.

Mr. Ritchie predicted:

"I do not believe this government will be content with anything less than complete domination of the social and economic life of Canada—overwhelming centralized socialist power."

'Extraordinary Measures' Likely in Mail Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's mail slowdown continued today under the threat of "extraordinary measures" if 450 postal-truck drivers do not end their work slowdown which has caused massive pileups of mail in the city.

While a post-office spokesman said here Monday that most householders and suburban businesses could expect no mail delivery today, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans warned in the Commons in Ottawa of the special measures.

He was to meet officials of the Confederation of National Trade Unions in Ottawa today. The Federation of Public Service Employees, which represents some 450 drivers involved in the slowdown, is an affiliate of the CNTU.

The truck drivers are protesting in a rotating strike the expected loss of their jobs when a contract held by G. Lapalme Inc. to transport mail in Montreal expires April 1. The contract is to be divided among five companies.

Large numbers of Lapalme drivers have been calling in sick or going to "study sessions" during working hours since Feb. 3, causing pileups of mail in the city.

Monday, as the slowdown entered its third week, the drivers resorted to new tactics.

More than 150 mailboxes—their locks twisted or jammed with glue and plaster—were carted to the main post office where workers had to break them open with hammers and chisels.

Some letters rescued from the jammed boxes were six or seven days old.

Late Monday morning, 30 truck drivers reported for work, filled their trucks with mail for delivery to sub-stations, locked them and walked away.

By the time postal workers had opened the trucks and reloaded the mail on extra-contracted trucks, there was time to deliver only to 11 sub-stations.

Lawyer Tells of Threats

TORONTO (CP) — A disbarred Toronto lawyer testified Monday he was terrified of Vito Calogero and paid him money by stealing and forging promissory notes for loans.

Anthony Francis Blotti was appearing at the jury trial of Calogero, charged with inducing Blotti to pay more than $200,000 by threats, possession of $200,000 knowing it to be stolen and possession of money obtained by extortion.

Mr. Blotti said he had been told by Calogero, a 36-year-old Toronto restaurant worker, that Calogero had friends who would break an arm or leg for $50.

"I was terrified of him," Mr. Blotti said. "He knew I was dabbling in trust accounts. He threatened to report me to the Law Society (of Upper Canada). He knew I was tampering with clients' trust funds, and he became aware that I was tampering with bank accounts."

Farmers Union Wants Body to Guard Press from Profits Bias

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada needs an organized public forum to protect press freedom from a profits-minded bias within the press itself and the public's own ignorance of its rights to information, the National Farmers Union says.

The only effective safeguard for press freedom and an essential goad to improved reporting of affairs is the "informed vigilance" of the public, the NFU said in a submission released today by the special Senate committee on mass media.

The trouble is, the NFU added, Canadians generally do not seem to care about upgrading their news services.

The services, with a built-in bias as businesses largely dependent on business advertising, were inhibited from improving themselves or educating the public to care.

The answer proposed by the NFU is a public agency, independent of government but reporting regularly to Parliament, which would act as an interim watchdog over press standards while tutoring the public at large to take over the watchdog job.

Among other things, Canadians should be taught that it is better to pay more for the news they get so that they—not business interests—would be the pipers who call the tune.

The Saskatoon-based NFU and, in a separate submission, the Agricultural Institute of Canada both called for improved information services to farmers. The institute, an association of agricultural scientists, was scheduled to appear at a committee hearing today. The NFU was not slated to be represented in person.

The NFU, in a 6,000-word submission studded with citations from communications authorities, said Canada has lacked a publication providing farm-oriented coverage of public policy since the 1968 death of The Family Herald of Montreal.

There was little hope of the present publications industry producing a replacement because the industry had a natural bias towards business interests instead of reader needs.

The press itself may not intend the bias or even be fully aware of it, the NFU said. In fact, there was evidence of high personal standards maintained by the majority of journalists and publishers.

However, owners and publishers generally would find their own attitudes coinciding naturally with the business community, because they were businessmen themselves and heavily dependent on advertising by other businesses.

Publishers as a rule resist any pressures from single advertisers, even big ones, but publications would be unlikely to survive if they were "conducted in a manner which would consistently offend any overwhelming portion of advertisers."

When the news system of a community was a monopoly, the conflict between meeting reader needs and making a profit intensified.

When a newspaper has a monopoly, the NFU said, it is unlikely to spend more on editorial quality because it stands to gain little in either circulation or revenue.

Nationally, a monopoly exists in The Canadian Press, the news-gathering organization owned by the newspapers and effectively the only news-distribution service, the NFU said. Existing newspapers thus had a powerful potential instrument for shutting out competition.

The NFU said it was not disparaging CP's work, nor that of persons in other media. Rather, it was pointing out the inherent danger to press freedom in the media's own structures.

In a sense, anything the public did get from newspapers amounted to a gift from the owners, because the reader made a negligible payment towards the costs and tended to be an uncritical purchaser, careless of quality.

Interpreting press freedom as the public's right to adequate standards of information, the NFU suggested that neither the press nor the public at large can be counted on to maintain that right at present.

By its own business-biased structure, the press was as much a potential threat to press freedom as governments—perhaps more, because governments were subject to some public control but press corporations were not.

Taking the oft-repeated word of the press that it can be relied upon to safeguard press freedom is "a little like appointing the company treasurer to do the annual audit."

On the other hand, the reading public generally showed little sign of caring about public affairs or knowing what constitutes an adequate standard of reporting. It also showed little sign that it considered the quality of the press an urgent public matter, perhaps because the press was unlikely to inform them about that aspect of public affairs.

An agency that would teach the public to demand and appreciate top-quality reporting of public affairs would be a start, the NFU said.

But the public would also need economic leverage, and they would thus have to learn that to be sure of good reporting they must pay adequately, instead of accepting a subsidy from advertisers.

The proposed agency, operating as a press watchdog on the public's behalf while carrying out an educational program, would have a beneficial effect on the press—once the press got used to "continuous and competent scrutiny" and began "to respond more positively to responsible criticism of their performance."

The capacity of the press to respond positively and the degree to which newspapers shifted dependence towards circulation revenue would constitute measurements of the program's success, the NFU said.

Byelection Fight Planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Council for Fair Taxation plans to become involved in the Selkirk, Man., federal byelection on a basis of opposition to the white paper on tax reform, council Secretary John F. Bulloch said Monday night.

"We will ask each candidate if he approves of the white paper principles," he told the Toronto board of trade. "If any candidate says he is for the principles of the white paper, we will pour our resources in to defeat him."

The byelection has been called for April 13.

Mr. Bulloch said his council was born spontaneously and has mushroomed to 5,000 members, with an organization in every province.

Western Farmers Are Urged To Leave Land Unseeded

SASKATOON (CP) — Otto Lang, federal minister in charge of the Canadian wheat board, has called on a majority of Prairie farmers to leave their land dormant this year.

In a weekly letter to The Star-Phoenix, he said:

"From an economic point of view, a farmer with adequate grain on hand to meet his 1970-71 delivery opportunities will maximize his net return by not planting and by taking the least costly action possible to maintain his land in reasonable condition for future years."

Mr. Lang added that there were 24,000,000 acres of wheat planted on the Prairies last year which cannot be usefully switched to another crop this year.

"Therefore, a decision not to plant wheat must, in most cases, be a decision to hold the land out of production for the year rather than switch to another crop.

"By growing wheat, the farmer will have no effect on his 1970-71 income, but will increase his costs.

"Therefore, his net income will be less if he plants wheat than if he does not."

Low Pupil-cost Means More Aid

Davis Raises Grants

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has moved to take firm control of expenditures by school boards in an effort to offset the increasing financial burden imposed by education on municipalities.

Education Minister William Davis, announcing the first step in a program to increase the province's share of education costs to 60 per cent by 1972, said grants will be increased in 1970 while school board spending will be restricted.

"Boards will have to sharpen their pencils to come within these limits," he said. "But we feel the regulations are sufficiently enlightened so that they will want to play by the rules."

The province will pay $850,000,000 toward the total estimated cost for education this year of $1,667,000,000. This represents 51 per cent of the total—an increase of five per cent over the 1969 grant total.

Mr. Davis announced new ceilings for the per-pupil costs which form the basis of the gov-

New Schedule Helps Frugal

The increased provincial grants for education, announced yesterday by Education Minister William Davis, will benefit Hastings county, its director of education said this morning.

"The counties with the lowest per pupil costs in 1969 will receive larger grants this year," Eric Runacres said. "A catch-up factor has been built into the grant schedule that will start to level off the capability of boards to provide equal educational opportunity."

Hastings county, he indicated, held per pupil costs in 1969 well below the figures set by the minister.

The per pupil ceiling set by the minister on "recognized ordinary expenditures" is $500 for elementary schools and $1,000 for secondary schools.

In 1969, Hastings county's "recognized ordinary expenditures" were about $805 to $810 per secondary school student and $462 to $470 for elementary school students.

In giving the figures, L. A. Kells, superintendent of administrative services, said he could not provide the exact sum because the method announced yesterday by the minister for calculating per pupil costs differs from the authorized method used last year and the board's financial department is still in the process of making new calculations.

The government is also including in grant calculations "extra-ordinary expenditures" for transportation and debt charges. These do not come within the $500 and $1,000 per pupil ceilings.

However, Mr. Runacres cautioned that the provincial tax subsidy, designed this year

Soviet Policy In Middle East Worries Nixon

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon warned the Russians today the United States would be gravely concerned if their support for the Arab cause led them to seek a predominant position in the Middle East.

In a special foreign affairs message to Congress, the president coupled his warning with a strong attack on Russians arms shipments to North Vietnam, which he called a blow to the cause of peace.

Despite progress achieved elsewhere, Nixon said:

"Our overall relationship with the U.S.S.R. remains far from satisfactory."

His criticisms of the Russians on these points contrasted with his gratification over the progress made by the two countries on other problems, notably moves to scale down the arms race.

The president's 40,000-word so-called State of the World message, the first of its kind by a U.S. president, was a comprehensive review of his approach to foreign policy and national security problems and an accounting of the steps he has taken since he entered the White House 13 months ago.

Expenditure Cuts Urged

Major Deficits Seen for Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is urging the provinces to trim their expenditures in the coming year, rather than increase taxes, to meet the deficits anticipated by most of them.

Federal officials say this is the surest way to restore confidence in the economy without adding to tax costs — which would be inflationary.

Current and prospective revenues and expenditures by all levels of government were compiled in a bulky report by the so-called federal-provincial tax structure committee, composed of finance ministers and their chief advisers.

The report, released Tuesday at the conclusion of the federal-provincial premiers' conference, shows federal treasury surpluses for 1970-71 and 1971-72, and significant provincial deficits for all provinces by the later year.

Some of these deficits — for Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Quebec Ontario, and Alberta, in particular — run to 10 to 15 per cent above projected revenues. A finance department authority said these are major deficits by any standard of measurement.

Magnitude of the tax-structure figures is shown in the 1971-72 estimate of all government revenues, covering federal, provincial and municipal governments. This is given as $29,667,000,000, about 50 per cent higher than in 1967-68.

But expenditures that year will be $31,417,000,000, if the committee's projections are anywhere near reality, and there will be a $1,750,000,000 deficit for all governments, about the same as in 1967-68.

News Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature's select committee on election law voted 6 to 5 Tuesday to approve lowering the provincial voting age to 19 from 21. The vote was not a final decision by the committee, but a sounding of members' views. The final decision will be made when the committee makes its third report to the house.

Premiers in Accord

Not Everything Settled but Most Are Pleased

OTTAWA (CP) — Not everything was settled to everyone's satisfaction, but there was unusual unanimity Tuesday that the federal-provincial premiers' conference was a clear-cut success.

"Inflation and pollution were two of the toughest tasks we have had to face," said Prime Minister Trudeau, "and we have reached a large measure of agreement."

Pronouncing himself "very pleased," the prime minister said this two-day conference "indicates that a country full of good-will can solve all problems if the elected representatives agree to solve them."

"I don't think I have ever seen a higher degree of co-operation among premiers," said Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick.

The chief achievement of the conference was to endorse, with some qualifications, a package program of government support for price and spending restraints. It was considered a follow-up to last week's meeting here in which the Canadian business community agreed to voluntary restraints.

The prices and incomes commission, which prepared the program for the federal and provincial governments, now is expected to discuss the question of wage restraints with organized labor.

Asked about the next step—a meeting with labor representatives—Commission Chairman John Young said that "we'll see what labor's response is to this meeting."

"We took the first step with business, and now another one with government—now we'll have to do some more work."

There was general agreement with the program, prepared by the commission to hold down spending and prices, to discourage increases in professional fees, to consider the establishment of rent review boards, and possible sanctions against industries not abiding by the voluntary restraint program.

But the final communique from the meeting also emphasized the fact that inflationary pressures were not distributed evenly across the country and some parts of Canada were suffering from unemployment as well as inflation.

"In view of this, it is recognized that anti-inflation policies should be applied as far as possible in a way that would not add to the difficulties of regions which were experiencing high unemployment or economic problems."

Premier John Robarts of Ontario said he was satisfied with the conference, and he saw "no difficulty" in co-operating with other provinces. He had told the conference there were indications that the battle against inflation is nearly over and policies should be designed for the post-inflation adjustment.

But with agreement that anti-inflationary policies were not expected to be applied evenly across the country, none of the premiers said he would have difficulty abiding by the general principles of the agreement. Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan said it was the first

Amalgamation of School Boards Brings Changes to Sidney

By TED FORDER
Staff Reporter

The amalgamation of 11 area school boards into the Hastings County school board has brought many changes to Sidney Township. All of the township falls within an area known as number three which is under the direction of area superintendent John M. Cousins.

Before the county board came into being, there were 13 schools of varying sizes in Sidney Township. There are now only five.

Upper and Lower Bayside schools which are side-by-side are now considered as one with one principal. Two additional rooms were added to accommodate the pupils from Belcrest and New Wallbridge, one-room schools which have been closed. The number of rooms at Bayside now totals 20. Students from the one-room school of Old Wallbridge, which has also been closed, now attend Centenary.

There used to be two one-room buildings known as Turners school. Grades one to six pupils now go to Marsh Hill and the students of Grades seven and eight attend the school in Stirling. Other students now being bused to Stirling are those from the one-room schools at Glen Ross and River Valley. Quinte View on the bay shore also closed with pupils now attending Bayside school.

All secondary school students are bused to Centennial school in Belleville.

Planning has been completed for a new composite school for Grades 9 to 13. It will be located immediately east of the present Bayside school. The necessity for this new school was brought about by the rapid growth along the bayshore and Highway 2.

A total of 69 full and part time teachers is employed to meet the needs of over 1,500 students in the township. This number includes teachers of music, oral French and special education who teach in more than one school.

Kindergarten became available for the children of Sidney Township for the first time this year. Two bus lines are employed to carry these young students to either Trenton or Belleville schools.

Classes for these kindergarten students are conducted in the mornings only at the Prince Charles, B. P. Carswell and North Trenton schools in Trenton and King George, Sir John A. Macdonald and Avondale schools in Belleville.

Female attendants have been employed by one of the bus lines to deal with the unique problems encountered with these very young

Economy Hurting

County Council Asked to Take Action on Camp Picton

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

PICTON — Attention focused on the former army camp in relation to the economy of the area during discussions at the Prince Edward County council here last night.

Reeve Allan Anderson of Bloomfield voiced concern as a businessman who had noticed a drop in his business since the camp closed.

While there has been a great deal of interest indicated in articles in newspapers in his opinion very little was taking place. He called for county council to ascertain what progress has been made in connection with the disposal of Craig barracks and the remainder of the houses at Camp Petrie.

The matter was turned over to the county development and industrial committee for action.

The industrial committee is seeking guidance from an expert with a local food processing concern to have set out just what industry looks for when deciding on a location to establish a new plant.

County welfare, although those needing assistance in January lessened from December's figure, requires continuous watching said administrator Grant Harvey. Some recipients have drawn welfare and unemployment insurance payments simultaneously. Mr. Harvey held no hope the money would be recovered. In more than one case overpayment was in three figures, he disclosed.

And the computer at the Commission's office at Belleville does not perform as effective as all would desire, according to the welfare administrator. He said recently the machine acted up and shot out 1000 duplicate cheques. Which meant a great many in the Quinte area expecting payments that week received none.

In December a total of 828 adults and children were being carried as dependents by the county department as the increase over the period a year earlier reached 12½ per cent. The county paid out $211,000 in welfare in 1969 Mr. Thompson's records showed.

The council approved wage and salary increases for personnel employed by the county.

Sophiasburg Reeve George Foster took the opportunity to remind the council "the time has come to adopt a hold fast policy if there is going to be a sincere effort to curb inflation."

The immediate past warden emphasized the importance for employees to give more value for dollars they receive. He pointed out he was not against the report of the study which recommended wage and salary increases because he realized a veto would promote union activity and he was against such interference.

Council approved a 30 cent an hour raise in the wages of hourly rated employees and 8½ per cent increase for salaried personnel.

The resignation of Dr. Lionel Dockrill as physician at the Prince Edward County Home was accepted without comment.

The vacancy is being filled on a temporary basis by Dr. John Pearce.

Warden Gordon Lloyd noted Ameliasburg township had scored three firsts in the last week. Opened the first township firehall in the county, inaugurated the first township garbage collection service in the county and announced that deputy-reeve Norman Post and family had travelled to New York to tape a performance for the Ted Mack Amateur Hour.

students. Some of them fall asleep, others may forget lunch pails, mittens or other clothing.

Mr. Cousins says he is not aware of any other area in which the bus company has shown such consideration for students. "This decision to employ attendants on the buses carrying kindergarten students was solely a decision of the bus line concerned. It is indicative of the tremendous spirit of co-operation which prevails among all those connected with the school system in Hastings County," Mr. Cousins said.

"We like to think we are providing students with the tools that will enable them to make their own decisions. Rather than provide the children with one way, and one way only, for solving their problems, we should provide them with alternate methods and the ability to choose which method is best suited to their particular needs," the superintendent said.

Also located in Sidney Township is the Loyalist College of Applied Arts and Technology.

Classes began in September 1967 with 172 students enrolled in 10 basic courses in temporary accommodation in Centennial Secondary School in Belleville.

The college was quartered in its own temporary building when classes commenced in September 1968. A total of 345 students were enrolled in first and second year certificate and diploma programs.

Designed to accommodate students until the end of the third year, the temporary building is located on a 137-acre campus bordering on the Wallbridge-Loyalist Road.

Construction is under way of a $2,700,000 building designed to accommodate the college's technical program. It is proceeding on schedule and the building should be operational by the target date of Sept. 7 this year. When completed, Loyalist College will be capable of handling a student body of about 600 students.

The motto of the college is Patriae Amore Adducti which is broadly translated as "They are led on in love of country". It was transposed from the motto of the United Empire Loyalists, Ducit Amor Patriae, "led out for love of country".

In this way the College has signified its identification with the Loyalists who gave it its name and lend it their tradition. At the same time the motto shows the college looking toward a continuing dedication of its graduates to the development of Canada.

Studying at Brockville

Eskimo Girl Visits Picton

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Eskimo teenager Rita Iyago left Picton today following a two - day "show and tell visit" with pupils of Queen Elizabeth public school. A grade 9 student at Brockville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, Rita's studies in Ontario are sponsored by a missionary group from the congregation of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Brockville. A native of Baker Lake, a town situated off Chesterfield Inlet on Hudson Bay, Rita earned an opportunity to attend secondary school in Brockville on the basis of her academic standing.

The vice - principal of Queen Elizabeth school, Earl Holt, described Rita's visit as "an opportunity for our children to become acquainted with a native of Canada's north country." Mr. Holt also observed that Rita's arrival in Queen Elizabeth school's classrooms signalled the departure of many myths concerning the Eskimo people. To most of the students surprise Rita dressed and talked like a typical Canadian teen.

The outgoing young Eskimo girl admitted she had never lived in an igloo in Baker Lake. Rita and her 11 brothers and sisters resided with their parents in an oil heated home equipped with electricity. Igloos and tents today in the eastern Arctic are frequently occupied only by old hunters who use them as temporary bivouacs.

During her visits with pupils from various grades at Queen Elizabeth school Rita answered numerous questions concerning her home. Students in the lower grades received impromptu lessons as Rita taught them how to write their names in the ancient language of her people. She also read passages from an Eskimo version of the new testament during opening exercises at school yesterday morning.

Rita noted that teens in Brockville are much like her friends in Baker Lake. Eskimo teens enjoy pop music just as much as the younger generation in Ontario. She observed that, generally, Eskimo teens do not date as early or as often as these she has met during her first school term in Brockville.

Asked what she found most unusual in this province Rita replied, "The heat here was the biggest difference." She added that a typical brisk winter's day in Picton could be compared with a spring day in Baker Lake where February temperatures plummet to 55 degrees below zero.

Although Rita is fond of her 'adopted' family in Brockville she confessed that occasionally she grows homesick for her brothers and sisters. She was unable to celebrate the Christmas holidays with her family this year.

A serious student, Rita has not yet chosen her vocation but expresses a special interest in studying the French language. Had she remained in Baker Lake a secondary school education would have been impossible since classes range only from kindergarten to Grade 6. The nearest secondary school is located in Churchill.

Speaking of Rita's visit, Mr. Holt observed that perhaps this personable young lady had accomplished more than text books and pictures in presenting pupils with an accurate picture of northern Canadians today.

Fourth to Leave

Gerald Hyde Quits City Post

GERALD HYDE

City hall has lost another department head to another municipality.

This time it's a man with a substantial record of service to his hometown local government — both as civil servant and elected representative.

One - time mayor Gerald B. Hyde is resigning his post as personnel director and purchasing agent.

Mr. Hyde has been appointed director of personnel and labor relations for the city of St. Thomas.

His new appointment is effective April 1.

In moving to St. Thomas, Mr. Hyde is taking leave of the city in which his family name has had close ties with municipal administration.

His father, Charles Hyde, was a city councillor for many years.

Mr. Hyde continued the family tradition by successively seeking election to city council in the years 1953-57.

In 1958 he climaxed the family record of service by being elected mayor.

He leaves his city hall post almost four years exactly from the time of his appointment — in March 1966.

Functions of the post have become increasingly complicated in recent years as city hall staff expanded and organized for bargaining.

As purchasing agent Mr. Hyde administers an operation centralizing much of the city's municipal shopping needs.

He also plays a custodial role for the city hall edifice — a Quinte landmark.

In that capacity he is responsible for upkeep and maintenance of the near-century-old building.

Mr. Hyde is the fourth senior official to vacate a city hall post in little more than a year, for appointments in other municipalities.

The planning and treasury departments have seen new appointments in that time.

Recently, Leighton Thompson long-time assessment director, and a veteran of city hall administration, was appointed a provincial government Quinte-district commissioner to the new Ontario-wide assessment system.

conference he had left "feeling happy."

While there was general agreement on the pollution issue that it must be stopped—the proposed Canada Water Bill ran into some snags, and Quebec repeated earlier statements that it was unacceptable in its present form. But there was no disagreement over the general principle of a co-ordinated attack on pollution, and further discussions will take place on the bill.

"It was agreed," said the communique, "that discussions should continue between governments before the adoption of the bill to ensure close co-operation in the development of practical measures to meet the urgent problems that now exist."

With a wrecked tanker spewing oil off the Nova Scotia coast, premiers from the Atlantic provinces attached special importance to the pollution question.

Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia said the disaster in his province "demonstrates clearly the special problems of provinces with tidal shorelines." He said the federal government should give "highest priority" to water pollution control.

Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island agreed. "We can't afford an Arrow disaster on the north shore of Prince Edward Island."

But there was not full satisfaction on every point raised at the conference. The three Prairie premiers received support and sympathy, but no promises, when they talked about the grave crisis facing the west because of the grain situation. However, they did hear federal forecasts that the grain-selling outlook was more encouraging than it has been.

Mr. Trudeau told a post-conference news conference that if the grain situation does not get back on the rails "the federal government will have to consider other measures."

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand of Quebec returned home without the $200,000,000 he had been seeking, and while he said he was "profoundly disappointed," Mr. Trudeau said he didn't think the Quebec premier really expected to get the money.

Participatory Democracy

If the Prime Minister and his many advisors, rather than the Civil Service, are the real power in Canada today — in effect the people who make the decisions — then what has become of Parliament? What has become of the local MP, let alone the public which democratically, or supposedly, has a say, at least, in what goes on?

The civil service, we have been led to believe, has had its wings clipped ever since Prime Minister Trudeau let it be known that he expected his ministers to make their own decisions, rather than simply rubber stamp those made for them by civil servants well versed in the affairs of government by virtue of long service.

As for the notion that Mr. Trudeau and his advisors rule the land like some medieval potentate and his scheming knights must be dispelled on the grounds of impracticability alone. The country is simply too big for that, and the prime minister only human. Besides, Mr. Trudeau's own brand of participatory democracy seems to be getting a fair presentation, and a good example is the furor over the White Paper on Taxation.

The White Paper in itself is a democratic concept, in that it is merely a draft of potential legislation. Until any such legislation is passed the public is being asked to voice its opinions on the proposals. Many people have written personally to the Prime Minister and Finance Minister Benson on this theme. The democratic process is served also by such organizations as the Canadian Council for Fair Taxation which held a meeting in Belleville last week.

As a result of the public's concern over the White Paper it is clear that amendments are going to be necessary. To what extent the government responds to public protest and advice will be a measure of the success of this so-called participatory democracy. Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield for one was not too optimistic when he spoke on CBC television the other night. Be that as it may, it will be an indication of whether the public's voice does count, or if we are all merely baying at the moon.

Now what about the Members of Parliament? It is our experience that if you write your MP on some matter, he will reply promptly and with a real desire to help. Being an MP is largely what you make it; in any event it affords numerous opportunities to be of service to your fellow man and your country.

It is interesting to observe the approach of individual MPs. Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees said in Belleville last December that cabinet ministers and ministers welcomed letters from the public. Yet there was Philip Givens, former mayor of Toronto and the Liberal member for York West saying in a television interview last week that he has no chance to influence government policies, and is embarrassed by having to follow the party line. The former Toronto mayor said he may quit politics if the Trudeau government does not pay more attention to the problems of the cities.

Mr. Givens should keep plugging, maybe become an independent like former Liberal Perry Ryan of Toronto Spadina; or keep socking it to his own ruling party like Allen Sulatycky (Rocky Mountain) does. Mr. Sulatycky claims a government bill to establish a national parks leasehold corporation denies ordinary democratic rights and privileges to residents of Banff, Jasper and other townsites in Banff national park. Or as Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said, it would establish a crown corporation that would control the parks and yet be out of Parliament's hands.

Thus we see that participatory democracy is many things: It is attending local political meetings, it is writing to your MP, it is your MP "doing his thing" not only in the Commons, but looking after his constituents' interests — and it is people like Philip Givens deciding not to give up the battle, for as sure as you know what, once he quits, he will have no audience at all.

It's Saint John

In its film of the American young people in transit through Canada to the Cuban cane fields, the CBC committed a common error with regard to the port of embarkation, Saint John, New Brunswick. This is one of those names that cannot be abbreviated and still call itself Saint John. Yet there it was, at the bottom of the television screen, on two separate occasions at least — "St. John." Now folks . . . name the capital of Newfoundland.

Paddle Steamer Revival

No - - - it's not the Queen Victoria or the Alexandria or one of the many other passenger-carrying vessels which used to ply the waters of the Bay of Quinte, but the former river work boat Melbourne cruising along Australia's 1,600-mile long River Murray. Along the river banks are the red gum trees used to fire its boilers. Other vessels which have lain derelict for years, since river trade came to an end, are also being reconstructed for pleasure cruises. Centre of the revival is Mildura, in the dried and citrus fruits region northwest of Melbourne.

Communism and How It Differs from Christianity

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is well known to most of us that the master key to communist expansion is infiltration into unsuspecting establishments. Once they are inside, the next aim is to get into leading positions.

The great bulwark against atheistic communism of course is Christianity. In order to succeed in their aim, it has been their goal from the beginning to destroy Christianity in one way or in another. In the Soviet press they are repeatedly attacked and belittled. In open debate or honest discussion they are no match for the Christian faith, therefore they must resort to subversion. Science is the holy word in the Communist bible! The theory of evolution is presented whenever possible as 'facts of science'. This they are doing in spite of eminent scientists rejecting it.

The issue is the origin of man and their contention of man's evolution from ape-like ancestors. Much propaganda, for example, has been built around the discovery of fragmentary bones such as the 'pithecanthropus' or ape-man of Java, which years later was classified by Dr. W. Gieseler of the University of Munich as the skull of an extinct species of Gibbon or East Indian ape. Another object of propaganda was the finding of the so-called missing link at Trinial in Central Java which 32 years after the discovery was declared a scientific fraud — not the skull of an ape-man but the kneebone of an extinct elephant.

Talking about evolution, a distinguished American scientist made the following statement: "If the theory of organic evolution is to find a proof in any branch of science, it must find that proof in the biological sciences. It is rather startling to learn that the farther we go into biology, and the deeper we delve into its mysteries, the less probable the theory of organic evolution becomes! Until finally the well-informed research biologist repudiates the theory as scientifically untenable."

But infiltrating science and interpreting it to their own liking is not the only art dedicated Communists must master. They have also succeeded in worming themselves into the good graces of some liberal-minded theologians — as J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI stated back in 1947, to do for them their own subversive work. . . These ministers have rejected the supernatural, the divine, rejected the God of the Bible as revealed in Christ, and substituted in its place a socialistic, materialistic gospel. To go one step further on the same path, they have created the 'God is dead' myth.

Because Marx and the Communists have been for the social and economic betterment of man — so they say — they tell us if Jesus were here today He would march with the demonstrators.

This is the way they are distorting Christianity. Most certainly Christians do believe in social justce and most of them are actively engaged in doing 'good works.' But the Christian faith offers far more than that. It offers peace and joy for the individual, often under adverse circumstances, and it offers hope in the hereafter.

On the other hand what does Communism offer? It offers a lifetime of hard work with artificially-created pleasures, and when life is over nothing more than a small spot six feet deep, in some lonely place.

Arena Activities

Clash in Dates Was Unintentional

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

We hope that you will allow us space to answer Mr. Cavanagh's letter to you, which appeared in your Feb. 10 edition, concerning the conflict in dates of Minor Hockey Week and the Quinte Figure Skating Club's Annual Ice Show.

Originally, when the recent Winter Carnival was in the planning stage, it was thought that these festivities would be of a one-week duration. This time element was later reduced to three days.

In June of 1969, acting on the original plans and in order that we might participate in the events of Winter Carnival Week, the Quinte Figure Skating Club moved the dates for their Annual Ice Show ahead, to coincide with this event. Ice Time in our local arena is obtained from the Arena Manager and not Minor Sports. As the weekend of Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 was not booked for any other event, we were able to obtain these dates for our Annual Ice Show.

I can assure Mr. Cavanagh that at no time, did it ever occur to us, that these dates would conflict with Minor Hockey Week and to the best of my knowledge, no one, including Mr. Cavanagh, ever brought this fact to our attention, or approached us to change these dates.

We in the Quinte Figure Skating Club greatly admire Minor Hockey and we feel that the entire community each and every year, is extremely grateful for the untiring efforts put forth by those who promote Minor Hockey. You do such a splendid job and we only hope that a breakdown in communication such as this never occurs again.

We also hope Mr. Cavanagh, that this answers your questions.

President, Quinte Figure Skating Club

A Fair Distribution?

'Y's' Share of United Appeal

Editor,
The Intelligencer

A letter to the editor signed by Mr. H. A. (Bert) Messacar, General Secretary, Belleville Family YMCA, published in one of last week's editions (February 11?) of the Intelligencer is interesting and informative. It portrays the activities of the "Y" as capable of fulfilling all the recreational needs of the citizens of Belleville and of teaching and providing leadership for the young — and presumably for the not so young.

In the light of all the community benefits described in Mr Messacar's letter the question may be asked why it has not increased its active membership from approximately 8 per cent of the population of Belleville and area to at least 35 per cent, this larger percentage presumably capable of supporting in a financial sense the activities described by Mr. Messacar. Has it been carrying its light under a bushel? What are the facilities in the building itself besides the swimming pool, the table tennis and the bar-bells, etc., all of which have been described by a previous writer as either in need of repair or not being used for the purposes intended.

Where are the basketball teams, the minor hockey teams, the soccer teams, the baseball and softball teams, the track and field participants? (The emulating Trudeau and Michener joggers risking cardiac failure appear to be the lone participants in athletic endeavor at this writing.)

Mr. Messacar places some stress upon the teaching of leadership. This is very commendable and in some degree necessary, but in point of fact leadership is born with the individual in whatever environment he springs from and will not survive on a taught basis. Only the natural struggle for survival produces leaders.

The 18,000 services Mr. Messacar states have been performed by the "Y" in 1969 is an all-encompassing figure which, if broken down to details of services rendered, would be interesting reading. May we be enlightened, Mr. Messacar?

It is quite true that the "Y" offers a community service. But the fact remains this community service as offered in its present form does not appeal to the great majority of the citizens of Belleville. This is a proven fact. If the "Y" services were considered vital to the community there would be no problem in providing sufficient financial support. What irks the man on the street is the fact that he is asked to support an institution which does not greatly interest him and to which has been allocated 30 per cent of his contribution to the United Appeal, while the remaining and very worthwhile agencies, most of which he is satisfied are of great importance to the community, share the remaining percentage. To the man on the street it does not add up properly, it is not a fair distribution of the proceeds of the United Appeal.

Etobicoke Experiment

Colored Trash Cans in Fight Against Litter

Kingston Whig-Standard

Unattractive trash cans may be part of the reason why Canada doesn't appear to be making much progress in the fight against litter. At least, that is the basis of an interesting experiment now underway in Etobicoke, where litter has municipal officials seeing red.

Etobicoke's 200 trash cans will be painted chartreuse, green, ice blue, sunshine yellow and terracotta red. Roads Commissioner Marcel Cox says that these colors, chosen by psychologists and tested in several cities in the United States, are attractive to most people. In fact, they are so attractive that people are subtly persuaded to deposit their litter in the cans instead of tossing it away on sidewalks, streets and roads.

Etobicoke spends $50,000 a year picking up litter. Whether the colored trash cans will have any significant effect on the budget in future years remains to be seen. But every effort made to reduce the amount of litter scattered across this country is to be welcomed. We wish Etobicoke success in its color campaign. We are certain that many municipalities will be watching the results with great interest.

Belleville and vicinity is at present experiencing the greatest snow blockade of years. Driving snow into deep drifts a northwestern gale developed last night and continued for the greater part of today. Traffic is tied up on the country roads and the few trains that reached here were very late. This afternoon a number of men were sent to the hospital to clear a road to that important institution, as it was practically impossible to get near the building. The storm has taught the city authorities a lesson, namely, that one or more snow plows are a necessity; at present this city has not a snow plow.

Ottawa Has Plans to Make Customs Officers Bilingual

Brockville Recorder and Times

The federal government's bilingual policies have run into a hornet's nest here. Action taken by the government to provide bilingual customs' officers at the two international bridges in Leeds and Grenville is being strongly opposed. It is feared as only a first step in making all federal services in the area bilingual. There is strong opposition to the government action on other counts: It is felt there is no need for it here, and the manner in which the policy was introduced. There had been no prior public announcements by the public service as to its plans or intentions.

And while there have been assurances that the men and women now in the customs' service will not lose their jobs or be moved to another centre if they don't learn French, there is a strong feeling that this is merely an attempt to console those who will eventually be out of a job or shippel away.

People in this area who have been most sympathetic in their feelings towards the Official Languages Act are now concerned about its implications if the local situation is an indication of what can develop. Are Leeds and Grenville counties part of a bilingual district under the meaning of the Act? Since the counties aren't, why this move? The action involving the customs' officers is part of the government's policy to provide basic bilingual services where government facilities are used by either French or English speaking Canadians. Under the Official Languages Act there must be a population group of at least 10 per cent before that group can request facilities in both languages in the federal services.

The government policy is unjust in the light of several existing factors. This is an English-speaking area of the country, an area, incidentally that has looked kindly upon the French language for many years, even in its elementary schools. The federal services in this area have always been a source of employment for the English-speaking youth in the two counties. This new government policy, requiring bilingualism as a condition of employment will place these jobs out of reach of most of the people who heretofore have felt qualified for them. They cannot qualify because the methods of teaching French to date have been a sad failure for the majority of students attending our schools. Even youngsters who have had French lessons from Grade One are still unable to speak scarcely any French by the time they reach Grade Eight. There has been a scarcity of good French teachers, the type who can stimulate an interest.

In such a situation, it is not difficult to figure out who will get the local jobs. It will be people from bigger centres where facilities for learning French are available and French - speaking Canadians. Under the weight of such fears, it is understandable that the Leeds Liberal Association president, Tom Cossitt, would take the strong position he has. He is calling for the government to pull back on its decision here and to cancel it.

We take this position in this matter of being among those most concerned. The question uppermost in our mind is this: Should a man's job depend on learning the French language if he lives in an English-speaking area of Ontario and the facilities for learning French are inadequate? Our answer has to be no.

Fashion Eccentricity

Regina Leader-Post

Designers and female consumers alike are taking a second look at the maxi-coats. The males don't bother. The coat represents one of the not-infrequent swingbacks in women's styles. A few of the mothers of some of the current devotees, and certainly most of their grandmothers, remember when the maxi-length was the ordinary length of the day. But both designers and consumers seem to have forgotten that while the clock can be turned back stylewise, very little else can. When grandmama wore her elegant floor - length coats there were no such things as escalators, and hence no danger of catching one's heel on clothes on moving stairs. Those who had to board buses, trains or other modes of travel, were invariably given an assist by a gallant male since the argument concerning women's independence and equality was hardly louder than a whisper in those days.

Even as a pedestrian a long-skirted woman was in no danger of tripping or being tripped by her trailing hemline in the more leisurely days of the past. No one was in much of a hurry on the sidewalks any more than they were when they took to the roads by way of horse and buggy or the early horseless carriages. But, in the world of speed, the mini styles have the advantage.

Of course, style has also affected men's apparel and many men have broken away from sombre and conservative styles. Advertisements in vivid colors are given a place of importance in catalogues and magazines. Leading the boom in "exciting" men's wear are the British manufacturers and it seems North American men more and more are demanding the Savile Row look to the extent that British exports in 1969 exceeded previous years by more than three million pounds.

Nasser Sees Plot

PARIS (Reuters) — Egyptian President Nasser, in an interview published here today, accused the United States of trying to overthrow him and said he did not think the Big Four powers were capable of producing a peace plan he could accept.

In the lengthy interview with Le Monde, the Egyptian leader said he would be ready to accept a ceasefire if a date were fixed for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories.

He also admitted that Egypt was growing more dependent on Moscow in the military field and said he had given orders for Egyptian pilots not to challenge Israeli planes raiding deep inside Egypt.

He said Egyptian military officers had argued for reprisals after last week's Israeli air attack which killed about 80 workers at a metal factory at Abu Zabal, on the outskirts of Cairo.

"I told my visitors that I refused to make decisions under the influence of emotion. I asked for a period of reflection."

Nixon Talks on 'State of World'

one of dominance to one of partnership, with Washington keeping its treaty commitments and helping to defend non-Communist countries but dropping the role of world policemen it took on after The Second World War.

Nixon spoke of difficult decisions ahead as the U.S. carried out its new doctrine of disengaging from the asian mainland while keeping treaty commitments with its allies there.

He pledged that Europe must be the cornerstone of a durable peace, and denied that the new emphasis on partnership is a step toward disengagement from the continent.

Nixon's message disclosed a new U.S. strategic concept, scaled down from that of the 1960s.

He said the U.S. intended to maintain adequate conventional forces to meet simultaneously a major Communist attack in either Europe or Asia, to assist Asian allies to meet non-Chinese attacks, and to contend with an emergency elsewhere.

The president also made another peace bid to Hanoi, and defended his decision to build a Safeguard anti-missile system to meet Russia's growing missile strength and China's nuclear capability.

Nixon appealed for restraint in the Middle East, saying direct engagement by the major powers must be limited.

"The activity of the Soviet Union in the Middle East and Mediterranean has increased in recent years," he said. "This has consequences that reach far beyond the Arab Israeli question. . . .

". . . The United States would view any effort by the Soviet Union to seek predominance in the Middle East as a matter of grave concern. . . .

"We see evidence . . . that the Soviet Union seeks a position in the area as a whole which would make great power rivalry more likely," he added.

The president said that 1969—the first year of his administration—saw a good beginning in attempts to improve American-Soviet relations.

But, on Vietnam, he said the Russians had failed to exert a helpful influence at the deadlocked Paris peace talks, continued large shipments of weapons to North Vietnam, and bore a heavy responsibility for Hanoi's refusal to negotiate or to agree to a peaceful settlement.

The president's message, entitled "a new strategy for peace," warned that U.S. strategic planning and diplomacy would be seriously complicated in the 1970s by mounting Soviet nuclear strength and the prospect that China would be able to deploy intercontinental ballistic missiles.

He said an inescapable reality of the decade was Soviet possession of powerful and sophisticated strategic forces approaching and, in some cases, exceeding the U.S. arsenal in numbers and capability.

Nixon reported the Soviet Union had overtaken the United States in the number of operational long-range missiles in the last five years.

Russia's growing force of intercontinental nuclear missiles has created "a serious threat to our retaliatory capability" and raised serious questions about where the Soviet Union is headed.

By the end of this year, Nixon reported, Russia will have an estimated 1,590 missiles capable of reaching the North American mainland against an estimated 1,710 for the United States. Five years ago, in mid-1965, he said, Russia had only 331 such missiles to 1,398 for the United States.

In the same period, the president said the Russians would show relative progress in acquiring submarine-launched ballistic missiles, with the U.S. arsenal increasing to 656 from 464 and the Russian to 300 from 109.

Nixon said he used these figures, not to argue for any speed up in U.S. missile deployment but to defend his Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system and his plans to ask Congress to expand it this year.

He said he was more convinced than ever that Safeguard was needed to counter a serious danger to American capability to launch a retaliatory blow against a Russian missile attack and also to provide an area defence against a possible Chinese threat.

He said a sharp increase in U.S. offensive missile deployment might not have any significant benefits because the Russians might harden their own positions and the prospect for arms control agreements could be irreparably damaged.

" . . . The Soviets' present build-up of strategic forces," Nixon said, "together with what we know about their development and test programs, raises serious questions about where they are headed and the potential threats we and our allies face.

"We must insure, that all potential aggressors see unacceptable risks in contemplating a nuclear attack, or nuclear blackmail, or acts which could escalate to a strategic nuclear war, such as a Soviet conventional attack on Europe."

The president made a new appeal to Hanoi to work or a peaceful settlement of the Vietnam war and negotiate seriously at the Paris talks.

A breakthrough in Vietnam peace negotiations could "come with little warning" but there's no sign it will, he said.

The president acknowledged that the United States faced difficult choices in implementing the doctrine he enunciated at Guam last summer which called on Asian countries to assume responsibility for defence against subversion and in local wars.

Nixon summed up the Guam doctrine in these words:

"Its central thesis is that the United States will participate in the defence and development of allies and friends, but that America cannot—and will not—conceive all the plans, design all the programs, execute all the decisions and undertake all the defence of the free nations of the world. We will help where it makes a real difference and is considered in our interest. . . .

"We may be able to supplement local efforts with economic and military assistance. However, a direct combat role for U.S. general purpose (conventional) forces arises primarily when insurgency has shaded into external aggression or when there is an overt conventional attack.

"In such cases, we shall weigh our interests and our commitments, and we shall consider the efforts of our allies, in determining our response."

Discussing the NATO alliance, the president said that "for the foreseeable future, Europe must be the cornerstone of the structure of a durable peace."

Nixon said the U.S. retreat from dominance and toward partnership with its NATO allies was not a step toward disengagement in Europe.

"We can no more disengage from Europe than from Alaska," he said.

He also said the United States might be hurt economically by a truly unified Europe, but that would be outweighed by political gains made by the West as a whole.

The president said the policy of the United States and its NATO allies to try to negotiate with the Russians was meant to reduce existing tensions, not stir up new ones.

At the same time, he reiterated his rejection of the so-called Brezhnev doctrine—proclaimed by Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev after the invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968—that Eastern Europe was the exclusive concern of the Soviet Union.

Davis Raises School Grants And Puts Limits on Spending

ernment grant system. These call for a $500 ceiling for elementary pupils, an increase of $50 over last year, and a $1,000 ceiling for secondary students, an increase of $150 over 1969.

The ceilings in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Windsor—which do not receive the provincial tax subsidy initiated last year for rural schoolboards have been set at $600 and $1,100.

Mr. Davis told a news conference that any board exceeding expenditures based on the new ceilings must obtain the extra funds from its own revenues. The government will share operational costs only up to the announced ceiling and will not apply the tax subsidy to the extra expenditures.

Mr. Davis also moved to induce municipalities to hold down tax increases for education funds by announcing the tax subsidy will be paid only when taxes are increased by no more than half a mill.

Subsidies were paid last year when a municipality increased taxes by one mill to meet education costs.

The minister said he expected that few municipalities would have to impose even the half-mill increase to finance the new ceilings on expenditures.

"The allowances per pupil on which grants will be paid are realistic in terms of necessary expenditures and do not leave room for any excessive or non-essential expenditures," he said.

Boards already spending close to the ceiling will still be able to maintain their programs by "affecting any possible economies," he added.

The spending restrictions are the first action Mr. Davis has taken under an amendment to the Education Act last year which gives him such powers.

The minister noted the school boards still will retain control over how education funds are spent and how programs will be tailored to meet the demands of the regulations.

"We are putting limits only on the total dollars available per student," he said.

Frugal Hastings Benefits

to deter education levies from going beyond a half - mill increase based on equalized assessment, does not mean that property taxes for education will increase by only a half-mill on equalized assessment this year.

"That half - mill provision is only for our budget calculations; it is a built-in subsidy factor used in figuring out the amount the government will pay us in grants," he said.

Last year, the province paid for everything above a one-mill increase on the equalized assessment, provided boards held their total expenditures to 115 per cent of their 1968 level.

Mr. Runacres also noted that the grants scheme included "some very good principles."

"For instance," he said. "areas with high commercial assessments will receive lower grants this year. Thus, the province can turn more money back to the rural areas with very low assessments.'

"Our board is faced with built-in increments this year that we can't avoid," the director commented. "Materials are up in cost at least 5 per cent this year and we have teachers' salary increases to cover.

"The big thing now is to calculate the difference between what we need and what the grants will cover."

F. B. Allore, superintendent of the Hastings-Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board, shared the general optimism concerning the increased provincial grants.

"In comparison to last year, there appears to be a much better approach to the problem of provincial support for education," he said.

Shared-cost Programs May Go

Ontario Faces Half Billion Increase in Its Debt in 1971-72

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario will balance its 1970-71 budget, without raising taxes or licence fees, only by trimming $347,500,000 from the spending estimates of its 23 government departments.

And if revenues and expenditures continue to climb as they have since 1952, the province will be able to meet its responsibilities in 1971-72 only by going more than $500,000,000 in debt.

Those were the figures revealed in a projection of provincial expenditures and revenues, included in the report of a committee composed of the finance ministers and treasurers of the 11 Canadian governments.

The report, made public at a federal-provincial conference on the economy and pollution, showed that federal revenues continue to exceed their requirements while the provinces face expenditures greater than the money available to them.

Premier John Robarts said the federal government had indicated it has no immediate plans to correct this "imbalance," and Ontario would consider courses of action that include getting out of shared-cost programs and asking for the Ottawa contribution in cash.

This wouldn't give the province any more money than it gets now, but it would give Ontario control over its own programs, permit tighter controls on costs and allow the government to spend its money "on programs of our own priority."

Mr. Robarts said Ontario has estimated 1970-71 expenditures at $4,266,900,000, an increase of $949,000,000 over last year.

Revenues were estimated at $3,919,400,000 which, if department programs were not cut, would mean a deficit of $347,500,000.

He said about 80 per cent of the increase in costs from last year comes from health and education programs: health insurance $200,000,000; hospital care $123,000,000; increased grants to school boards to bring the provincial share of education costs to 50 per cent, $213,000,000; and universities and technical schools, $100,000,000.

"We may ask that the opting-out option in shared-cost programs be restored so we can take the fiscal equivalent, as Quebec was permitted to do," he told a news conference.

The option has not been available for a year but Mr. Robarts said "we can ask that it be reopened."

The premier said Ontario may also consider letting the federal government "take over all responsibility for this type of program."

"If they wanted to take over all health care coast to coast it might be a point we would consider," he said.

He would be "delighted" if Ottawa offered to take over all responsibility for health insurance but he doubted that the federal government would want it.

"They just don't want to give up the power that money gives them."

Presentation of the tax structure committee report wound up the two-day conference in which Ontario:

—Accepted inflation-fighting proposals made by the federal wages and incomes commission;

—Promised to hold the tax line, refrain from borrowing, balance the provincial budget and put pressure on municipalities and school boards to do the same;

—Agreed to ask professional groups to accept voluntary restraints on fee increases;

—Announced plans to broaden the authority of municipal leasehold bureaus so they could become an influence in restricting rent increases;

—Gave support to the Canada Water Act and federal plans to co-operate in pollution-abatement programs, but asked that some sections of the act be amended to prevent conflicts with provincial legislation and interference with provincial agencies.

A proposal by Mr. Robarts that governments consider restrictions on consumer credit so that investment money could be directed into industrial development was sent to the wages and incomes commission for further study and Mr. Robarts said this was acceptable to him.

Quebec Cabinet to Discuss Federal Refusal to Give Up Tax

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand meets his cabinet today to discuss "what measures to take" following the federal government refusal Tuesday to grant the provinces a greater share of the federal tax dollar.

While Mr. Bertrand indicated that the cabinet would talk about the proposed 1970 elections, he virtually ruled out the possibility that a general election would be called in Quebec province immediately.

Mr. Bertrand walked away from the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa Tuesday, profoundly disappointed with Prime Minister Trudeau's attitude which he described as "unyielding."

Asked if the election question would be raised at the cabinet meeting, Mr. Bertrand replied that cabinets habitually discuss elections.

He also said Quebec's position on the Ottawa "no" would not be known until Finance Minister Mario Beaulieu makes his 1970-71 budget address in the legislature, scheduled to begin a new session next Tuesday.

The premier said there has been no changes "at this time" in the Union Nationale party's plans to hold a policy meeting in Montreal April 17-19 to build a platform for the general elections Mr. Bertrand says will be held this year.

At the federal-provincial conference, the provinces asked Ottawa to make a net transfer of fiscal resources to enable them to meet rising costs, especially in education, health and welfare, without increasing the total tax burden of Canadians. Ottawa refused saying it needs its own tax dollars to fulfill its responsibilities as a national government.

Quebec sought $200,000,000 to be collected in the province by the federal government under its social development tax between Jan. 1, 1969, and this July 1.

Quebec says the tax was imposed to finance the medical care insurance program, which Quebec will not enter till July 1, and argues that Quebecers have been taxed for a service without receiving it.

The federal government says the social development tax was not specifically levied to finance medical care.

Prime Minister Trudeau told a news conference Tuesday the federal government could not fulfill its role in distributing wealth between rich and poor provinces if it returned to each provincial government the taxes collected within its territories.

In his brief to the conference Premier Bertrand said that if Ottawa refused to hand over the $200,000,000 Quebec would have no alternative but to take what he described as "the measures dictated by the situation."

One problem facing the Union Nationale government is the possibility of being forced to increase provincial taxes in a general election year.

Finance Minister Beaulieu said earlier this month revenue forecasts based on existing revenue sources do not meet the minimum needs for existing spending programs.

Mr. Beaulieu, organizer of the Union Nationale's successful 1966 election campaign, will not attend the regular Wednesday cabinet meeting scheduled to begin at 3 p.m.

The premier said Mr. Beaulieu left the federal-provincial conference early to travel to London where he would "try to borrow some money."

Guild Makes Plans For Dessert Bridge

The newly elected executive assumed their duties at the recent meeting in the Manor of Albert College. The president, Mrs. Earl Fleming conducted a brief business session. The important item of business was the making of arrangements for the spring dessert bridge to be held during the Easter recess in Ackerman Hall. The conveners are Mrs. Fred Davidson and Mrs. L. L. Shewfelt.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Earl Hickey and in the devotional period she centred the members' thoughts on Lent not just an event but a time of personal commitment. Mrs. Hickey concluded with a well-known prayer of St. Francis of Assisi which the members of Christ Church are asked to use during Lent. With suitably chosen music Mrs. R. B. Wright and her acompanist Mrs. E. M. Hubbs contributed to this Lenten service.

Mrs. A. C. Locke following the diary she kept when on a world tour with her husband a few years ago, told of the interesting lives of her daughter Mary, a nurse and her husband Dr. Gordon Gray who are missionaries under the overseas Missionary Fellowship. They work in Saiburi, South Thailand, six degrees above the equator in a 20 bed hospital. Dr. Gray has recently returned to Thailand after an extended furlough when he completed post-graduate studies for admission to the Royal College of Surgeons of Canada.

Afterwards Miss Lena Roblin expressed the thanks of the Guild to Mrs. Locke. Mrs. J. B. Boyce and Mrs. R. Burr served at the tea table.

HOLY ROSARY CWL

The president Mrs. F. Mulvihill opened the February meeting in the usual manner. Mrs. A. Gallant notified the members that the CWL would combine with the Holy Rosary PTA for a special meeting in March with speakers from the board of education.

Starting in March tickets will be sold on a handmade quilt to raise funds for the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development of Peace.

The World Day of Prayer will be held on March 6 at College Hill United Church. It is hoped that as many as possible will attend with two from each church asked to sing in the choir. A collection will be taken for the Christian Missions.

On behalf of the Development of Peace program, Mr. and Mrs. C. Munroe presented a moving film entitled, "One Village - Two Worlds". The picture showed the urgency for mission work in other countries. After the film, Mr. Munroe answered questions.

Lives of Many Elderly French People Poor

PARIS (CP) — A recent report on social security in France deplores the living conditions of about 2,300,000 elderly people who live on less than 342 francs—about $70—a month.

The report notes that persons over 65 years of age represent an increasing part of the French population—11.5 per cent in 1954 and 13.5 per cent in 1968. The proportion will grow, it says, because of the increase in the average life span.

France has 6,600,000 inhabitants more than 65 years old.

The social security report follows an inquiry conducted among retired persons and persons in old-folks' homes.

It discovered that some elderly people spend up to nine hours a day consigned to armchairs. There is no re-education program for them because of a shortage of equipment and personnel.

An old person pays from five to 20 francs—$1 to $4—a day in retirement homes and up to $6 in money-making homes. In some they are poorly fed, and heat and light are cut off for as long as 18 hours a day.

Many establishments, the report says, have no proper sanitary and social facilities "and seem to operate a veritable exploitation of aged persons."

It's not surprising, then, to find that 24 per cent of the aged population prefer to live in their own places when they can.

It is not easy when one considers that the average annual income of 2,300,000 of them is $800. Some of them get additional aid, but the report underlines that such aid "does not surpass 20 francs ($4) a year per person older than 65."

Many people face unemployment before reaching retirement age.

In most places in France today the "hiring age" is 45, but in some enterprises it is as low as 30 and even 25.

As a result workers of 50 years of age constitute 40 per cent of employment applications in France, although they represent only 18 per cent of the manpower.

The report adds that France set aside only 25 per cent of its social security program in 1965 to elderly persons. This compares with 40 per cent in West Germany.

One upshot of the report is that the French government is promising to increase by 15 per cent the minimum allowance for the aged starting in October. Since January, it has been 2,900 francs—less than $600.

Delegates Chosen at Meetings

QUEENSBORO WI

Mrs. C. A. McMurray was hostess for the Feb. meeting of the Queensboro WI which was held in the WI hall on Wednesday evening, Feb. 12. There were nine members and one visitor present.

The president, Mrs. McMurray was in charge of the meeting. Mrs. Bosley thanked the WI for a sympathy card received at the time of her brother's death.

It was decided to send the president to the officers' conference in Guelph in April. An invitation to attend Madoc's 60th anniversary was received and it was decided to try a travelling apron as a project to raise funds.

The program had a valentine theme. A poem "Other fads" was read by Mrs. K. Cassidy; Mrs. Allan Thompson read a short article on "Modern Grandmothers" and a song was sung by Mrs. Arthur Holmes who also read a story on Valentine's day. Different members spoke of current events.

The president gave each member a valentine card after which Mrs. Holmes played several recordings of old songs and Mrs. McMurray closed with a short poem "Smiles".

Lunch was served from a table decorated with Valentine's Day trimmings.

SIDNEY SOUTH

The February meeting of the Sidney WI was held at the home of Mrs. D. Plumpton with 12 members and two visitors present.

Mrs. J. Tomalty presided over the meeting and conducted the various items of business.

Correspondence included the officers' conference to be held in the spring at Guelph with the Agriculture and Canadian Industries leader. Mrs. G. Grills eligible to attend.

Mrs. C. Moon and Mrs. J. Caddick, 4-H leaders, reported on their new course of study and what was required of the girls who attend.

Members were reminded of the World Day of Prayer which is to be held the first Friday in March.

Members were also reminded of the short course "Furniture Facts" which is to be held on Thursday, March 5, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the home of Mrs. J. Caddick. As 20 or more people are required to attend it is hoped all Institute members and their friends will support this project.

The theme of the evening was "Citizenship and Education" and the guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Bill Jeune, who with her husband enjoyed a trip to England and Wales this past summer. Mrs. Jeune showed many colored slides of their homeland and commented on the various places of interest. As she and her husband had not been to England for over 40 years they saw many changes in some things and others were as they had remembered them from childhood. Pictures included lovely green countryside and different bodies of water, also special pictures of the Investiture of the Prince of Wales by his mother Queen Elizabeth. Also viewed were post cards and souvenirs, a tea towel and the Welsh Flag. A lively commentary by Mrs. Jeune added much enjoyment to the evening. Mrs. F. Meens thanked Mrs. Jeune and presented her with a gift in appreciation of a most enjoyable time.

Mrs. R. Nobes gave a report on the recent Summary Day held at Stirling which she and six other women had attended and also read the poem which was presented by the WI. She was thanked by Mrs. J. Tomalty for her continuing support in the short courses.

The meeting closed and lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants, Mrs. F. Meens and Mrs. M. Mywaart.

Mary's Homemade Bread Recipe

By MARY MOORE

Last month I gave you a recipe for genuine pumpernickel that I was proud of. Now I am giving you a recipe for 2 loaves of bread — nearly white, but with a little fresh whole wheat flour added for flavor and health.

Making bread is a weakness of mine, and you know it, but the fun of punching and kneading adds to the pleasure for you can get rid of your frustrations, if you have any, by punching the daylights out of the dough as you knead.

HOMEMADE BREAD

(Almost white — 2 loaves)

1 pkge. granular yeast
1 tsp. sugar
¼ cup lukewarm water
2¼ cups scalded milk
3 thsps. margarine
2 thsps. sugar (second amount)
2 tsps. salt
5 cups sifted all - purpose white flour
1 cup unsifted fresh whole wheat flour

In very large mixing bowl soak the yeast with the 1 tsp. sugar in the lukewarm water 10 min. Meanwhile scald the milk in a medium-sized pan. Remove milk from heat as soon as bubbles form around edge and stir in the margarine, sugar and salt until dissolved. Cool to lukewarm and add to risen yeast liquid. Add 3 cups of the white flour and beat until smooth. Now add remaining flour and turn out on whole-wheat - flour-sprinkled board and knead 200 times. Return to scraped down bowl. (If desired do as I did at this stage: cover carefully and chill overnight.) Allow to rise until more than doubled then punch down dough, turn out on whole-wheat-flour-sprinkled board to knead again 200 times. Cut in halves, shape into two loaves and place in well - buttered standard loaf pans and let rise in warm place. (I place them under the stove light.) They should rise about 1¼ to 1½" above rims of pans. Bake at centre of oven at 375 deg. Fahr. My loaves were rich gold and crusty and baked in ½ hr. You will have to use a little of your own judgment — but do be sure these loaves are well baked.

You will notice that this recipe makes two economical loaves of delicious bread. To make it even more economically, you can use milk made from skim milk powder.

Successful Living

Sociable Husband Annoys Wife

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

Did you know, dear senior citizen, that vocabulary and word usage actually improve as you grow older? Though memory isn't as good as it once was, learning ability is very slightly below its peak in life at age 60. There is a whole generation of old people learning new things all the time.

This goes for both physical and mental prowess. With professional instruction, 60 to 70 - year - olds have learned golf, floating, elementary swimming, and have become more than proficient at yoga. At 80 the go-ahead grandmother learns to type and even gets a new job.

Perhaps the 60 - year - old does take a little longer to catch on, and perhaps at 70 we don't run when we are trying to catch a bus, but what's all the rush? With adequate rest, that last quarter century can be a delightful bonus.

• • •

Dear Doris: My husband had a lonely childhood. At the same time his dad was a preacher and they were often surrounded by people. He still doesn't seem happy unless there is someone around all the time.

Either someone has to be here or we have to be some place else. He enjoys fixing things for other people like radios.

I like having people around sometimes but not constantly. I believe we are a family and should be able to enjoy one another by ourselves. — Charity Begins At Home.

Dear Charity: Apparently your husband's loneliness as a little boy made him overbalanced in the direction of people. Now if we could just get him to level off . . . !

Since he seems to be taking you all for granted, I'd suggest the development of a family hobby. This might be something that you could all work on, like clay modeling, furniture building or painting. It could be popping popcorn or pulling taffy.

Or it might take the form of a new family game, with a game board like hockey or croquinole or the gradual building up of a toy electric railroad. This last one would make use of your husband's interest in electronics and might be a winner.

• • •

Confidential to Not Half Dead: In spite of your physical troubles, you are my idea of a fully alive person. There is bound to be a niche where you can still give love from that understanding and warm heart of yours.

Age brings limitations — but a chat with your doctor or clergyman may well open the way to you. As Tenneson says, "Old age hath yet his honor and his toil."

• • •

Confidential to Desperate and In Love: Even when he's in love, a fellow likes to be the aggressor. Don't be in a hurry to blurt out your devotion. Let him be the one to mention the word "love" first.

Six years is a big gap in your ages, and this matters terribly!

Church Groups

MARYSVILLE CWL

Marysville CWL held its first meeting of the year after Mass Sunday, Feb. 15 and it was well attended. After the usual business, thank-you notes were read from the many parishoners who were remembered at Christmas.

It was decided to send $25 to the recreation committee to assist them in their work. The council voted to send $25 to the Organization for Development of Peace and members were asked to give individual donations of 1 per cent of their yearly personal allowance to the same cause.

The president Mrs. Don McLaren announced that at the next meeting the members will all have an opportunity to hear Michael Mahoney of the Drug Addiction Centre, Ontario Hospital, Kingston speak about the use of drugs. The meeting will be March 9.

A resolution against the legalization of the sale of marijuana will be sent to the diocesan executive from the council before the last of February. Members were also urged to write their objections to the local member of Parliament.

In the future individuals will be responsible for sending in their subscriptions to the Register. The CWL will not be canvassing as in the past.

It was decided that the president inquire about an orchestra for dances during April and May. The euchre parties will continue to be held in the hall every second Sunday evening. The next one will be held Feb. 22. The next dance will be held March 20.

Members were asked to take home remnants to make articles for the fall bazaar, after which the meeting was adjourned.

Ann Landers

One Partially Blind Suffers from Complex

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you are not a miracle worker, but I have read your column for years. If anyone can help me, you can.

ANN LANDERS

I was born with 20 per cent vision. I'm sorry I wasn't born completely blind. Life would be easier. I wear thick glasses which are ugly. I can imagine how I look to people who see me through these hideous things. They magnify my eyes and I must look like a freak.

No one realizes how bad my sight is until I walk into a wall or drop something and can't pick it up without some awkward movements. I have very few friends because people don't want to be around anyone who is so clumsy. I've had a few dates but the boys don't call back. I'm very lonely and have nothing to live for.

Please forgive the writing. It's the best I can do. Help me if you can. — UNHAPPY FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND: Your problem isn't your eyes — it's your rock-bottom opinion of yourself. Millions of blind persons would give anything to have 20 per cent vision. The fact you'd rather be completely sightless suggests that you would welcome an excuse to cop out.

There are many organizations for blind and partially blind people. Write to the Chicago Lighthouse for the Blind and learn what you can do to help yourself. The address is: 1580 West Roosevelt Road, Chicago, Illinois.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What can be done about my sister, Sarah, who is driving everyone in this house crazy? I am 15. Sarah is 17.

She quit her after-school job two months ago because her grades were so bad. Now she thinks she should be excused from all housework so she can study. Sarah practically lives in the bathroom. I can't figure out what she does in there for two hours at a time.

Every night it's the same routine. Mom calls Sarah to dinner five times. She always answers, "I'll be right down." Finally Mom has to go get her. When Her Royal Highness designs to honor us with her presence, she has a long face and is mad at the world.

I usually end up doing her work and my Mom apologizes for her laziness. I'd like to give that spoiled brat a good hard slap and take my punishment. Any suggestions on how to improve this situation? — FRUSTRATED.

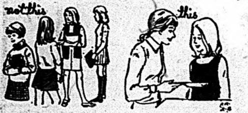
DEAR FRUSS: Slapping Her Majesty won't help. My advice is to keep doing your work — and hers, if necessary. Be thankful you are you and not your sister. The girl is destined to be an unhappy, unproductive person unless she gets some counseling.

* * *

Confidential to WAITING TO HEAR YOU STATE YOUR POSITION: I have stated it. Repeatedly. You must be a new reader. I am against, repeat, against the legalization of marijuana. I believe the laws for possession (not selling) are unrealistic and too harsh. But in my opinion, the legalization of marijuana would be a tragic mistake.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Jean: "My mother insists on cooking hot oatmeal or poached eggs for breakfast. I hate that kind of food, so I just skip breakfast."

Jane: "I like just a cup of coffee. I'm never really hungry in the morning."

Mother: "There's hot cereal on the stove, but I thought you might prefer a hamburger sandwich and an orange this morning."

Jean: "That sounds good. I'll fix the hamburger."

The teen-age girl is the worst-fed member of the family, surveys show. Her lack of interest in breakfast may be a silent protest against parental routine, psychiatrists say. Perhaps a little relaxation about what she should eat may help bring back her appetite and her enjoyment of breakfast.

Psychiatrist Favors New Deal for Women

HAMILTON, New Zealand (CP) — Women are the exploited proletariat, the serf of present-day society, says Dr. D. M. F. McDonald, a leading New Zealand psychiatrist.

Superintendent of the Kingseat Psychiatric Hospital, Dr. McDonald is becoming known as the most provocative and outspoken advocate of a new deal for New Zealand women.

Here are some of his pronouncements from a recent address:

Pressure on women to be married is all wrong. Lots of women should not be married.

The bearing of children is often regarded as a duty. It is not a duty. It's a luxury and a wonderful one.

Some women are just not emotionally suited to be mothers, although they can do many other creative things.

ing to give and accept love in are usually remarkably inept at communication, and unwilling to give nd acept love in friendliness and understanding.

Marriage is supposed to begin with a noble rosy glow and it often ends in a mess.

Marriage is 90 per cent hard work and 10 per cent sexual satisfaction and love. The reverse is the usual idea circulated.

Too many women are used for breeding or as a husband's possession.

Some women are overwhelmingly oppressed by their husbands. There is frequent tyranny, psychological and physical, from a totalitarian dictatorship of the family, in which the woman is the exploited proletariat. Indeed, she is the serf of society.

Doctor Says Advantages of Pill Do Outweigh the Disadvantages

EDMONTON (CP) — In these days when the pill is under scrutiny and criticism, it has found a friend at the University of Alberta.

Michael Ball, director of student health services at University of Alberta, says the advantages of the birth-control pill far outweigh any disadvantages.

He told the Graduate Students' Wives Club:

"There would appear to be a slightly increased chance of certain types of thrombosis in pill users, but it must be realized no woman is entirely free from the risk of thrombosis even if she doesn't take the pill."

He said that during pregnancy the chance of thrombosis increases and since the pill prevents pregnancy more effectively than any other birth-control method, it must be considered the best birth-control method yet discovered.

Dr. Ball said that when a drug is prescribed as widely as the pill, people are always on the lookout for hazards.

When a hazard was discovered a doctor had to equate the benefits against the disadvantages. In the case of the pill, "the hazards are very small indeed and the benefits considerable."

Equity Is Their Ideal

Robert Craig, (front centre), Belleville-area director of new provincial assessment department is confident new scheme will put equity in property-tax valuations. So are the district commissioners on his team spread across eight counties, (clock wise), Tom Ryder (Frontenac-Lennox and Addington), Victor Hewson, (Haliburton - Victoria), Leighton Thompson (Prince Edward-Hastings), Wally Parnell (Northumberland-Durham). They met with press in Belleville yesterday.

Assessors Begin New Approach; Even Snowmobiles Have Impact

The snowmobile — symbol of a new winter way of life now sported by thousands of Quinte residents — some day may show up in property values.

But that's only one of the minor concerns — for now — of the district's task force of provincial government commissioners charged with overhauling local assessment systems by 1975.

The dimensions of the task are shown by statistics in a region centring on Belleville, a district administration centre in the provincial network which now replaces municipal assessment jurisdictions.

The Belleville district spans a clutch of counties — from Frontenac east to Northumberland - Durham and north to Victoria.

Area assessment director Robert Craig yesterday estimated the district is divided into 135 different municipalities with a total 229,000 properties needing re-assessment.

When it's all over — by 1975 — the district will have contributed its share to the Queen's Park ideal of equitable property assessment.

Equity is the key word in the provincial project, he told reporters during a press conference at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, which outlined basic details of the program.

Supporting his explanations were the four district commissioners charged directly with the task of placing local assessments on market values: Edward - Hastings), Thomas Ryder (Frontenac-Lennox and (Northumberland - Durham) and Victor Hewson (Haliburton - Victoria).

Both individual property owners and local government will benefit from the equity of the new assessment scheme, the officials emphasized.

The single, province - wide unit of market valu replaces traditional municipal appraisals based on "hypothetical values" said Mr. Craig.

For the individual property owner this ofetn resulted in disparity — some were over-assessed, some under-assessed.

The new system now will clearly indicate the equity of property assessment.

"With market-value assessment the property owner will have a chance to judge the fairness of his assessment," said Mr. Craig.

The fact that each assessment is "subject to realistic checking" also will "keep assessors on their toes," he said. "It will ensure a high level of professionalism."

The new system also will provide a more equitable system for distribution of provincial grants to municipalities, he said.

"It'll be reflected in the grant structure," agreed Mr. Thompson. "Grants will find their way to needed locations."

"The people who live in the middle of Hastings are entitled to the same system as everyone else," he added.

Re-evaluation will not be followed by a "general, sharp in crease" in local taxes, said Mr. Craig.

Any rise in assessment could correspond with lower mill rates.

Neither Mr. Craig or Mr. if the new assessment would stimulate more tax revenue.

"This is a matter for the municipality," said Mr. Craig.

"I don't say there'll be more revenues produced," added Mr. Thompson. "But they will be produced on a more equitable basis."

The officials disagreed that the provincial system would be costlier than former local.

The cost would be equitably shared on a province-wide basis.

However, he acknowledged that some larger centres — including Belleville — already were well along with revaluation programs before the provincial government introduced its own scheme.

"Probably, if all municipalities had been doing as good a job . . . this whole change might not have been necessary. Unfortunately this was not so," said Mr. Craig.

"There was very little reassessment being done in the province," added Mr. Hewson.

Said Mr. Thompson: "I think people generally are demanding equity — and I think they'll be satisfied with it (reassessment) when it's finished."

And the snowmobile?

Both Mr. Thompson and Mr. Craig agreed the new sport could have an impact on property values as more summer cottages are winterized improved and virtually become all-year weekend residences.

Such improvements doubtless will increase market prices and the cottages will be assessed "on the basis of this market value," said Mr. Thompson.

If value increases are revealed by sales this "will be a factor in assessment," added Mr. Craig.

"Time will tell," he said. "We'll be studying this market. We'll see what happens."

New Administrator

Lupton Joins Hospital

TRENTON — Albert Ward, chairman of Trenton Memorial Hospital's board of directors, announced Tuesday that John A. Lupton — the hospital's newly appointed administrator — will arrive in Trenton this week and assume his official duties at the hospital March 2.

JOHN LUPTON

The December hiring of Mr. Lupton — a fully qualified hospital administrator — was a step taken by the board to ease strained relations with the town's doctors.

The move had been urged by the doctors and recommended by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission in a June report on the dispute between the board and the doctors.

Mrs. Clara M. Lowe, who has been acting administrator since the retirement of Miss Hazel F. Naudett in December 1968, will resume her former position as assistant administrator when Mr. Lupton commences his duties.

A native of England, the 39-year-old Mr. Lupton served his period of administrative training at four hospitals in his native land.

He also spent four years in administration at King's College Hospital, London, England, and during this time he lectured in hospital administration at the London County Council Technical College.

Since 1965, Mr. Lupton served as administrator of both the Allan Memorial Institute of Psychiatry and the Women's Pavilion — both sections of the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal.

The holder of degrees in hospital administration and Fellow, Hospital Administration; he is married and is the father of two young boys.

Outdoor Weekend

Bancroft Promotes Major Carnival

Bancroft's first winter carnival promises to be the most elaborate held this year in the Quinte area. A 12-page tabloid outlines sporting events, competitions and entertainment for all ages during the March 6 - 8 weekend. The program is being co-ordinated by the Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce. Prizes for the many competition winners will be awarded on Sunday afternoon.

Friday, March 6 will feature an ice fishing derby, junior girls' broomball, boys' novice hockey, a night owl snowmobile tour and exhibition hockey. At the opening ceremonies in the evening, with fanfare and a color parade, an official welcome will be extended by Reeve Jack N. Brown, followed by the introduction of James Auld, minister of tourism and industry. Lee Grills, MP will deliver the message from Ottawa. Clarke Rollins, resident and businessman from Bancroft, and member of the Legislative Assembly will bring greetings from Queen's Park.

Teenagers will be able to round out the evening with a high school fun night to include skating, tobogganing and a slack dance. It will be guest night at the Legion Hall where friends and visitors are invited to "drop in."

Before watching bantam league hockey or joining the snowmobile guided tour on Saturday morning, there will be a warm welcome at the Legion Hall where the Ladies' Auxiliary will be serving "country style" breakfast.

There will be a hovercraft demonstration downtown on the York River in the forenoon. Afternoon features will include broomball competitions, snowmobile races, horse-drawn sleigh rides and a parachuting display. The evening will be well rounded out with curling, skating and carnival dances for both teenagers and 'oldsters'.

Snow sculptures' will be judged on Sunday by the North Hastings Arts Council. A winter fly-in will be sponsored by the Bancroft Flying Club while a cross country snowmobile race is in progress. Visitors are invited to find a pair of snowshoes in someone's attic and join the snowshoe championship race.

Rock hound guides from Bancroft's outstanding mineral club will be along on tours of several mineral deposits including the Silver Crater Mine.

The Peterborough Figure Skating Follies promise good entertainment on Sunday afternoon. And for spectators who enjoy an element of danger, stock car races on ice will be held at Siddon Lake, three miles south of Bancroft.

Crowning of the Carnival Queen should be an event that will appeal to all carnival goers. Not a beauty contest, it can be won by any one over 16. Prizes for all competitive events will be presented by the Carnival Queen.

The carnival brochure invites snowmobile enthusiasts to participate in "their greatest weekend of the winter". Held out as an inducement for hungry outdoors enthusiasts are the variety of home style meals being served by women's organizations. The whole program is being generously supported by Bancroft businessmen and service clubs.

An information office at D. Griffin's office on Hastings Street will have Chamber of Commerce members on duty to assist everyone regarding events, local services, food and accommodation.

Society Position Clarified

TRENTON — Mrs. Shirley Morin, volunteer secretary of the Ontario Humane Society's Quinte branch, said today her letter to Trenton councillors expressed her views as a local taxpayer of nine years.

She stressed she received no salary in her position with the OHS and was not speaking on behalf of the society. She had been identified in error in an earlier story as an animal control officer.

Monday night, Trenton council agreed to review a request by the OHS Quinte branch that the town retain society's animal-control services.

Two weeks earlier council had agreed to hire a Stirling man, Donald Tucker, as animal - control officer, estimating a saving of $5,000.

"The Quinte branch of the OHS has been quite successful in the past in finding homes for unclaimed animals," Mrs. Morin said today.

"The unclaimed animals which the OHS is unable to place in homes are humanely destroyed."

"In the period Nov. 1968 to Oct. 1969 the Quinte branch impounded 122 dogs from Trenton. Of these 32 were claimed, 68 were placed in new homes and 13 were humanely destroyed," said Mrs. Morin.

Veterinary treatment of injured animals and home placements were cited by Mrs. Morin as other services offered.

"I feel that with our three (animal-control) wardens and two trucks, we're more capable of servicing Trenton than is a man who works and services an extensive area."

"We want Trenton, not only because of the economic necessity for financial survival, but because we want to see the job properly done in Trenton." she said.

Penguins Thawing, Only Point Out of West's Second Spot

Pittsburgh Penguins won't be satisfied with just their first playoff berth since joining the National Hockey League.

A run at the West Division title appears also to be a part of their plans after a 4-2 win over Philadelphia Tuesday night that moved the Penguins to within one point of the second-place Flyers.

The Penguins, with six wins, a tie and three losses in their last 10 games, could become the nearest challengers to the pace-setting St. Louis Blues by the end of the week.

Pittsburgh goes against Los Angeles Kings Thursday and Oakland Seals Saturday while the Flyers meet tougher competition against New York Rangers tonight and Montreal Canadiens Saturday.

Meanwhile, Oakland stayed five points behind Pittsburgh by holding Boston Bruins to a 3-3 tie in the only other game Tuesday night.

In other games tonight, Montreal Canadiens play the Maple Leafs in Toronto, Boston visits Los Angeles, Detroit Red Wings meet Minnesota North Stars at Minneapolis and Chicago Black Hawks take on the Blues in St. Louis.

Pittsburgh, fifth-place finishers in the two seasons since joining the league in the 1967 expansion, put on an impressive display of two-way hockey Tuesday.

The Penguins had 40 shots on Philadelphia goalie Bernie Parent while limiting the Flyers to only 19 at Al Smith.

Defenceman Bryan Watson scored his first season goal in the opening period and helped set up Glen Sather early in the second session to start the Penguins. Bob Blackburn and Dean Prentice rounded out the Pittsburgh scoring.

Terry Ball and Simon Nolet tallied for the Flyers before a Pittsburgh crowd of 7,494. The second-place Flyers remain 11 points behind leading St. Louis in the West Division standings.

A crowd of 9,830 fans at Oakland, largest of the season, saw the Seals take a 3-2 lead over the Bruins on a goal by Doug Roberts at the 6:25 mark of the third period.

But Johnny McKenzie's goal 27 seconds later pulled the Bruins even and extended their unbeaten string against West Division clubs to 26 games.

Johnny Bucyk and Garnet Bailey got the other goals for Boston with Gary Jarrett and Ted Hampson scoring for the Seals.

Boston defenceman Bobby Orr earned an assist on Bucyk's goal to push his league-leading points total to 86, 13 ahead of team-mate Phil Esposito.

The tie put Boston one point behind leading New York in the East Division and four points ahead of Montreal.

McLain Said Bookie in '67

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn mulled over the latest developments in the case of Denny McLain today while the Detroit Tiger pitcher's whereabouts remained a mystery.

Kuhn's disclosure last Friday that his office was examining certain of McLain's "off the field activities," during the 1967 season was followed today by the publication in Sports Illustrated magazine of a copyrighted story which said McLain was a partner in a bookmaking operation during that season.

McLain dropped out of sight following Kuhn's statement Friday and missed a scheduled court appearance Monday over his alleged failure to repay a $7,000 loan received in 1968 from the Citizen's Commercial and Savings Bank of Flint, Mich.

William R. Aikens, the pitcher's lawyer, left Detroit for New York Tuesday night with Kuhn reported to be preparing a statement for release today.

But a spokesman for the commissioner denied that any statement would be forthcoming today.

Sports Illustrated, in its copyrighted article, charged that McLain had put money into a bookmaking operation headed by one Jigs Gazell, who operated out of the Shorthorn Steak House in Flint, Mich.

Gazell said Tuesday night that he knew McLain casually while the pitcher was playing the organ at the Flint steak house.

"I said stuff like, 'Hello. How are you? How many games are you going to win?'" Gazell said. "Stuff like that. Everybody asked stuff like that. Everybody that came in the Shorthorn met him there."

Gazell denied being a big-time bookmaker.

"I played poker," he said. "Stuff like that, hanging out in gambling joints, but that's it. It didn't have anything to do with McLain."

In Washington, the justice department did not comment on Sports Illustrated's story.
